That's why OBP is such a great place to come back to, and the following returned last week: Joe and Ada Wisser; Leslie Zimmerman; Ethel Wilmott; Nettie Danner; Ken and Mildred Smith; Manual and Ana Torres; Bea Tourville; Bernie Taylor; Bill and Shirley Browning.

Karl Wolff; Ken and Bea Beyer; Ethel Lowe; Dorothy Snyder; Fred and Lenora Vilarn; Gertrude Wickes; Dick and Julia Awmiller; raleigh and Minnie Throgmartin; Harry and Jeannie Jewsberry; Gen Garn. This makes a recorded total of 102 so far this season.

Who's "Herb Dishman was facetiously asked when the "Best Fishing Is Here" article was first observed, but as soon as the story was read, it became evident that it was our old friend "Oscar" and it was only a 'slip of the type', that brought a 'Herb' into the picture.

There was another humdrum 'run-off' election last week and 81 OBPers did bother to vote at Precinct 14, as follows: Gunter 13, Stone 13; Frey 21, Hawkins 32; Navitsky 34, Watts 17. And the amendments: No. 1, yes 20, no 30; No. 2, yes 22, no 27; No. 3, yes 23, no 24; No. 4, yes 28, no 25; and No. 5, yes 28, no 19. OBPer's vote was similar to the rest of the area, except for the amendments; here, the OBPers gave the first three a good 'no' vote, whereas the rest of the area gave those three a huge 'yes' vote. Looks like the Older Americans are more conservative, or confused by the 'legalese' of the questions.

Newcomers are a bit astounded by the nonchalance of the ol' timers when the creepy-crawlies are underfoot. They say 'ugh' when a pretty little lizard scampers over their sandles and "EEEEE" when a huge black cockroach scoots off the paper bag they just picked up. It's all in getting used to them.

The pretty little lizards should be treasured as they are the best lil' insect eaters around and those big black nuisances can be stepped on, sprayed on, trapped; just ask any ol' timer, they'll be glad to let you in on their 'sure kill' method. Soon they will be forgotten as the beautiful bright Florida sunshine and balmy breezes right off the Indian River make all else trivial.

PARK EVENTS

GAME NIGHT with its number calling, will have to be postponed for a while longer, watch the bulletin boards and listen to the speaker system for starting date. The resurfacing of the clubhouse floor was much more of a job than first anticipated. It looked like only two or three boards would have to be replaced, then it was two or three more, until now it looks as though more than half the floor has been renewed. Anyway, it will make for some mighty smooth dancing next winter.

CAMERA CLUB officers are working on slide programs for next season according to President Fran Gum, and she has quite a few shows tentatively lined up. However, to firm up a good program for the season she is going to have a meeting of the Executive Board: Fran Gum; Freda Peterkin; Nina Zigelhofer; Ed Pettit; Sparky Garside; Dot Beck and Ernie Curwen, before Nov. 1. All members with slides to show get in touch with Fran.

SHUFFLERS are increasing in number and skill as there are now generally two or three courts busy in the morning and three or four in the evening.

Team lists are posted and three names have been added to the Buckaroo: Jim Gum; Bob Wilson; and Ken Smith. Bea Tourville is back and says she'll have her 'Petticoaters' ready to go anytime the Buckaroos think they are good enough, or words to that effect. Anyway, they will be ready to start the season on or before the first of November.

Evinrude gift is appreciated

The generous gift by Ralph Evinrude that makes early completion of 'Log Cabin Senior Center' possible was a 'good news' item for the seniors to talk about and the gift was sure appreciated. However, the Nov. 15 completion date raised a few eyebrows; as way back in July 1979, they were assured it would be ready by Jan. 1980. Why these far-fetched promises, the seniors asked (completion looks months away), it leaves a bad impression, so other statements are judged accordingly.

The discussion of far-fetched promises led right into talk on presidential election, with most seniors saying: it's "none of the above" for them, as none have shown any interest in the awful double digit inflation problem confronting the retirees. Even when they came to Florida the best they would do was to say they wouldn't cut Social Security. At least, lamented the 1960 seniors, they are not going to take away our 'old age survivors insurance' that we worked and paid for all our lives.

Then the discussion swung around to how come the seniors are getting so little attention from the 'Big-5', when their 27 million members top all other minority groups; Blacks, Spanish American, Union Members, who get special recognition, wherever candidates stop. However, they admitted, it was their own fault, as seniors are great talkers, but 'doing' is something else again. Some took National AARP 'to task' for not exerting their 13 million member 'clout,' as the half-million union-oriented National Council of Senior Citizens gets more media attention.

Something may be stirring along these lines, as the four local AARP chapters: Martin County; Port St. Lucie; Ft. Pierce and Vero Beach, are talking about a multi-group legislative committee, that will keep the elected officials informed about the problems of the 'Older Americans.'

They should know that retirees compose 40 percent of the population and they are 100 percent voting age with the highest voter turn-out of all age groups. Seniors could have an effective 'clout,' couldn't they?

Seniors may soon have other groups join them in their fight against double digit inflation, as this was overheard last week. A variety store manager asked his assistant what to do about the big drop in sales. The Ass't. said they'd have to get folks into their store before they went into next door SuperMart, as now the shoppers didn't have enough left over for much else and were too depressed and discouraged to buy anything not absolutely necessary. Well, the 1960 retirees have been in that 'bind' for years and hope these newcomers will add their plea for drastic action now and not when politically convenient.

CHAPTER ACTIVITIES

FIRST EXCOM-BOARD meeting of the season was held Thur. Oct. 9, 1:30 p.m. at the Roschman Site of Indian River College with 15 officers and directors attending. John Vance, president moved the meeting along in good order, taking care of the following.

Plans for Oct. meeting with a short memorial service for 'CMac' were firmed-up; and it was decided to have a speaker for the Nov. meeting, and a Christmas party, along with installation of officials for December. The idea of combining efforts with Port St. Lucie, Ft. Pierce and Vero Beach for greater 'clout' at state and local level was discussed and Pres. John Vance is to investigate.

COMMITTEES reported that they were getting projects underway and the 'Call Girl' (tel. reassurance calling) chairman made a plea for more 'gals' willing to spend a few hours each month, making some phone calls. This is very worthwhile and rewarding work with many frail, shut-ins saying they look forward to and appreciated these friendly calls, that seem to brighten their day. To be a good 'Call Girl' contact Lucy Prohaska, 334-0906.

THE LEGISLATIVE QUESTIONS mentioned last week will be listed, as many seniors asked. The NRTA-AARP Leg. Com. wants to know what five of the following, the members are most interested in: a) Utility rate relief; b) No change in Generic Drug law; c) Circuit Breaker Tax relief; d) Uniform Probate laws; 3) Housing for elderly; f) Transportation for seniors; g) More Senior Centers; h) Time allowed for Mobile Park-Condo conversion; 8) 'COLA' for state retirees; j) Stronger 'Certification-of-Need' for health care providers; k) Better elderly protection against crime; l) Expanded health coverage; m) Health cost containment; n) Discount for Defensive Driving; o) Improve hospice bill; p) Expand homemaker and home health aid service. Some members chose: "m", "e", "p", "g", "n", in that order, how does it compare with your choice?

Freedoms dear to risk

(Roger W. Williams is the president of the Newspaper Association Managers, Inc., and Executive Director of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers Association.)

This newspaper makes mistakes. No matter what the circulation, the frequency of publication or the number of pages which are produced each week, your local newspaper is published by people who are not infallible. Because they are human and because of the hundreds of thousands of words that are processed each day or each week (there are bound to be errors in some stories.

News people sometimes become callous and forget the sensitivity of the reader who has been wronged. And the reader often times over-reacts to small inconsistencies in stories or perhaps reads into the story things that are not really there. In either case, the solution is usually a heart-to-heart talk with the reporter, the editor or the publisher.

You should feel, as a newspaper reader, every night – no, every responsibility – to contact this newspaper when ever you feel errors have occured. Sometimes a phone call will suffice to straighten out the problem. Sometimes a personal meeting is more in order. But in any case, newspapers invite constructive comments and do strive to be as accurate, and truthful as possible.

Without the understanding and cooperation of the public, the First Amendment, upon which press freedom is built, is in serious jeopardy. Some people feel reporters should be licensed. They argue that if a reporter then steps out of line his license could be revoked as is the case with doctors, lawyers and other professionals. But who is to do the licensing? Licensing brings with it many dangers of censorship through pressures from licensing boards, government, etc.

No, with all of our faults, the freedoms which are expressed through this newspaper are too dear to risk. The very foundation upon which our democracy operates is built upon a free and unfettered press. The right to criticize – even if we are sometimes in error – is one of the main factors in America remaining a free country for its citizens.

But the press is impotent without the support of the people. We need your understanding, your support, your cooperation and – most of all – your help in assuring your friends and neighbors that the next issue of this newspaper will be as free from censorship as this one.

How can they unite?

The overwhelming victory of Paula Hawkins over Lou Frey in the Republican primary election presents a dilemma for the Martin County Republican Executive Committee. How is it possible for the GOP in Martin to unite after several of the top county officials of the party endorsed the losing candidate?

When the move was made, The Mirror called the action divisive, even though the officers of the county committee said their action in supporting Frey was as "individuals," not as party officials. The Mirror also asked that those officials resign.

The move was divisive, and the officials did not resign.

The party within the county is still split. The wounds opened by the partisan action have not healed.

Failure to unite the party could lead to disasterous consequences in the upcoming general election, both on the state level and the local races.

To the victor belongs the spoils. Those who precipitated the action should step down in the cause of party unity, and let either a non-committed delegate or a pro-Hawkins delegate bring the Republican organization back together.

Bus drivers need check

Just as an automobile needs a checkup, so, too, does the men and women who drive the school buses in Martin County.

The school administration has promptly answered the need for such a checkup by suspending three drivers when it was found that they were driving with suspended licenses, and following that with the suspension of the bus driver supervisor, Willie Smith, when it was learned that he, too, had a suspended license.

The action caused a walkout of the bus drivers, who protested the suspension of Smith.

The fact that the drivers and the supervisor were operating county school vehicles illegally seemed to make no difference to the drivers. The fact that the disruption of the bus schedules, and the attendant discomfort to parents and students was massive, also didn't make a difference to the bus drivers.

If is possible that something so important, the transportation of children to school, has become a bureaucratic feudal kingdom to Smith, with the supervisor running it as he sees fit. As long as there weren't too many complaints, it seems, Smith was allowed his fiefdom.

The fact that several of Smith's relatives serve on the school bus payroll smacks of nepotism.

New communications guidelines are needed from the school administration, to maintain the integrity of the transportation department and to insure that the transportation department is run properly in the interests of safe transportation of school children.

The standards of licensed drivers and their health requirements are already set down. Those standards should be followed to the letter.

A theatre grows

With only a faint brush of time, it seems the Treasure Coast is fast becoming the center of theatrian activity. Turn the pages of any paper and you'll find something entertaining or cultural to lure you out of an evening.

Some years back, the excuse for no shows as no showcase. The only two places anything to be found around were at the Delaware Avenue School in Fort Pierce or at the Barn Theatre in Stuart. Or, if you wanted to drive to Vero, the old school house provided drafty and far-from-accoustical sounds for its plays.

First to enliven the theatre was the Riverside in Vero, an fine a little theatre to be found around these parts. It set a precedent of excellent in comfort and stagability, making the trip up the few miles of roadway an easy one, and the ball of fare well worth the traveling.

Then, oh grandest of all, came the new auditorium at Fort Pierce. This combination theatre-banquet hall and general showcase for all types of activities, from concerts to be-quests to exhibitions is the type of structure needed and desired by every community.

New Indian River Community College has filled the ball with a theatre the size needed for performances of average dimensions. Friday night at last by virgin voyage with the season's kick-off for the Fort Pierce Little Theatre, and the production was a winner in every way. The accoustics are good, the seating well-placed, and the lighting excellent.

In past years, FPLC has opened its Kohlegard Room to use for the plays, and the facility has been adequate, with moveable chairs to accomodate the audience and a portable stage which was an Oscar for one of its members. But the need for an adequate theatre had became increasingly obvious over the years.

This new unit has everything needed as a showcase for a good production–good lighting, adequate seating, good accoustics.

Plus a veteran troup of actors, most of whom have been showing their mettle for ten years. These have been the workers and financial backers who have brought SLCT to the calibre of reputation it has so rightfully earned.

It all began a decade ago when two young people, Fritz and Cindy Ferrara walked into the News Tribune Office.

"We want to start a theatre," Ferrara said.

Well, I thought I, doesn't everyone?

Optimistically, we ran the announcement about a meeting to be held upstairs in a dimly-lit hall. A handful turned out for the meet, but they were the right handful, including Wilma Cowles whose determination to start a little theatre had shown through for years.

That group grew into a determined and dedicated bunch of people who loved to work at acting. Soon the first play was being scheduled and programmed at the Woman's Club Building. The actors were in love with their avocation, and the public fell in love with them.

The pleasant part is that they had the backing of the financial community. Through financial drive, enough money has been raised to begin their own building, already rising on the banks of the Indian River. As a result, in a year or so, SLCT will have its own home which will add to the reputation of the Indian River as the cultural center of Indianriverland.

New business generation

After the recent meeting of downtown Jensen Beach businessmen, I reflected on the years that have passed, and what we have done to create a business climate for our town, on this 19th anniversary of The Mirror.

More and more thought revealed that there is a completely new business community down there, with only four out of 26 businesses there have have been in the same ownership for the past twenty years, and only five that have been there more than ten years.

Perhaps that is why the businessmen really didn't have that much knowledge of the past promotional efforts of the downtown area.

When The Mirror was founded 19 years ago, the only business on the street was Bryan's Drug, Tilton Real Estate, Mil's Glamour Nook, H.C. Andersen's jewelry store, the Jensen 5&10, Quase's Market, Virgil's Barber Shop, the Jensen sandwich shop and an office for Dr. Richard Penick, who had just come to town. The post office was in the two-story building by the railroad track, and there was Meryl's Gulf station, and Tilton Construction.

Of those, only the post office, in a new building, Tilton, in a new building, Bryan's, in a remodeled Quinn's building, Virgil's, in a new building, and the Chamber of Commerce, in a new building, remain.

Those were the days when the Chamber was having the polynesian festivals on the Jensen Causeway, with sailboat races, and people dressing in polynesian outfits for the tourists. The Jensen Lions were selling light bulbs for their "Save Sight" campaign.

"Your Bowling Lanes" had just opened. Ocean Breeze Park was named Precinct 14. A new lifeguard chair was purchased for Jensen's public beach by the county commissioners.

The Langford Park Association was having bake sales to raise money for a playground, and shufflers were raising money to build five shuffleboard courts at the park.

The Jensen Elementary School PTA started the year with a treasury balance of 67 cents, and started planning the Halloween carnival.

Tom Acres in Port St. Lucie sold for $950, and a Indian Riverfront home on a lot 120 by 230 feet sold for $13,800.

"Long Gus" was plucking them in on Saturday nights at Seymour's Inn, and Poor Bob's was advertising a nine inch pizza for a buck.

The "Garden of Eden," a landmark home, was destroyed in a fire.

The first issue of The Mirror was 12 pages in a tabloid format. The type was set by an Olympia portable typewriter, and the 500 issues were printed by "offset," some new kind of printing method that was starting to become popular.

We had a lot of fun in those days, and had just completed the ski jump that was being installed in the Indian River so that our water skiers could put on shows for our festivals.

It was in that fall of 1961 that I wrote, "The growth of the Jensen Beach area, and the multitude of problems arising from that growth – the increase in our population, and the resultant building activity to house our citizens – new business coming into the community and the activity of our businessmen – all these are reasons why the Jensen Beach Mirror was formed."

It seems that the above is still with us, and is the reason The Mirror has continued through the years.

We have the same problems with growth, population, and business now as then, just on a larger scale.

The old wooden bridge that crossed the Indian River has been replaced with a modern bridge and the Jensen Causeway Indian River Drive is still two lanes, as is Commercial Street.

Back then, only two businesses were west of the FEC railroad tracks. Alma's fabric shop, and Chuck's Standard. Now there are many shopping centers and many businesses.

The downtown has continued, has grown, and still faces the promotional problems that we had back in 1961.

I am certain that the downtown merchants will rise to the occasion, and do the promoting they need to bring in more business, and dress up their business community to attract the people, just as we have done through each generation of merchants along the street.

And, just as it has done for the past 19 years, The Mirror will report on the activity to help those merchants.

Beware the generator light

How's your generator light these days? Seen anything of it? There's an epidemic going around of dashboard lights lighting up to read "generator" when they ought to read "tilt."

It was only two weeks ago that Dick Campbell's gaseuzler looked on him with a bloodshot "generator" eye and he took it over to David's service station to learn the problem was a burned-out fuse in its radio antenna control. Give the car credit. Not having an alarm to give for "blown fuse in the radio antenna," at least it knows how to get his attention.

Well, it must be catching and I parked too close to his car and mine came down with a case of it. But, with complications.

Right off I should admit I am amechanical. I can recognize wheels, fenders and headlights without referring to the owner's manual. I can diagnose a flat tire or a short in the horn, but I usually services I can perform are checking the oil and changing a windshield wiper whatchamacallit.

So the other night as I was driving along the as-yet unrenamed boulevard of Commercial Street, I knew when the idiot light began to glow in the dark it was shining just for me.

Being a mite more knowledgable about self-preservation than auto repairing (with an IQ of stick for remembering to pack a flashlight) I pulled over, turned on the flashers, raised the hood and locked myself securely inside my dead-in-the-ditch Vega.

Yes, I said Vega. I belong to that little band of heroes and heroines that remained loyal to the Vega even after GM threw in the wrench. I am, in fact, one of an even smaller group of uncertifiable mental incompetents that went out and took a second Vega off GM's hands, without any inducement or so much as a thank-you note.

There really was such a thing as a "good little Vega" – born on a Wednesday, no doubt. One that runs well and economically and leaves you with only one worry: you won't get it paid off before it collapses from terminal rust. Me and my Vega are in the last hunt, which I could lose by a month. After which I may mail what's left of it to GMAC in lieu of the last payment.

But getting back to Commercial Street. I had only been worrying for about a minute when a knight in a white pick-up helmet alongside and asked could he help.

In a voice inherited from my Victorian grandmother I replied, "Would you be as good as to call the police for me when you get to a telephone?"

Instead, he peered into whatever is up front that makes the wheels go 'round and told me the motor wasn't overheating, the fanbelt was okay, and that I could safely drive the rest of the way to Jensen Beach. Thank you, whoever you are.

The next morning David understandably predicted the problem was with the alternator. Transplant surgery was called for. But when I went back (during visiting hours) David was filled with glee.

"You tell Dick that when your generator light goes on it's the ignition key warning buzzer fuse that's gone out," HAL strikes again.

It would seem that in today's autos the kneebone is not necessarily connected to the thighbone, as it were.

Unfortunately, David's glee and the new fuse were short-lived. But that's another story. That the problem had anything to do with the alternator. The problem was a disconnected solenoid wire lying against the manifold that had burned through the insulation, etc. And if that doesn't sound probable remember you heard it from me.

But let it be a warning to the rest of you. If the generator light goes on, evacuate. The roof may be collapsing. The radiator can be about to explode. Or the bumpers are falling off. Probably the only system that's functioning just fine is the generator.

The faculty at Jensen Beach Elementary School has been enjoying a great one-liner. Some pupil dropped a note reading, "A male horse has 42 teeth. A female horse has 38."

To which somebody appended the line: "With ERA the female horse will get 42 teeth."

Letter to the editor

To the Editor:

Woodrow Wilson, F.D.R., Harry Truman, L.B.J., all as presidential candidates promised to keep us out of war if elected. L.B.J. called Goldwater a war lover just as Carter is now accusing Reagan of it forecast that if Carter is reelected the final score will read as follows:

Democrat Woodrow Wilson — World War I
Democrat Franklin Roosevelt — World War II
Democrat Harry Truman — Korean War
Democrat Lyndon Johnson — Viet Nam War
Democrat Jimmy Carter — Mid East War

I further envision this next war with its missiles and nuclear armaments will be brought home to us and with the sorry state of our military it won't be long before we will all become comrades in a one world slave society.

To the editor:

On Saturday, October 18, 1980, the Sertoma Club of Martin County will sponsor a Bike-A-Thon. The beneficiary for this charitable event is St. Jude's Children's Hospital.

St. Jude's is a hospital that treats children with any traumatic disease at no charge to the patient or family. In order to offer this service and continued research that will in time help stop the killing of our children by such dread diseases as cancer, many dollars must be raised. Last year Martin County's total contribution was only $157. We can do better.

Trophies will be awarded to the school that 1) has most riders, 2) raises most money. A new bicycle will be given to the rider raising the most money for St. Jude's.

In an attempt to spur interest and also serve a local cause, Sertoma is asking any and all who are interested in bicycles and bikepaths to attend the Bike-A-Thon in a show of support for additional bikepath construction. Of course, we will ASK for a donation to St. Jude's. (A dollar can't hurt anyone too badly!)

Now, if that can't get folks fired up, hear about this? At 11:30 a.m. we will find out when Martin County's position bike champ is (winner gets to make a speech). We sure hope a lot of folks turn out to ride or watch.

For those who can't participate and would like to help, you may send any donations to Sertoma (Bike-A-Thon), PO Box 302, Stuart, Florida 33494.

Hope to see everyone there.

Sincerely,
Tom Kenny, President
Sertoma Club of Martin County

'Harvey' elegantly portrayed

BY SALLY LATHAM

Harvey, the pinkish pookah just happens to be one of my favorite stage characters. He's never on stage, but always the star of the cast. As most of you are aware, Harvey is a six foot rabbit who is the boon companion of a character name of Elwood P. Dowd a bibulous quidrupad full of philosophy and an enormous capacity for spirits vinous. Dowd, played enchantingly by newcomer Jack Morris is a constant source of exasperation to his sister Veta, who considers herself highly uppercrust.

Veta, played by old time pro Bea Stolte couldn't be more perfectly portrayed- using just the right amount of snobbish concern mixed with genuine concern for her brother and his phobia.

The ploy of the play is an attempt to get Elwood committed to the loony bin without his being aware of the act. It takes two of them – Elwood and Harvey to thwart the issue.

Meanwhile, a whole lot of good lines are kicking around to keep the affair light and fluffy.

Special kudos, in addition to those for Jack Morris as Elwood P. Dowd belong to Bea Stolte as Myrtle Mae Simmons, Marie Stewart as Miss Johnson, Jo Davidson as Mrs. Ethel Chauvener and Harvey, played by himself.

Directed by Donald B. Winer, the comedy is ably produced by Jeanne V. Small. The staging is amply elegent for the day, the red-plush era very much in evidence. And the changes of scenery were cleverly packeted with a minimum of confusion.

HOPE FOR HEALTH
Keys to Good Health Naturally

By Dr. Jack L. Webb

Over the past few days, I have had three patients past 65 years of age come in to our clinic for care of arthritic type conditions. One woman in her late seventies said one day: "Maybe it is too late for me to start chiropractic care." I then told her about several patients I have treated through the years in their 80's and 90's. You are never too old to start chiropractic care. The older patient especially needs to have their muscles and joints mobilized by gentle modern chiropractic methods.

Another one of these ladies started off by saying: "I don't think chiropractic can help me. I have so much arthritis." I went on to explain that the arthritic change in a joint could not be reversed, but that by relaxing the muscles and ligaments around a joint, you can greatly reduce the pain and stiffness in an arthritic joint.

The whole point of these two stories is that you are never too old, too young or too incurable for chiropractic care. Chiropractic allows nature's healing forces to work; and nature many times works miracles. The final advantage of chiropractic care is that the worse thing that can happen is nothing. If chiropractic does not help you, it will not hurt you either. There are no side effects worse than the disease; as with other more drastic forms of treatment.

McAlpin theatre debuts with fantasy

BY SALLY LATHAM

Two new stars were born this month, enhancing the area dramatic scene, the largest being the handsome new theatre on the campus of Indian River Community College.

The latter had successful opening night Friday, playing to a more than half full house with the appropriate vehicle "Bell, Book and Candle," an off-beat comedy by John Van Druten.

The new theatre is a stunning piece of architecture located on an advantageous spot needed to complete the campus. Its 700 seat capacity plus the memorial auditorium should meet the needs of the community adequately.

The opening vehicle, geared to the season is a fantasy about life in a nice normal family of werewolves and their problems with everyday life. Jone Carlton as the beautiful Gillian Holroyd is the show-stealer from beginning to end, with Wilma Cowles a cozy runner-up.

Particularly to be praised is Robert Drumm, who makes his first appearance on stage as Shepherd Henderson. To be expected for her perfection is Wilma Cowles, who never gave a bad performance in her life.

The lights and the setting take special touches, and Director Kim Rantz has achieved both with dexterity. In fact, the overall impact of Bell, Book and Candle is just what the director ordered.

Alateen forms to help area young people

Alateen, a fellowship for teenaged sons and daughters of alcoholics, is forming in the Stuart area to hold weekly meetings.

The first meeting will be held at 8:30 p.m. Oct. 24 at the First United Methodist Church, Room 12, 1500 Colorado Ave., Stuart.

Alateen is an anonymous group for 12-to-20-years-olds affected by a drinking problem in the family or with a friend.

The meetings provide the young people with an opportunity to discuss their difficulties and experiences, learn effective ways to cope with the situation, and encourage one another.

Alateen is an outgrowth of Al-Anon, the worldwide fellowship for relatives and friends of alcoholics.

I was lucky enough to be cut in on this dramatic bonanza when Marjorie O'Quinn cadged a ride for me up to Fort Pierce with the Charles Shewards. Margy was aware of my interest in area theatre, and her kindness made my attending the performance possible.

The plot for Bell, Book and Candle is a prosaic one, for all who believe in witches and werewolves. Human falls in love with witch, an impossibility. Love becomes mutual, and everything becomes hopelessly frazzled.

It is good to find new names and faces added to the old guard, especially Kim Ranz, director of the opus. Kim was a theatre manager at Interlochen, and has acted and directed at Grinnell College. She received her degree in Theatre Education from Northwestern. She has studied and taught with the Second City and the Pivan Theatre Workshop in Chicago.

An "old name" on the bill is William Shook, who has been seen in everything up to and including Schroeder in "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown."

A wealth of entertainment is in the wings of IRCC for this area. They include:

"Wake Up Darling," Dec. 11-13.

"The Chalk Garden," Feb. 12, 13, and 14.

"Dear Ruth," April 16, 17, and 18.

Information about tickets is available at the college box office.

St. Lucie No. 2 nuclear plant is 50% complete

FPL's fourth nuclear unit, St. Lucie No. 2, has reached 50 percent completion—a significant milestone in the development of the 802 MW generating station.

"We're on schedule and are still targeting for an operational date of mid-1983, given there are no delays in the issuance of an operating license by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC)", said Bill Derrickson, Project General Manager.

"In fact, getting an operating license to coincide with the unit's operational date is our greatest concern as we look toward project completion," he said. "FPL has filed the necessary reports and applications, and we hope the NRC will heed our pleas for timely consideration for license processing." If a license delay were to keep St. Lucie No. 2 from operating, it would cost as much as $45 million a month in fuel replacement and capital cost recovery, according to Derrickson.

Since construction began in June 1977 over 4.5 million man-hours of manual labor have been consumed. When completed, it is expectd that 14 million man-hours of labor will be associated with the $1.1 billion project.

Currently, some 2,000 workers representing 21 crafts are working at the job site each day. An additional 350 supervisory and support personnel and 150 FPL employees round out the work force. The project's monthly payroll exceeds $6 million, not including FPL employees.

The St. Lucie No. 2 project is the first nuclear generating unit where the Company has acted as its own construction manager (as opposed to contracting a firm to coordinate the construction of the plant). In so doing FPL formed an integrated organization with the contractor--Ebasco Services, Inc.--subcontractors and others that is a model for the industry. As a result, the project team has met virtually every milestone to date and identified and solved problems or potential problems with dispatch, according to Bill Escue, Site Manager.

Major construction activities during the next 60-days include: welding the main piping of the reactor's primary loop, prefabricating the steel dome to the reactor building, completing the reactor's operating floor deck, and laying the 3,000 foot long, 16 foot diameter ocean discharge pipe.

Armand Hammer art at Norton

Puppet show to be in library

All children between the ages of 5 and 11 are invited to come and join in the fun.

DONALD LEA performs one of his many illusions with a number of rings. His experience and ability in the field of magic has taken him to over 25 countries all over the world.

Local magician performs abroad

BY CATHIE MACAULAY

Eleanor Roosevelt once called him the "under the nose magician."

Donald Lea is a man who makes the impossible seem possible. A magician since the age of eight, he has travelled around the world many times over proving to audiences that indeed, the hand is quicker than the eye.

Lea first became interested in the field of illusion at a young age, when he learned to turn wine into water. It was then that the world famous magician Howard Thurston said to him, "Learn to do magic, and you'll never go hungry."

Lea has proved his mentor right. But more importantly, he found that he had fun mystifying people. To that end, Lea has worked diligently over the years.

"Magic is a science," Lea says. He adds that contrary to the public notion that artists merely buy expensive mechanical tricks, he believes the true sign of a professional is the ability to produce magic "anywhere anytime, and with anything."

Lea uses everything from spoons to cigarettes, and makes them all disappear. Where they will return, nobody is certain. It might be in your hand, or behind your ear. But all of it is done right under your nose.

According to Lea, the wizardry is accomplished by "sleight of hand." Wearing a short sleeve shirt, he proves time again, the mastery that results from years of practice. Lea says that all magic happens within a 90 degree radius. The hands must be so quick as to deceive an audience at a close distance. This requires practice each day.

Lea says that some of his creative ideas for new illusions result from his travels. Not only is the diversified background a source of stimulation but others, magicians met along the way help spark new ideas.

"The comraderie among magicians is tremendous," he says. Each learns from the other. But the sharing stops there. Lea says that when people ask him how he does a trick he answers simply, "very well."

Lea share his secrets with his wife, Dorothy. Not only is she a moving force in his private life, but has been billed with him when they've entertained on cruise ships. Lea's respect for his wife is evident, and as she smoothly handles the many animals that board in their home, it is apparent that she is very much an integral part of the team.

In their home in Spanish Lakes, they have parrots, cockateas, doves, three dogs, a rabbit named Buttons, and a ferret. But they're more than animals. They are part of their life.

Living is something that Lea has always enjoyed doing. Although he retired seven times, he just can't seem to put a halt to all that he wants to do.

Donald has accomplished many things throughout his life. After earning his BS and masters degrees, he was a junior high school principal and taught psychology at Kent and Ohio State Colleges. Additionally, he spent years working with the disabled. He was executive director of the Physical Rehabilitation Clinic in Broward County for a number of years when he lived in Ft. Lauderdale.

In addition to entertaining both locally and abroad, Donald has taught sleight of hand and has written several books on the subject. He is the past president of the Society of American Magicians and the Magic Circle of London. Lea has performed in over 25 countries and is preparing to take yet another trip abroad.

One of Donald's magic tricks was to turn a silver half-dollar into a dollar. Oh, if only we knew his secret.

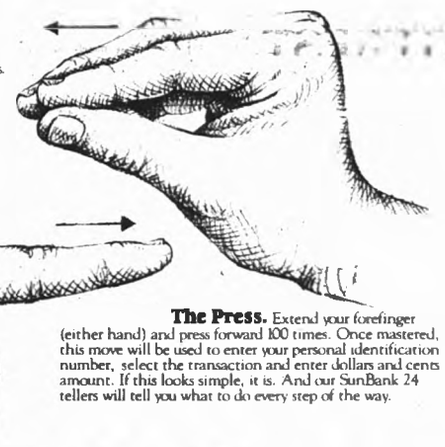
The SunBank 24 Exercise Manual.
A Guide On Getting In Shape To Use Our 24-Hour Tellers.



The Push. Pretend you're holding a Sun Bank card between your thumb and fingers and push forward 50 times. This will get you in shape for inserting your card into any one of the more than 100 SunBank 24 automated tellers across Florida. If you don't have a Sun Bank card we'll give you one free with a checking account. If you don't already bank with us, you're really out of shape.

The Press. Extend your forefinger (either hand) and press forward 100 times. Once mastered, this move will be used to enter your personal identification number, select the transaction and enter dollars and cents amount. If this looks simple, it is. And our SunBank 24 tellers will tell you what to do every step of the way.

The Pull. Since this is simply The Push in reverse, you need practice only 10 times. This move is used primarily to withdraw cash from the teller drawer. It is also used for withdrawing receipts for deposits and transfers and removing your Sun Bank card. With a little practice, you'll have completed this maneuver in about 30 seconds.

Thumbs Up. This is the gesture used by people who have discovered how quick and easy SunBank 24 automated tellers are to use. Practice it diligently. Because we're Florida's leader in 24-hour banking and convenience, you'll be seeing a lot of it.

350 enjoy Firemen's spaghetti dinner

Photos by Ailsa Dewing

TOO MANY COOKS don't spoil spaghetti apparently as Jamie Yurrillo gets a lot of help dishing out the pasta from Lieut. Vito Giannini, head chef, and helpers Charles Schoemmer, Bill Yurillo, Jr., and Bill Capel at the annual spaghetti dinner put on Sunday by Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department.

CRUISING—The sunlit Indian River was placid as celebrants in the business-women's fund-raising party were transported to Frances Langford's Outrigger Point for their buffet dinner.

ABWA flotilla of Sunday sailors

Sally Latham

Warm sun and pleasant breezes brought out a happy flotilla Sunday afternoon for 100 members of the American Business Women's Association and their husbands.

The flotilla, manned by captains of some eight yachts, took the boatacade from the Bay Harbor Club upriver to the Outrigger Point, where a cocktail party and dinner were served.

The American Business Women's Association, one of the fastest growing organizations of its kind in the country, has a membership of more than 1,180 chapters in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. Founded by Hillary Button in 1949, it is designed to utilize the resources of all women, no matter what their profession. Nationally, women are helped through interest free grants and loans.

Two grand prizes were donated for the event. Stan Bergman of Stuart Flooring was winner of a handsome painting, and Wayde Aycock was winner of a day aboard Bill Barton's "Miss Red Co II," a privately owned yacht.

The pepper pizza for the dinner was prepared by Mrs. Pam Barton and her committee, who included Rilla Townsend, Karen Johnson, Frances Burgette, Lavern Gardner, with the tostados provided by Charlie's Chips and the special peppers provided by Dos Amigos. Taylor Rental provided the tent.

Houseguests of the Wm. Bartons, who enjoyed the day's outing, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCain of Oceanport, N.J. Mr. McCain is a photographer for the Ashbury Park Press.

Approximately $700 was raised for scholarships by the venture.

HOSTESS—Bill and Pam Barton helped to serve the guests at the ABWA Fund-raising dinner. Pam was chairperson of the ways and means committee that organized the event.

SWEET THINGS at the firemen's spaghetti dinner were dispensed by members of the auxiliary Cheryl Phillips, Louise Kahler, and Eleanor Sprague. Capt. Ed Sprague was caught by the camera enjoying a snack from the dessert table.

IT'S GOOD, TOO, was the verdict of Mr. and Mrs. Bernhard Freitag and Mr. and Mrs. John Pruett being waited on by Assistant Chief William Bowen.

BLUE CLAW CRAB—Bill Trobliger holds up a crab that he and his crabbing partner, Herb Sands, had just hauled up in a basket from the waters below the Ernest Lyons (25 cent) Bridge. They said they had five Monday morning but got as many as 10 some days.

The surf... the bridges... the time is right, the fishing is great

JOE CELLI—Bluefishing in the surf near the Seaside condo, Joe had already caught 8 blues to two pounds using a 1.5 ounce Krocodile spoon. It was 8:45 a.m. on Monday and there were huge schools of mullet breaking water frenziedly in the surf, away from predators.

SURF FISHING, BLUEFISH-STYLE—These surf casters are busily engaged in hurling metal seaward, hoping the while that at any moment a big school of bluefish will move in to attack one of the schools of mullet now moving southward along the Hutchinson Island beaches.

THE BLUES ARE IN!—Lou Smitten is fast to a scrappy little snapper blue in the surf just south of the Holiday Inn. The action there was fast and furious last Monday morning and Lou was working hard to keep up with the blues churning the surf after big schools of mullet.

TWO-WAY FISHING—These two anglers on the beach near the Martin County Park-N-Fish area are going both ways, fishing close in with dead shrimp for whiting and also casting way out occasionally for blues with Krocodile spoons and cut mullet.

BRIDGE FISHING—One of the best bridges for seatrout fishing is this little "Mosquito Bridge" on the Stuart Causeway just east of the Ernest Lyons (25 cent) Bridge on A1A.

SUE BILIMEK—The fishing at the Jensen Causeway's "Mosquito Bridge" immediately east of the Frank Wacha Bridge was really slow last Monday, and Sue of Ocean Breeze Park admitted that so far all she had caught was "one real little one."

HAROLD KELLOGG—Harold is holding two of 11 bluefish he had caught in the surf on Krocodile spoons last Monday morning, fishing just north of the Martin County Park-N-Fish area below the Holiday Inn. He said he'd started fishing at 7 a.m. on an incoming tide and had caught his fish in the first hour and a half.

RALPH ROBINSON—Monday morning, the bridge fishing in the area was definitely slow all over. Ralph said he'd had little luck, just a small sailor's choice and a little sand perch to show for his efforts on the little Mosquito Bridge just east of the Ernest Lyons Bridge.

The surf is boiling with baitfish

BY DICK LUNDIN

PRAISE THE LORD and pass the krocodile spoons because the Hutchinson Island surf is fairly boiling with big schools of mullet and feasting bluefish in the one to two-pound class.

The blues are up and down the beaches from the Stuart beach to the power plant but seem to be concentrated around the Holiday Inn and the Martin County Park N Fish area just to the north. The best of action Monday morning, for example, seemed to be between the Inn and the Seaside condo and immediately north of the Park-N-Fish access road.

Although the majority of the blues are being taken by surf casters hurling 1.5 ounce Krocodile spoons out just as far as they can heave them, those using cut bait are getting their share too.

Early morning, from daylight to perhaps 10 a.m. appears to be the best time for bluefishing.

One caveat! Bluefish have soft flesh and must be kept cool from the time you catch them until you fillet them. You risk losing whatever flavor blues may have by just tossing them willy-nilly on the sand to flop and die in the sun. If you plan to eat them and please toss them back in the surf if you don't-it's best to bury each one in the sand beneath a marker. That'll keep them cool until you're ready to leave the beach. It wouldn't hurt to have a cooler in the car to receive them once you wash off the sand in the surf.

Bluefish madness is something, however, that obviously negates rational actions and conservation considerations. I watched anglers excitedly hauling in blues, tossing them far up on the sand after de-hooking them, and then racing back into the surf to cast again. The dictum that you keep only what you can eat is completely forgotten in the heat of the action!

FROM THE LADY STUART, party boat (288-1900) going half days and Wednesday and Friday nights from the Sailfish Marina just east of Port Salerno off A1A below Stuart, Capt. Martin Moody: "Fishing's been pretty good this week. All in all, it's looking good, Dick. We've been bringing in lots of Lane snappers, some big mutton snappers, a king mackerel now and then, and some small grouper, taken mostly off that little reef in 60 ft. of water north of the St. Lucie Inlet and near the Holiday Inn. We had a nice crowd Monday when the ladies can go out for half price. This is the time of the year when the Spanish mackerel show up, any time up to Thanksgiving."

CAPT. J.D. SACHS, from Manatee Bait and Tackle: "There's not too much out there, some wahoo from the Jore K and rich bird grouper from the Fol low the Sun. The Edna R got 5 kings to 16-0 (16 lbs.) in 140 ft. of water trolling mullet off the St. Inlet. There are schools of Spanish mackerel off the power plant, and they're catching blues at the Cream Reads on cut bait. There are a few snook to the inlet taking live finger mullet, and some nice mangrove snapperson the north side of the new jetty alongside the rocks. There are lots of bonito around now. I heard that the Great Dane had another blue marlin on this week. The Lora K had a big Allison tuna on and a shark bit it in half while the mate had a hold of the leader at the boat. Vermillion and mutton snappers and grouper are good out at Six Mile Reef off the St. Inlet. Thefishing is good out in 600 ft. There are plenty of tarpon under the mullet schools."

FROM D&M BAIT AND TACKLE, Muriel Weideman: "Fishing was very good at the Roosevelt this past weekend. James Howard caught 3 nice drum this morning (Tuesday); Ken and Shane Hyde caught a stringer full of mangrove snappers and sheiring fishing under the bridge on the north side. Cliff Davidson took a 3-8 cruiser from the Lord Chumley city docks. Nellie Mae Sheely caught 1 drum to 10-0, a croaker and some sand perch, all on dead shrimp, fishing from the Roosevelt. Jack Blanchard and some went offshore to the Kingfish Hole just south of the St. Inlet and caught kings of 19-0 and 20-0."

JOE MARINO, from Jensen Bait and Tackle: "They are taking some snook at the bridges, but not too many. There are some huge snook feeding on mullet in the river but it's hard to get them to strike a bait. There are a few trout in the river and a lot of blues in the surf. George Dittmer and Joe Jannes caught 65 blues just off the Holiday Inn fishing with cut bait."

FROM THE BAIT BOX, Chuck Shepherd said: "The blues are in pretty good. Dick. I nearly lost my boat the other night. I had started the engine out in the yard a couple of hours earlier and was in bed when I heard a noise out in the yard. The starter wires had grounded out against the bot manifold and a fire had started. I caught it just in time to avoid the total loss of the boat and trailer. Wasn't that lucky? Ron Cadle had a 7-8 drum, live shrimp, these cast until you're ready to leave the beach. It wouldn't hurt to have a cooler in the car to receive them once you wash off the sand in the surf."

from the west catwalk of the Frank Wacha Bridge on the Jensen Causeway; Gerlando Chase, Jr., and Don Schaenbacher, Jr., 2 snook to 6-4 on live finger mullet and shrimp at the Nettles Island bridge; Robert Magee and his friend Sam, 8 snook keepers on a white feather in the surf at the Holiday Inn; Junior; Disbman, 4 snook to 10-0, live shrimp; Evans Crary (3 cent) bridge; Conrad White, 20 blues, Kroca, Park-N-Fish; Jim Demarest and Rudy Rode, 27 blues same place, same lure."

Chuck and I discussed the palatability of king mackerel. We both agreed that it's one of the fish that should really be smoked, according to our tastes, but I did recall then that one of the area's pioneer women had told me once that if you'll soak the king in milk for 24 hours it'll taste just like snook or dolphin. You might try it if haven't yet.

ON THE FRESHWATER SIDE, Dick Hughes from Dick's Fish Camp (813-946-0801) at Lake Port on the north shore of Lake Okeechobee off SR 78, about 30 miles west of the Kissimmee River Bridge: "They're getting some bass back in the Hayfield around the bullrush islands and also along the north shore of the lake. The best lures right now seem to be transparent bass plastic worms in clear water or those blue and red shad culprit worms. There are some big bluegills (bream) as well as the bass, but not too many specks (black crappies) yet. One fellow caught a big speck on a topwater plug the other day."

TOM STEWART'S stand-in, Ron Ellis, from the Snook Nook in Jensen: "They are catching lots of blues and whiting in the surf. Trout fishing is picking up. The blues are snappers running 1-2 lbs. Those one and a half ounce Krocodile spoons are the best lure for blues. Two women anglers, Paul Grove and Nellie Humble, caught 75 blues on cut mackerel and 42 whiting on cut shrimp fishing the surf near Park-N-Fish. Wasn't that something, Dick?"

The Nook's log: Bill Fulmer, 33 blues and Joe Celli and Lou Smitter, 70 blues, all on Krocs, near the Holiday Inn. Tony Stock, 17 blues, cut mackerel, surf; Charlie Neff, 14 blues, Krocs, at the Oceana condo, Frank Nicholas, 7 blues, Krocs, surf; Les Whipple, 3 kings to 27-8 and 6 Spanish mackerel, trolling mullet and spoons. Harold Egeland, Pete Baker and Ed Wagner, 17 trout, trout touts, wading N of the power plant; Chuck Russell and Doug Grant, 4 flounder to 6-0, a trout and 4 sheepshead, live shrimp, N of power plant. Floyd Gullen, 5 trout, 7lb.-18 mirrolure, Herman's Bay. Jack Myers, an 8-0 snook, a 4-4 flounder, 4 croakers and 10 jack crevalles, live shrimp, wading near the power plant. John Hundley and son and Joe Alderman, 6 dolphin and a 30-4 king trolling ballyhoo 8-10 miles off the St. Inlet. Bill Warren and Bernie Freeze and son, 8 Spanish mackerel to 5-4 and a black-tipped shark, clark spoons, in 60 ft. of water northeast of the St Lucie Inlet.

After bad day at Foxboro, Dolphins face Bills

BY DICK LUNDIN

WORDS CAN'T DESCRIBE the humiliation the Miami Dolphins experienced and the helplessness they displayed in Schaefer Stadium up in Foxboro, Mass. last Sunday afternoon.

It's been many a day since Coach Don Shula has suffered so much anguish watching his troops take a thorough drubbing.

They hadn't been shut out since one Johnny Unitas and the Baltimore Colts whitewashed them up in Baltimore on Nov. 1, 1970, 35-0.

Miami's offense has been laboring all season long but last Sunday sunk to depths no Dolphin team has known since it first came into the league back in 1966. Against New England's rugged defenders, the Dolphins could come up with but 61 net yards rushing and another 27 passing for only 88 total net yards. What a disaster!

During World War II there was a popular ditty about how "those fifes are breaking up that old gang of mine." In reference to such classics as Kaserine Pass. Thus "88" could signal the break up of the Miami Dolphins as fans have known them through the fabulous decade of the 70s.

COACH SHULA must be back at his drawing board with his coaching staff facing the grim reality that the Dolphins are now all but out of the 1980 playoffs with their 3-3 record, no offense and a defense that couldn't withstand a quality attack such as the New England Patriots boast, and an upcoming stretch of games that seem out of reach for this seemingly outmatched outfit.

As we've mentioned so many times in this column, Miami is in desperate need of a quality running back and a young mobile quarterback. Never was the need so evident as last Sunday.

This team could have done better with fullback Larry Csonka still in there making the tough yardage and blocking for the other running backs, but it's doubtful if it could have defeated the Patriots at Foxboro, even with a healthy Bob Griese at quarter back.

The veteran Griese, immobile and injury prone through age, is still a great one when he's sound, but he is out for a game or two with an injured shoulder and that left the quarterbacking to No. 2 backup man Don Strock and Strock certainly wasn't up to it Sunday, throwing two interceptions in four tries before having his "bell rung" by defensive lineman Sam Adams early in the second quarter. Strock had to sit out the rest of the game with a possible concussion and young David Woodley, the rookie from LSU, was fed to the lions by "Nero" Shula.

Woodley is the Miami quarterback of the future but certainly not of the present, or definitely not against the rock-ribbed defense of the Patriots. Woodley, rushed unmercifully by the Patriots, and sacked frequently, hung tough in there the rest of the long afternoon but his short passes were dropped more often than not and his long ones thrown too high, begging for the interceptions that came now and again.

YOU CAN'T BLAME WOODLEY or any one player for the Foxboro debacle. It was a team effort.

Miami misses Jim Langer, Csonka and the Larry Little of just a year or so ago, not to mention veteran safety Tim Foley. The Dolphin secondary is chock full of talented, super youngsters who'll be stars or superstars some day soon, but right now they need the leadership that was provided by Foley, out with an injury. Little has tried to play hurt this season but when he hurt his left knee again and limped from the field early in the game, it may have marked the end of a great career that began in 1969.

Jon Giesler, last year's No. 1 draftee, is off the injured reserve list and should be able soon to help out in the offensive line. He's needed desperately and could make a difference for the game with the Buffalo Bills next Sunday in the Orange Bowl, kickoff time 1 p.m.

THERE'S NO POINT in rubbing salt in Sunday's wounds by going over the gory details of the Foxboro massacre. The Patriots had it all their way from the opening kickoff and the Dolphins were never in the game. To give you an idea of just how bad it was, punter George Roberts kicked 10 times, tying a Miami record set way back in the 60s when the Dolphins were struggling expansionists.

All Miami fans can do now is hope for the best in the Orange Bowl this week. Coach Shula may be able to erase the memories of Foxboro and prepare his warriors for the Bills. The Dolphins should be ready for a supreme effort and just might make a game of it against the 5-1 Bills, smarting from their first defeat of the season, 17-12 at the hands of the rugged Colts, and right in their own backyard at Orahard Park, N.Y. too.

DON STROCK continues to impress only as a backup quarterback but whatever hope Miami has to upset the Bills rests with him. Woodley needs time to acquaint himself with the intricacies of National Football League warfare. On the other hand, perhaps there's no better time than now to give him that experience — if, in fact, as it seemed last Sunday, Miami's light years away from being a bona fide contender in 1980.

The Patriots and Bills are tied for the lead in the Eastern Division of the AFC and more and more it looks like the battle for the AFC East championship could be among Buffalo, Baltimore and New England. Off the Foxboro rout, I'd have to take New England. Coach Shula will have to come up with a near miracle if he is able to bring his Dolphins up higher than fourth this year.

Even the New York Jets, now 1-5, got their act together finally in Atlanta Sunday, whipping the Falcons, 14-7. The Jets depended too much on building an awesome offensive machine and have really struggled in 1980. While the Jets are entertaining the Seattle Seahawks next Sunday, and Miami is hosting Buffalo, the key game in the AFC East will see New England invading Baltimore for a 2 p.m. start against the Colts.

If Miami comes from nowhere to nip the Bills and the Colts turn back the Patriots (unlikely), the East race would be something else again with the Bills, Pats and Colts all 5-2 and the Dolphins only a game behind at 4-3.

It's nice to dream, and it could happen. It really could.

STILL AND ALL, if things aren't too rosy down in South Florida these days, how about the situation over in Tampa Bay where the 1979 high flying Bucs are now a lack luster 2-3-1. Their ace quarterback, Doug Williams, was an unimpressive six for 24 passing against the Green Bay Packers in Tampa Sunday. This one went into overtime and wound up tied 14-14 only because the Green Bay kicker missed a 36-yard field goal with five seconds left in overtime.

Tampa Bay seems to be having just about as much trouble winning as the Dolphins, despite having one of the NFL's most respected defenses. Green Bay had 500 yards total offense Sunday. The Bucs could muster but 262.

LOOKING AT THIS WEEK'S NFL GAMES: Buffalo over Miami; Seattle over the N.Y. Jets; Dallas over Philadelphia (a tougher); Cleveland over Green Bay, Cincinnati over Minnesota, Washington over St. Louis, New England over Baltimore, Atlanta over New Orleans (the 0-6 Saints are way overdue), Detroit over Chicago, Denver over Kansas City, Houston over Tampa Bay; Los Angeles over San Francisco; San Diego over the N.Y. Giants, Pittsburgh over San Francisco, San Diego over the N.Y. Giants, Pittsburgh over Oakland in the Monday night game (those Steelers should really take it out on the Raiders after losing again to the Bengals).

You probably won't be able to see the Dolphins on TV this week, but Tampa Bay will be on Channel 4 at 4 p.m. and that same station will carry Dallas-Philadelphia at 1 p.m.

This would be an ideal time to drive down I-95 or the turnpike to the Orange Bowl Sunday to lend your vocal support to the Dolphins. There'll be plenty of tickets available according to advance word. Turn off I-95 just below 125th St. where the sign says Orange Bowl. See you there and let's hope for the best!

Sandpiper match play Thursday

BY MIKE SANDY

The annual Match Play Championships will get underway Thursday, Oct. 16, for the Sandpiper Bay Men golfers on the Saints 18 hole champion ship course. Action will carry on for five consecutive Thursdays.

With many of the vacationing members returning to the area, tournament Chairman Col. Jim Healy is anticipating another record entry with the first round to determine the handicap brackets in which each contestant will be placed. The five-week tourney is one of the "fairest" as members will be matched against other members whose handicaps fall into specific flights.

Thursday's play is classified as a qualifying test and will be followed by the subsequent four weeks of play on match play basis on an eliminating schedule. The finals are scheduled for Nov. 13 when the pairs remaining alive in each handicap flight will square off for their respective flight honors. Pairings for the first round Oct. 23 will be posted on the bulletin board of the Saints pro shop.

Playing between intermittent showers last Thursday, five foursomes finished but two strokes apart in the Best Ball of Foursome test with the team of Roy Rutherford, Harry Hendroo, Jim Doran and Bob Nerson walking off with the top award, carding a 17-under par 55.

Alone in the second slot and one shot off the pace at 56, were Bill Jahn, Dick James and Mac Upper. A blind draw for this team's fourth member failed to produce a winning shot. As results show, the score was that of the threesome mentioned.

A triple tie resulted in a team score of 15 under par 57 and included the following quartets: Dave Brengascio, Jack Radcliffe, Miles Zimmerman, Art McDaniel; John Lansbury, Wulf Ferrers, Chas. McNabb, Bob Deming; Fred Schaetzels, Pat O'Neill, Elmer Hoffman and Henry Vinion.

Individual low scoring honors for the day went to Elmer Hoffman, vice president of the association, who carded his best round of the year, turning in a 70.

BIKE-A-THON—The Stuart-Jensen Jaycees collected $1,702.25 for the Cystic Fibrosis fund Saturday as 84 youngsters drive at Martin County High School. The pledges will be turned in to the Jaycees by Oct. 26 at the Jaycee CF bowl-a-thon at Jensen Lanes. The top winner was Kathie Drescher, daughter of Jerry Drescher of Sewall's Point, with $181.86 in pledges.

64 play in women's meet

The Treasure Coast Women's League recently held their monthly field day on the Indian Hills golf course in Ft. Pierce. Sixty-four members from Sandpiper Bay, Martin County, Indian Hills and Vista Royale country clubs competed for individual low gross and low net honors. Play began at 8:30 and was followed by luncheon at the Indian Hills Country Club.

Low gross honor for the field went to N. Terry, I.H. who toured the course in 82 strokes. P. Jeffries, M.C. shot a net 68 for the field winner.

1st flight winners were A. Ennis, I.H. for a gross 89, K. Scott S.P.B. net 73, D. Cook, S.P.B. and V. Jackson, M.C. net 74, D. Rohner, I.H. 75, and O. Rennard, M.C. 77.

The 2nd flight was led by M. Heilman, I.H. with a gross 94. J. Pekau, I.H. and S. Lesher, S.P.B. each shot a net 74. C. McLaughlin, M.C. and J. Oliver, S.P.B. had net 76. R. Stratton, I.H. 77, while C. Lorenson, S.P.B. and G. Wilkens, M.C. each had 78.

G. Albritton, I.H. was gross winner in the 3rd flight with 98. Net winners were J. Beaumont, S.P.B. 71, D. McConnell, S.P.B. 72, S. Hess, I.H. 74, and M. East, M.C. 76.

4th flight gross winners were K. Jacobs, I.H. and R. Weagand M.C. each shooting 99. Low net winners were B. Heilman M.C. and B. Sitz, M.C., each with 70, A. Dillon M.C. and P. Thornbury I.H. at 76, D. Hickman, S.P.B. and H. Thomas I.H. 83 and K. Chester V.B. 83.

Bassers take note: snook are taking to fresh water

FISHERIES BIOLOGISTS of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission (GFWFC) report that they were both surprised and pleased recently when they recovered an yearling snook from a pond in which they had been introduced as three-inch fingerlings a year earlier. Out of 48 stocked, only four had failed to survive.

"This indicates snook have a high rate of survival, at least in this pond. We also found their growth rates to be higher than expected. In that one year, several had almost reached the legal size limit of 18 inches in length," biologist Frank Marcello said.

Many fresh water anglers would welcome snook in their favorite bass holes. Snook are a lot like bass in that they strike fast, fight hard and make excellent table fare. Best of all, they grow larger than Florida largemouth bass, he pointed out.

Many south Florida waterways already contain populations of snook that run up the canals and rivers well into fresh water. The state's snook program could lead to introductions of these popular gamesters in closed water systems.

There are problems that remain to be solved, however. For unknown reasons, there is a predictable die-off of a percentage of fry during the nursery stage of their development. "If we can find out what causes this, we would have an ample supply of stockable snook," Marcello stated.

According to the GFWFC, brood fish are caught in Collier and Palm Beach Counties, stripped of their eggs and sperm, and the eggs incubated in Collier County. The resulting, surviving fry are later transferred to the Richloam fish hatchery and raised to a length of about three inches, a size that seems to give them a good chance of avoiding predators.

Carefully selected ponds have been stocked with these baby snook and their growth rates carefully monitored.

If the Commission's biologists can work out the "bugs" in the program, the state's bassers may be in for a pleasant surprise.

SHOOT IF YOU MUST those native mourning doves but spare your state's white-winged doves, the GFWFC reminds us.

White-winged doves are fully protected by state and federal law, and several hunters were arrested on opening day of the dove season, Oct. 4, for shooting whitewings.

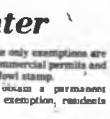
Whitewings, cousins of mourning doves which can be hunted legally during open seasons (the first phase ends Nov. 2, with the last two phases from Nov. 8-23 and Dec. 13 through Jan. 4) are gradually increasing their range in south Florida. They were first introduced into the Dade County area during the early 1980s and now can be found as far north as West Palm Beach.

Dove hunters should learn to identify whitewings by their larger size and white markings, according to Commission biologist Tim Regan, who points out that mourning doves are grey and have a long pointed tail rather than the square one sported by whitewings.

SOME HUNTERS IN ST. LUCIE COUNTY found out the hard way recently that shooting deer out of season can be costly.

Wildlife officers Dale Knapp and Stoney Lee arrested three men for illegally killing two buck deer in St. Lucie County. During the arrest they seized backpacks full of meat, bone saws, butcher knives, a rifle and lights, and, alarmingly at least to the officers, a portable radio tuned to the Commission's frequency, according to the GFWFC.

OUTDOOR NEWS
by Dick Lundin



"This is the third such radio seized during the past 18 months and is evidence that wildlife poachers are anxious to keep tabs on wildlife officers," Lt. Eddie Wheeler said.

The individuals arrested by Knapp and Lee, Wheeler noted, were apparently well equipped not only for illegal hunting activities, but also for butchering meat in the woods. All of the equipment was seized, he said, and pointed out that the trio faces a fine of $1,000 or a year in jail, plus the confiscation of their equipment, if convicted.

Wheeler concluded: "While credit for the arrest goes to Knapp and Lee, citizens can be involved in conserving the state's wildlife resources through the Wildlife Alert program. If you see something suspicious in the woods, call 1-800-432-2046 promptly and report it. We'll dispatch an officer to check it out. You don't have to give your name and if an arrest is made based on information you give us, you're entitled to a reward."

HUNTER EDUCATION CLASSES in anticipation of the opening of the hunting season on Nov. 8, are being offered on weekends by the GFWFC.

"These classes are being held Oct. 18-19 as a convenience to hunters who wish to hunt in a state that requires successful completion of the course," said Lt. Jim Truitt, Hunter Education Officer for the Commission's Everglades Region.

At the present time, 34 states do require that hunters have such certification, and certification cards are also required in some federal refuges in Florida for duck hunters, Truitt added.

He explained that through this workshop, a sportsman can get his card in two days rather than take the regular course which usually is spread out over six weeks. The course consists of around 14 hours of instruction in wildlife identification, conservation, safe use and handling of firearms, archery, muzzleloading, survival and more, with all course material, including handbooks and ammunition provided by the Commission.

Although there will be weekend classes in Miami and Davie down south, area Hunters can take the courses at 2220 54th Ave. in Vero Beach (Dr. A. Lindsey, 562-5603) or at the Everglades Youth Camp in the J.W. Corbett Wildlife Management Area just west of West Palm Beach (Lt. Truitt, 683-0748).

For further information on these classes, call the Commission at (305) 683-0748 or toll-free at 1-800-432-2046.

TOTALLY AND PERMANENTLY DISABLED Florida residents were exempted from the purchase of any hunting or fishing license effective Oct. 1, according to Col. Robert Brantly, executive director of the GFWFC.

Under a law passed during the last legislative session, totally and permanently disabled residents are privileged to hunt and sport fish, without charge for a license or permit, on all public or private lands so long as those activities are consistent with rules and regulations of the Commission, Brantly explained.

Thus, he continued, residents who qualify will not have to purchase a hunting or fishing license, management area permit, archery or muzzleloader permit, quail, recreation, dove or bear permit, state waterfowl stamp or apply for a quota hunt permit. The only exemptions are trapping and commercial permits and a federal waterfowl stamp.

In order to obtain a permanent license for this exemption, residents must show proof of disability to their county tax collector. The certification as totally and permanently disabled requires written statements from two licensed physicians who are professionally unrelated, or from the Veterans Administration.

"A totally and permanently disabled resident plus a federal waterfowl stamp affixed to the license (when taking waterfowl) is all that a totally and permanently disabled person will need in his/her possession to be entitled to hunting and sportfishing in Florida," Brantly emphasized.

THE STATEWIDE ARCHERY SEASON ended Oct. 12 but archers still have some options. For example, Fort McCoy has an archery hunt from Oct. 4-28 and Geans River from Oct. 4-19. The Tomoka Wildlife Management Area will be open to archers Oct. 18-Nov. 2. For more information, check with the GFWFC in West Palm (683-0748).

A POPULAR SPORT—Surf fishing is a popular sport, and never more so than when the word's out that "the blues are in!" Monday morning there were 24 anglers lining from the beach in the vicinity of the Park N Fish access area off A1A below the Jensen Causeway, and just about all of them casting Krocodile spoons were catching results! Dewing receives press club award Mirror news editor Ailsa Dewing has been named a Florida Press Club award winner in the "general excellence writing" category.

AT RIVERFRONT Italian American Club Dance, Wally Fenne dances with wife Phyllis as he also celebrated his birthday. Wally and Phyllis deliver The Mirror in Spanish Lakes communities.

CITED—William W. Spear, vice chairman of the National Associated Businessmen, presents U.S. Rep. L. A. "Skip" Bafalis, R-Fla., with the NAB's coveted "Watchdog of the Treasury" award for his votes against unnecessary federal spending throughout the 96th Congress. It marked the fourth time Bafalis was awarded the bulldog statuette, one for his frugal spending record in each of the four Congresses in which he has served. In making the presentation, Spear noted that the NAB's Economy Voting Record, an index of congressional attitudes toward federal spending, showed Bafalis with a 100 per cent rating, one of just 62 House members to be so designated. The presentation was made just before the Congress adjourned for the general election.

Falkenburg on racket testing

At the recent US Professional Tennis Association convention some 30 USPTA members tested about 60 odd rackets in the morning, had lunch and then spent approximately 10 minutes with the manufacturer of each racket in the afternoon.

The testing is done by hitting touch shots, off center hits (which don't help your elbow), serves, volleys and ground strokes. Each tester then goes to the side of the court and tells his comments to a recorder (excuse my gender, there were about eight lady pros as well). You hit with the same racket strung with gut and nylon for another comparison. Some nylon actually plays better than gut.

Some of the rackets I tested, Volkl, (Servo Diagonal) fiberglass, const., Yamaha, YFG 50 fiberglass model, Spalding, Centurion composite, Price Woodie, with seven layers of maple and ash with graphite overlay and inlay, Fila — composite wood and graphite — sells about $100 and has more color than any I have seen, Dunlop, Black Max, fiberglass with 24 percent graphite, Le Coq Sportif, Boron, graphite, and fiberglass fibre in a solid elastic case. This racket is easily recognizable, it has three prongs to the handle for less fibration, it says there.

Snauwaert, boronite around the head only, for a very stiff head. Wilson, Legacy, high performance, control, and power, made with maple, ash boron and fiberglass. Thirty percent stiffer than standard racket and 13 percent more hitting area. Yonex, Cargonex, fiberglass and graphite tubing. Head, Graphite Edge, same size as other edge, available next month $160. Fisher, Super Form, hollow core graphite and fiberglass, small head with an adjuster for tension at the throat.

IN APPRECIATION for the blood donated, Mike Mancuso receives an emblem and a t-shirt from Rodney McSwiney and Herb Jonson, for his contribution to the Martin Branch Blood Bank. Recently, the mobile unit stopped at the Florida Institute of Technology to relieve blood donation from the students. The mobile unit will again be in Jensen Beach on Nov. 7; at Harder's. Those wishing to give to the Blood Bank will receive a free hamburger or cheeseburger. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)

IRCC Itinerary

The claim — "We have something to interest everyone" — is made often at Indian River Community College, and with good cause. Just look over the wide variety of programs, classes, seminars, events, and special presentations coming up in the next couple of weeks alone, and you're sure to agree. There IS something for everyone at IRCC, and more importantly, there is something especially suited to you.

BASIC FIRE RECRUIT TRAINING OFFERED

Take note, area fire department personnel, volunteer firefighters, and you who aspire to a career as a fireman — the seven-week Basic Fire Recruit Training Program scheduled to begin Oct. 20 at IRCC affects you! To meet Monday through Friday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., this 13-credit course will provide you with the knowledge and experience you need to pass the certifying exam given by the State Bureau of Fire Standards and Training. By law, all firemen must earn this certification within a year of employment by any professional fire department. If you are interested, stop by Room 1-128 at the college to pick up the necessary medical and registration forms, or call Henry Christian at IRCC, ext. 282. But do it soon; only 30 students will be accepted into the program, and registration is on a first-come, first-serve basis.

PSYCHIC DEMONSTRATION SCHEDULED

Gil Eagles, "The Entertaining Psychic," who has amazed audiences world-wide, will demonstrate his unique talents as a hypnotist and practitioner of E.S.P. on October 16 at IRCC. To perform in the McAlpin Fine Arts Center from 12:40 to 2:40 p.m., Eagles uses total audience participation, and guarantees that there is no collusion whatsoever between himself and his volunteer subjects. Through his mysterious "sixth sense," Eagles astounds audiences with his perceptions: names of total strangers, numbers relevant to his subjects, answers to unspoken questions — no information is beyond the realm of Eagles' mental powers. Don't miss this unique demonstration of mind control; it is a program you'll long remember. And since Eagles' presentation at IRCC is being sponsored by the Campus Coalition Government, no admission fee will be charged.

COUSTEAU TICKETS GO ON SALE

Famed oceanographer Jean-Michel Cousteau will open the 1980-81 season of the IRCC Performing Arts Series on Oct. 21, and individual ticket sales for this remarkable, multi-media production begin Oct. 6 at the IRCC Box Office. If you liked "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau" on television, you'll love Jean-Michel Cousteau on Oct. 21 at IRCC. Tickets cost $5 each, and are available through the Box Office. For more information, call 465-5533.

Instruction will include all the theoretical knowledge and practical experience necessary to become a top-notch cosmetologist, and students get an opportunity to work with patrons in the cosmetology department. For more information and application details, call the IRCC Guidance Office, ext. 323.

STAND UP FOR YOURSELF.

Do you just shrivel up inside when you are forced to speak up for yourself? Would you rather let another person trample all over your rights than risk hurting anyone's feelings? Or do you sometimes go overboard and say things that offend and alienate others? "Assertive Communications," a class being offered at the IRCC Mueller Center in Vero Beach beginning Oct. 30, will help you learn to communicate more effectively in your family, your community, and on the job. To meet each Thursday from 7 to 9:45 p.m. in Room 8 at the Mueller Center, the class is worth 18 CEU credits for nurses and costs only $9. Interested? Call 569-0333.

Tennis

BY TOM FALKENBURG

Director of Tennis — Indian River Plantation

BY TOM FALKENBURG

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 27 to Oct. 5, 1980. Site of the 1980 USTA 55 and 65 National Singles and Doubles Championships. The draw in both events was 128 of the best white haired tennis players in the country.

The Knoxville Racquet Club was the host, and a very good host they were. The facilities included 15 Har-tru courts, 8 asphalt indoor courts, sauna, pool, and race clubhouse.

Hostesses were ready to drive players wherever they wished to go. Wives' activities were organized every day with the schedule of things like, bargain shopping, Sylvia's Antiques, Bridge, tennis round robin, and trips to Gatlinburg and the Smoky Mountains.

Connie and I had one extra treat, dinner with Lloyd and Nancy Mont gomery, members of IRP and fellow deots of Knoxville. Connie is still trying to get Nancy's recipe. We also saw Bill and Louise Tate, members of both clubs. Plus, it would take at least three weeks to try all the fine restaurants in Knoxville, and we tried to do it in eight days.

We arrived on Saturday afternoon. Temperature 90 degrees. I played three practice sets. Sunday, 9 a.m., rain and matches called for the day. I went indoors and practiced three more sets. Monday, rain again, but committee decides to make everyone play indoors. Boy, was there some hollering. These old guys that only play on clay, did not like it one bit, and several withdrew. It is tough to enter a clay tournament and be sent out on hard asphalt. The eventual 55 53 winner, Gus Palafox, said he would withdraw before playing indoors. The 65 winner, Gardner Mulloy, just lost to a lesser player in the Nat'l Indoors because he can't see under lights, played indoors and hurt his leg, but still won. Incidentally, that's Gar's 52 National Championship, more than any other living or deceased tennis player.

Monday I played Chadwick Johnson, No 1 Sr from Maryland. I fought to a tough 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 win. Tuesday it was raining again. I was sent inside to play William Powers, No. 1 Sr. from Massachusetts. I struggled to a 6-7 (7-5), 6-3, 6-1 win. Wednesday it was cool and damp but no rain. I finally got on the clay to play George Stoddard, Eastchester, N.Y. I lost the first set 6-3 before I got used to the slow clay, then ran through the next two sets 6-3, 6-0. Wed was a clear day for my toughest match against the No. 6 seeded player Michael Essi, also No. 1 in Pennsylvania. I upset him 6-3, 7-5, but had to work for every point. My next match was Ben Boesch from Miami, whom I had practiced with on Sunday indoors. I handled him indoors, but he handled me on the clay 6-2, 6-2. I got some revenge that afternoon when my partner Buck Archer and I defeated Boesch and Manny Winitsky from Hollywood, Fla. in the doubles 6-3, 6-4.

In the semi-finals of the 55 doubles, we defeated Hal DeMoody and Ken Volk, ranked No. 3 in the U.S. 6-4, 7-6 (7-4).

Sunday the temperatures dipped into the 40 degrees and Buck and I just couldn't get it together, losing to Palafox and George Pendley 6-4, 7-6. Everyone played the first set wearing a sweatsuit.

By the way, Floridians did extra well in this National Championship, with Bob Stubbs and Jack Cook from Miami making the semi's of the doubles. Ben Boesch and Manny Winitsky made it to the quarters of the doubles. Boesch and Gus Palafox of Bradenton, Fla. played in the singles finals and Gus defeated me in the finals of the doubles making this a Florida affair.

After eight days of playing, I was glad to get right in the car, turn up the heater and head straight for good old Florida. Just below Jacksonville I turned off the heater and opened the windows until Orlando when I closed the windows and turned on the A-C.

Traveling tips: lots of interesting places to visit and see along the highway, but cars and trucks are running 65 to 75 MPH making it tough to take your eye off the highway. We stopped in Atlanta to visit the Underground, was, has that gone to the dogs. Free advice, stay away. As we crossed the border into Florida it was like slow motion. Very few cars went over 57 MPH and the ones that did were getting green stamps on the side from smoky the bear.

This week I will be playing the National USPTA Championships at Ponte Vedra, Jacksonville, Fla. Then it's all work to get the Tri-County League IRP Team moving in a winning direction, and the rest of the members and guests having the best time possible.

Have you seen what Ann has done to the Pro Shop? Or what Kathy has done to the Porch? Well, don't just sit there, go out and look.

Falkenburg blames a net loss on bad back

"An aggravated back injury kept Indian River Plantation Resort tennis pro Tom Falkenburg and partner, Buck Archer, from defending their National Senior 55 & Over Clay Court Championship title last week in Knoxville.

Falkenburg's injury, a result of playing two days of matches on indoor asphalt due to rain was a factor in preventing his team from defeating George Pendley and Gus Palafox in the finals. The final score of that match was 6-4, 7-5.

After defeating the Mid-Atlantic champion as well as the New England champion in the Men's 55 & Over Singles competition, Falkenburg lost in the quarterfinals to Ben Boesch of Miami, 7-6, 7-6.

The Tri-County Tennis Club Association Team Championship Series has begun. Seven area clubs from Martin, St. Lucie and Indian River counties will compete in this series which runs through April.

Sandtrap

BY MIKE SANDY

They're coming back to the Sandpiper Bay area — Dick and Jackie Blabon will be moving into their recently purchased villa at Tarpon Bay Nov. 15 and with Dick will come some 80 putters which he has acquired during the last seven years as an avid golfer.

At the age of 69, Dick Blabon is intent on shooting his age or lower at one of the Sandpiper courses. Meanwhile he will be testing a few of his favorite putters to learn which is most adaptable to the Sandpiper greens.

His putter collection includes many of the classics which are now bringing fabulous money. However, he insists they are not "for sale." His greatest pleasure is to retrieve old putters and recondition each into playable condition. He just likes to "putter" around.

Blabon took up golf after many successes on the badminton courts — having been crowned amateur champion for more than 17 years in the Philadelphia area. After his first introduction to golf, Blabon went to visit the old sage, George Sayer, renowned club maker who equipped him with a full set of handmade clubs — clubs he maintains are the best made and which he still uses.

At the time of his visit to Sayre, the 80-year-old club maker and prominent teacher was head pro at the famed Merion course. Blabon has been trying to convince wife Jackie to take up the game but she gets most of her pleasures from just having Dick stay happy.

We believe the medical examiners in the State of Nevada contributed much to the "thrashing" administered to Muhammad Ali in his recent heavyweight title affray with Larry Holmes. In any physical exam, questions are normally put to examinees about whether they are on any medication. Had this been done, the fight might never had been staged which resulted in a tragic ending to such an overwhelming career.

Instead of being cheered, Ali has been pitied and his "beating" will long be remembered by the fight buffs. Pity, however, can be set aside when one realizes that Ali came out of the fight with some $10 million added to his bank account and holdings. Some observers believe the public should be pitied for the fleecing given viewers at ringside and others who paid the shot to see the fiasco on closed circuit TV.

The Johnny Miller Invitational Pro Am which has enjoyed a bit of success in its inaugural last year, has gone private. Larry Dorfman, golf writer for the Miami Herald, wrote that the event might be dead before drawing [illegible] anything more Ex dates (Feb. 4-6) conflict with the PGA Seniors tourney at Turnberry Isle.

Thirty-six tour pros and 36 members of the LPGA will be competing for a purse of $110,000 in the Miller classic. It has attracted 300 amateurs who will cough up $250 each for the privilege of playing with one of the stars. The public, however, is invited to attend the Seniors event where they will be able to watch such noted golfers as Arnold Palmer, Julius Boros, Sam Snead, Don January, Ted Kroll, and many others who are termed as "legends."

Lou Sabo, the newly-appointed head pro at Martin County Country Club comes to the area with a wealth of credentials and might be just the "guy" to bring the layout up to being one of the finest in the area. Lou is very interested in the junior golfers. He said, "The course has great potential and we will concentrate on conditioning," adding "the layout has natural terrain" and the basic design is "super."

He especially likes the new added nine holes which now feature 18 of the most interesting holes in the area.

Sabo is a former general manager and golf director of Old Orchard Golf and Country Club in Mount Prospect, Ill., having devoted a lifetime to the game and a member of the PGA for more than 35 years. He came here from Illinois to retire, but as he put it, "I got tired of looking at walls."

Sabo plans to concentrate on teaching. "I especially want to work with the youngsters, they are easy to teach."

He is known in many quarters as a pro's pro and has worked with many of the top players whose games have gone astray. Says Sabo, "I can watch a pro for two minutes and tell him what's wrong."

In addition Sabo is well qualified to condition courses. He wants them lush and green. He concluded, "I know what courses need and I know I can bring this course up to be one of the finest and one that the people of Martin County will be proud to call their home course."

A tale of three men on base

BY MIKE SANDY

With the World Series in the offing and interest running high among baseball buffs, it's time to recall one of the strangest of all baseball stories about the Daffy Dodgers.

Bill Herman, a member of Baseball's Hall of Fame who now makes his home at nearby Palm Beach Gardens and who has become a proficient golfer in his twilight years, figured greatly in one of the strangest events in the game of baseball.

Countless fans remember Bill Herman as the slugger for the Chicago Cubs who batted .341 and led the National League in hits with 227 and two base hits with 57.

Bill will long recall that eventful day — the day three men were on base . . . .

The day that Brooklyn accumulated three runners on third was August 15, 1926, when the then Brooklyn Dodgers were engaging the N.Y. Braves at Ebbetts Field

Brooklyn came to bat in the seventh.

Johnny Butler singled. DeBerry hit a two-bagger scoring Butler. Dazzy Vance singled and DeBerry went to third. Fewster was hit by the pitcher, filling the bases. Jacobson opposed out. Babe Herman now took his place at the plate. The stage was all set for the drama.

Herman belted a line drive to right field and DeBerry vacated third base and crossed the plate. Vance, who had been on second, thought Herman's drive was going to be caught, and held up until he was certain the outfielder had missed it; then Dazzy started for home.

He rounded third, halfway to the plate, decided he wouldn't be able to beat the throw-in, reversed himself and started back to third. Meanwhile Fewster was tearing around the base paths from first, arriving at the third sack about the time Vance returned to it. They stood and looked at each other in astonishment for a few moments and then switched their attention to an even more astonishing sight.

Babe Herman figured he had a double, possibly a triple, and he preferred a triple, of course, and was bent on trying to stretch it. He had his head down and was running for all he was worth, with no suspicion in his mind that a traffic jam had already developed at third.

He didn't raise his head until he was a few feet from third and then when he looked up, there stood Vance and Fewster, and the Boston third baseman was just taking the throw.

This third baseman, Taylor, was understandably excited. He received the throw and started tagging people. He tagged every human being within reach, including the third base umpire.

Herman, however had gotten himself out of range and was heading back for second. Taylor fired the ball down to the shortstop and Herman was tagged out before he could reach the bag.

That episode became a sort of baseball classic, possibly because the unpredictable Babe Herman was involved in the making of it.

Bennett Cerf used to tell the story of the time a few years later, when Quentin Reynolds was sitting in the last row of seats in the grandstand at Ebbetts Field during the early innings of an important game.

Chancing to look into the street outside the park, Reynolds saw a latecomer, a Brooklyn fan who was running along the pavement, puffing heavily as he headed for the entrance.

"Better hurry up!" Reynolds yelled down to the man. "You're missing something big. The Dodgers have three men on base."

"Yeh?" cried the fan. "Which base?"

PB will host PGA National Oct. 23 - 26

Palm Beach County becomes a mecca for professional golfers this month when 360 players from throughout the country tee off in the 13th annual PGA National Club Professional Championship.

It's the most important competition of the year for the PGA club pro — the working member of the Association who conducts the majority of the nation's golf business at shops and clubs across America," notes Mark Kizzar, championship chairmen and treasurer of the PGA.

It also is the largest all-professional 72-hole championship in the world and features the only format of its kind in U.S. golf competition.

This $130,000 event will be staged Oct. 23-26 with a field of 360, competing over three different and distinct courses.

After all players have competed over each of the three courses, the field will be cut to the low 90 scorers and ties for the final round. The winner receives $20,000, plus an opportunity at $500 in "fun money" for the low round on each course.

PGA National Golf Club, nearing its first year of operation here, will be the focal point for this year's PGA Club Professional which is also co-sponsored by Ram Golf, Michelob, and Michelob Light.

The brand new home of the PGA of America will serve as the championship center — registration, scoring, media headquarters and four-day competition, including the final round, over the 6,800-yard, par 72 Haig Course where the winner will be crowned Oct. 26.

Two other courses in the immediate area being contested the first three days are Frenchman's Creek and Eastpointe Country Clubs just north of PGA National. Both courses are off Donald Ross Road — Frenchman's Creek east of Florida's Turnpike and Eastpointe west of the Turnpike. Frenchman's Creek is par 70, 6,406 yards, and Eastpointe is par 72, 6,700 yards.

In addition to the six-figure total purse the championship provides 1981 PGA Championship exemptions to the top-finishers, berths on the 1981 PGA Cup Match team to the top nine places, PGA tour opportunities for the top 25 and local U.S. Open qualifying exemption to the winner.

Some of the most notable performers in the game's history will be in the field which was determined through avenues of exemption and qualifying from an original entry of 1,382.

Four past PGA champions will be here. Julius Boros, Doug Ford, Dow Finsterwald and Jerry Barber. Boros also is a two-time U.S. Open Champion and Ford is a former Masters winner. Among former Club Pro champions in the field are defender Buddy Whitten, John Gentile, Laurie Hammer, Howell Fraser, Rex Baxter, Don Massengale and Rives McBee.

Several former PGA Tour winners will be in the lineup, including Randy Glover, Stever Spray, Charles Sifford, Bill Johnston and Bert Weaver. Two-time U.S. Amateur Champ Harvie Ward who became a PGA professional last year also is a contestant.

Sandpiper gals play 3-best

The Sandpiper Bay Women's Golf Association played "Three - Best Balls" of foursome event last week on the Saints and Wilderness golf course.

Leading the field of 84 players by six shots, was the team of Larry Martell, Helen Purcell, Phil Healy, and Maxie Rutherford, with a net score of 203. Fran Heiden, Ruth Neighbours, C. M. Linabury and Terry Skinker took second place with a 209.

Third place produced a tie between the teams of Addie Hannum, Emily Griffin, I. D. Bouck, Dot Wolford, and Lola Jelnick, M. J. Thompson, a blind, and Doris Hickman, both shooting 210. Another tie existed for fourth place honors when the teams of Ange LoBrutto, Doris Harvey, Marguerite Hayde, Terry Pullis and Lorraine Swift, Fran Hull, Mary Kuhn and Ruby Mock both carded a net 212.

Fifth place found two more teams scoring the same as Alberta Crofoot, Cynthia Lorentsen, Dip McConnell, Marge Thomas and Anne Hatcher, Evelyn Adamson, Bea Jahn and Marion Brandon each scored a net 215.

Charlotte Deeds, Donna Cook, Jerry Bowrosen and Kay LaFlair were in sixth place with their 216, while seventh place found another tie at 217 between the teams of Viva Pilotto, Mary Sears, Dorinna Tanner, Inez Bowman and Kay Boaz, Barbie Ferguson, Dot Giesey, and Marion Cole.

A 12-week putting tourney ended and taking the best six weeks out of 12 produced the following winners: Dorie Beckman, 164; Mary Kuhn, 165; Lorraine Swift, 170; Roz Vroman, 171; Kay Boaz, 175; Irene Helmer, 178; Marge Simmons and Edie McDaniel, 179; Lil O'Beirne, 180; and Kay Scott, 181.

Botsford is week's athlete

Glenn Botsford, Martin County High School senior varisty football defensive back for the past three years, is the Athlete of the Week selected by Ft. Pierce Jai-Alai.

Botsford went into the Oct. 10 contest with undefeated Boca Raton "not feeling well," according to coach Gary Jones, and still managed to make six individual tackles, intercept one pass, and lead the defense in holding Boca to gains of only 89 yards.

"His individual effort, determination, and pride were above and beyond the call of duty," said Jones.

Marie Stewart sings and sews the blues away

BACKSTAGE OR ONSTAGE Marie Lucas Stewart of Jensen Beach finds her role with the Barn Theater. As well as designing and making costumes for the amateur theater company she can don one of her creations and become a performer. She's currently appearing in the Barn Theater production of "Harvey" — in a costume she made, of course. (Photos by Ailsa Dewing)

OFF THE RACK of the wardrobe room, Marie Lucas Stewart selects the ready-made clothes she can refurbish for a forthcoming production by the Barn Theater. If she can't find what she needs, Marie will create it from whole cloth and from her own design. (Photo by Ailsa Dewing)

BY AILSA DEWING

When Jensen Beach's Marie Lucas Stewart began sewing at the age of 10 she didn't foresee the day she'd be stitching up convicts uniforms or royal robes. But that's because she didn't envision becoming a seamstress for a theater company.

As costumer for the Barn Theater Marie never knows what creations will next require her expertise, both as a seamstress and an actress. For her current bit part as the maid, Miss Johnson, in "Harvey," Marie tacked some lace on an "old black dress" whipped up a cap and a white apron and donned them to play her role.

That bit of creativity was a nothing to Marie who can design period costumes or tailor-make them from a picture and no pattern.

"I just look at the picture and cut to shape," she says, "It's just cutting and fitting," an understatement to even some expert sewers.

Mrs. Stewart is a native of Akron who began sewing while in the sixth grade. One of seven children, she turned to sewing to clothe herself, her four sisters and her friends. She excelled in remaking hand-me-downs that the original owners couldn't recognize.

Her first stage experience was as a ballet student where she also learned to make ballet costumes. "But I never acted before," she says.

When Marie's husband died in 1976 she became despondent and a friend urged her to join the Barn Theater. She joined as a member of the chorus of "Fiddler on the Roof."

"It helped considerably to take away my blues," she recalls.

When the Barn Theater group decided to do "My Three Angels," Masie took on the job of designing and making the convicts' striped suits.

For "The King and I" she created the robes for the 12 royal children as well as the jackets for the Siamese emperor.

"It's not always fine sewing," she explains as she points to the wardrobe of military uniforms and heavy, ornate costumes made from upholstery fabrics.

Then again it can be very fine sewing as she recalls altering a beaded gown donated to the company by Frances Langford Evinrude which had to be altered to fit a performer.

When Marie isn't sewing or performing with the Barn Theater, she's singing with the Jensen Beach Community Chorus, active with the Soroptimists and the American Legion Auxiliary.

But there's one thing Marie doesn't do anymore and that is "Sing the Blues."

IRCC offers LPN-ADN course

Indian River Community College has introduced a transitional program for licensed practical nurses who plan to become registered nurses.

Now, through the Transitional LPN-ADN Program offered at IRCC, LPNs who have at least one year's experience and who meet other criteria for admission, may enroll directly in the second semester of the Associate Degree Nursing Program at IRCC.

This means that LPNs can get the education and background for the registered nurses exam in one year rather than in two.

Criteria for admission to the program are: The applicant must fil for admission to IRCC, including an affidavit of residency, high school and college transcripts, and a $10 application fee. For those who plan to enter this program for Spring Term, 1981, the deadline for applications is Dec. 5, 1980.

Applicants should be licensed graduates of any state-accredited PN program, and have one year of experience after graduation.

Also, applicants must take the Differential Aptitude Test, and have a personal interview.

Those who wish to review and prepare for the DAT and Challenge Exam may do so in the IMTS Health Center on the Main Campus, where evaluation and individualized instruction are available. For more information on the Transition Program, or to set up dates and times to take the tests, call the IRCC Guidance Office, ext. 323.

Barbershoppers set open house

Slip around to the Stuart Women's Club Thursday, October 16, at 8 p.m. and sit in with the Martin County chapter of the barbershop singers. They're having an open house, with entertainment and refreshments. And if you like what you hear, they hope you'll sign aboard with the Martin Mariner chorus.

Entertainment will be furnished by the Mariner chorus under the direction of Rick Neilson. And what would a barbershop quartet party be without barbershop quartets. The Castaways quartet will be on hand. So will "Daddy's Girls", a girls' barbershop quartet from Jupiter High School, who wowed the Florida music educators at their state convention in Tampa last month.

To round off an evening of fun and fellowship there'll be refreshments and Chapter President Carroll Pallen invites all.

$2 million kickoff near

Martin Downs offers arts center land

Just ten days before the Arts Foundation of Martin County kicks off a $2 million fund drive to build a cultural arts center, the developers of Martin Downs gave the center a boost with an offer of the land for the project.

The offer is based upon several contingencies, including site plan approval, all necessary government permits and funding for the completion of the project. If the foundation meets the requirements before January 1, 1982, the land will be transferred.

The offer was good news to Mrs. Dorothy Nabutovsky, president of the arts foundation.

"It will give us the boost we need as we plan our First Annual Evening of the Arts, a $100 a couple ball at Sandpiper Bay on November 1," she said.

The ball will be a private art show, buffet dinner and dancing to the Du chin-Grant Orchestra. A feature of the evening is a speech by George Firestone, Secretary of State of Florida, and a long-time supporter of the arts.

Also, a scematic design for the center will be unveiled by consulting architect Ed Hoon of Stuart.

According to Nabutovsky, the estimated cost of building the structure will approach 4 million dollars. "Our goal is to raise approximately 2 million dollars as there are state and federal grants available, as well as monies acquired from other private foundations that can be added to the total sum," she explained.

"This really gives us the incentive to put forth the effort needed toward achieving these goals. Although it seems like an extremely large sum of money to raise, I feel that if all the people in our community can pull together and pool their resources, we'll all have something we can be proud of," she concluded.

The location of the land was not specified by Martin Downs officials, who commented that the land would most likely be located in the first phase of the development, slated for completion by 1985. In a news release, Martin Downs reported "studies are under way to determine the most suitable of any available parcels."

It was added, "The developers were equally enthusiastic about the idea of having such a facility within their project. The inclusion of the cultural arts center would indeed be in keeping with the image they are now creating."

Avalanche of letters needed for Savannas

BY DICK CAMPBELL

The possibility that the Jensen Savannas endangered lands project might not receive needed state funding has brought a call for an "avalanche of letters" from Dr. Walter Stokes.

Stokes, a driving force behind the effort to save the Jensen Savannas, said that the Monday public hearing in Miami on endangered lands in South Florida offered little hope for the project, ranked 36th and at the bottom of the "wish list" of conservationists in Florida.

Appearing before the Division of State Lands, Stokes, along with Martin County Commissioner Maggie Hurchalla and St. Lucie County Conservation Alliance spokesperson Margorie Silver Adler, the trio heard the request of Dade conservationists for $30 million to buy spoil islands in Biscayne Bay.

There is only $18.5 million left in the fund, out of $240 million bond issue passed in a statewide referendum in 1974.

"We are in deep trouble on the Savannas," Stokes said. He asked that all residents write to the State Selection Committee before final decision date, November 3, to ask that the funding be restored.

In the original plan, the state agreed to set aside $9 million to buy 5,000 acres for the Savannas Wilderness Preserve. The state has acquired 3,500 acres and an additional 1,500 acres are needed to complete the package, at an estimated cost of $3 million.

In Stokes' presentation, he complained that the state had not kept its word to the landowners who had already sold by not providing security of the endangered lands. He cited the growth of the area, the increasing vandalism in the Savannas, the potential increase in land prices and the urbanization of the area in his request for return of the $4.6 million to complete the project.

The funds would buy the needed 1,500 acres and provide a ranger station and proper security for the area.

The final decision will be made by the State Selection Committee on November 3. The recommendations of the committee will then be sent to the Florida Cabinet for approval.

Stokes urged all residents to write to the following persons urging their approval of continued state funding to complete the Savannas Wilderness Preserve.

Col. Robert Brantley
Executive Director
Game and Fresh Water Fish Comm.
Tallahassee, Fl. 32302

Ms. Joan Heggen
Secretary
Dept. of Community Affairs, 2571
Tallahassee, Fl. 32302

Mr. Ross Morrell

Tallahassee, Fl. 32302

Dr. E. J. Gissendanner
Executive Director
Dept. of Natural Resources
3000 Commonwealth Blvd.
Tallahassee, Fl. 32302

Each letter should mention some of the following: The State already has 3,500 of the needed 5,000 acres; State Park Service management of the area is essential to restrain vandalism; surrounding land is under intensive development; local property owners who have sold their land to the State did so with assurances that it would have State protection as a Wilderness Preserve and this promise can not be kept unless funds are soon granted to back it up. The State Park Service has declared what the Preserve can not be managed without certain additional land.

The above named persons are members of the State Selection Committee which will make a final decision on November 3 of projects to be recommended for approval by the Florida Cabinet.

Residents want South Street one way

Martin County commissioners will schedule a public hearing on a petition from South Street residents asking that their street be limited to one-way traffic heading east.

Commissioners heard the petition Tuesday in which residents noted that the narrow width of the street and the speed of the traffic has resulted in several accidents.

Commissioners agreed to conduct a public hearing at the next meeting.

$27,000 asked for Senior Citizens Center

The Senior Citizens Center at Langford Park got an assist from Martin County Commissioners Tuesday who approved a federal grant application for $27,000.

Commissioners authorized a supplemental grant application be submitted for the federal funds.

In other business, commissioners agreed to schedule a workshop session for discussion of the Army Corps of Engineers feasibility study to convey agricultural irrigation waters to St. Lucie County from Lake Okeechobee.

Fire station plans get okay

Construction of a fire station for Hutchinson Island large enough to house two fire trucks and dormitory facilities for firefighters has been approved by Martin County commissioners.

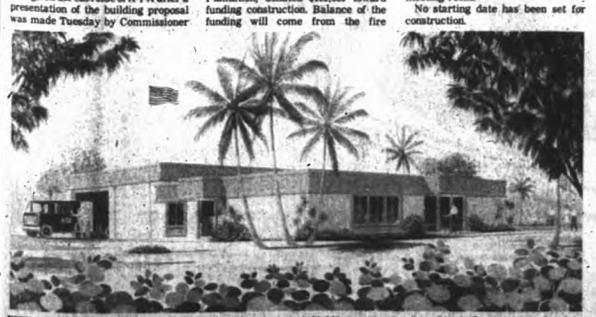
Commissioners approved preparation of the site south of the House of Refuge on the east side of A-1-A after a presentation of the building proposal was made Tuesday by Commissioner Frank Wacha, who also serves as fire commissioner, and Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department Chief Joe Luciano.

The fire station has been in the planning stage since 1974 when Lloyd Dutcher of Dutcher, Higgenbotham and Bass, developers of Indian River Plantation, donated $100,000 toward funding construction. Balance of the funding will come from the fire district.

Chief Luciano describes the planned fire house as having space for two fire trucks with additional space available for housing an ambulance.

A dormitory providing sleeping quarters and kitchen facilities will be included and an area suitable for a meeting room.

No starting date has been set for construction.



FUTURE FIREHOUSE on Hutchinson Island has been given the go-ahead by Martin County commissioners who have authorized the county engineer to prepare the site. A $100,000 contribution from Lloyd Dutcher is on hand to begin the construction on land south of the House of Refuge on the east side of A-1-A.

Fire truck fund is next

A fire station's first need is a fire truck.

Now that plans are underway to begin building the Hutchinson Island fire station, the drive is beginning for funds to buy a ladder truck for new firehouse.

You can't be the first to promise to donate — developers of Sailfish Point and Bryn Mawr got there first.

But you might be third in line to ante up for a fire engine with a ladder that will reach 75 to 100 feet — that's as high as the top story floor on a four-floor story building, Martin County's building height limitation.

What's the going price for an aerial truck? A year-old vehicle can be had for $225,000 and a new one will cost in the neighborhood of $350,000.

Dancing is fun say Len & Betty Brunt

BY ERNIE CURWEN

When seniors retire, they often find they have hidden, undreamed-of talent, such as dancing. They are enticed to a nearby dance, and the first thing they know, they are following their twitching feet onto the dance floor, to do their 'thing.' Most haven't danced since courting days, too busy earning a living; others have never danced at all. But, now they are finding it great fun, so we'll let Len and Betty Brunt tell you all about it.

Len and Betty came down here from Sebring, Ohio in the fall of 1974, when their daughter's friend investigated Ocean Breeze Park and said it was just the place for 'old people.' Then, early in the spring of 1975 they came down unannounced by bus and Orlee Eckland was able to put them up in a spare open-up trailer. With no heat and no lights they darn near froze and Len was ready to go back by next bus. But, Betty said let's give it a one day try. By mid-morning, it was up to 72 and the friendly neighbors had them in for breakfast, so they are still here.

Len was supervisor of new products development at a ceramic plant while Betty was a dental technician when they lived in Deer Lake. Len had 2 brothers and sisters and Betty had 2 brothers (one deceased), also they have a son and daughter, both married, to give them 3 grandchildren. The son is a sales manager and the daughter a school teacher, so they have plenty folks to visit, when they go north each year and to visit them here at their mobile home at 8 NE 9th St.

They had hardly gotten settled when Ruel and Buelah Mertz enticed them down to the club house to watch the square dancing. That was 'it,' and they couldn't get enough. They took additional lessons with caller Jack Hoskens and some round dance lessons too, so they could do 'patterns' between square dance 'tips.' In fact, they were kicking up their heels at every chance, including the Saturday night mixer and ballroom dancing in the park club house.

Then the roof fell in. Len had a heart attack in 1977 and they were 'grounded' for months. But, as soon as the doctor gave an OK, they put on their dancing shoes, this time to the calling of Dal McCory. However, their illness problems weren't over yet, as Len had other yeart troubles and in 1980, Betty had her share. However, a bit cautiously perhaps, they are back at it again, this time with caller Bill Brundage, for both squares and rounds.

So, you can see, if a senior has feet that dance right onto the floor, there is no stopping them once the music starts. When you attend a local dance there is a good chance you will see Len and Betty doing their 'Do-Si-Dos' in a square dance set or gracefully gliding through a pattern dance.

As a parting remark, Len said, "You meet the nicest people square dancing. They are all such good fun to be with and dancing is so darn good for the seniors. It is good exercise, physically and mentally. And, as seniors generally do need exercise, why not do it the easy way, to music."

"Seniors, you better join in," says Betty, "for it's later than you think."

Free flu shots available

The park is filling up fast; and no wonder, as there are near freezing temperatures all over the northland. But, Ocean Breeze is at its best now, with plenty of sunshine, mid-eighty temperatures and a refreshing breeze, all ready to greet the following returnees.

Ken and Verna Belle Bartlett; Arnold and Margaret Sherman; John and Ann Walakenis; Claude and Helen Mansfield; Bert and Evelyn Dandy; Thersa Innis; Del and Armina Swift; Lloyd and Jesse Prowell; Lenard and Mary Ann Blanchard.

Maxwell and Florence Edwards; Frances Reese; Herbert and Libby Leuffgen; Marie Boozel; alice Burkick; Merele and Lillian Bender; Vince and Mary Kubilis; Joe and Ann Ballinghoff; Ann Buck. (Recorded total now, 133.)

FREE FLUE SHOTS will again be available this year, for all seniors 65 and older, and for those 55 and older who have heart, lung, kidney, diabetic, etc problems (bring proof of illness, a prescription bottle will do). By-the-way, it's not the old 'Hong Kong' type this year, but a new variety, the 'Brazil-Singapore-Bangkok.'

The 'shots' will be given every Friday, 1 to 4 p.m. at Martin County Health Dept., per Dr. Archie MacCallister, who called our attention to their new location, 131 E. 7th St. (old post office bldg.).

The item on 'big black bugs' last week, resulted in a few 'sure kill' ideas being submitted. Here's a novel one that works (your reporter saw the proof). Fill a wide mouth jar (one pound peanut butter glass will do) with soapy water and place it outside the entrance where those 'big black bugs' are likely to sneak in. Each morning there may be 1 to 4 good (dead) bugs in the jar. If none at first, try and try again, as if there are bugs around they'll crawl in sooner or later.

Some folks are saving the 'profiles' of OBPers that are being published in the Mirrer, and saving them in that handy park directory that was made up in 1974, by a California photography outfit. It has been 'sort-of' a park bible for the residents, but is now quite out of date and a new one is needed. Maybe, the California outfit will be back, or some local photographer will give this money making idea a try.

Folks are often submitting an item or clipping from home town newspaper. Here's a cute one brought in by Bea Tourville.

I can manage my bifocals
To my dentures I'm resigned
I can live with my arthritis
But oh lord I miss my mind.

20 story condos to go on Island

St. Lucie County will have six, 20-story condominiums within the next two years.

The development, which was recently approved by the St. Lucie County Commission, will be built on Hutchinson Island approximately three miles north of the Martin County line.

The Canadian developers Lynn and Simpson Hollingsworth, along with Hall Fry of Sanibel, have gotten county approval for a total of 648 units.

According to County Development Co-ordinator Gary Ament, the 167 acre tract will have an overall density of 4 units per acre.

The condominiums will be located on the east side of A-1-A on 20 acres and separated by a distance of 225 feet. Facilities include a private clubhouse for each complex, a 9 hole golf course, two handball courts and six tennis courts.

Every apartment on the 2,770 feet of ocean front property is designed with balconies on both the east and west sides. Units are expected to sell between $150,000 to $250,000 with pre-sales beginning in late December.

Although plans for a 40 slip marina went before the board of commissioners, they were not approved. Ament says the county does not want boat traffic damaging river bank mangroves.

Included in phase one of the construction will be the water and sewage treatment plant located on the west side of A-1-A. At the same time, the first tower will go up near the ocean in the center portion of the property.

Construction is due to begin by mid-1981, however Ament says the developers must first receive a permit from the Department of Environmental Regulation to trim the mangroves for the golf course.

Commissioner George Price, the lone voter against the condominium proposal, believes the high-rises will create traffic, sewage, and water problems on Hutchinson Island.

Martin County commissioners, already plagued with congestion from Island traffic on the two existing bridges, have a moratorium in effect.

The future high-rises are predicted to generate between 3,300 to 4,000 additional trips per day over the causeways.

According to Acting Fire Marshal Walter Wile of the St. Lucie County Fort Pierce Fire District, the six condos pose yet another problem. Current fire equipment can reach a maximum of ten stories.

He believes that while the towers will be compartmentalized and include stand pipe systems, "It will not delay the spread of fire."

A stand pipe system is one in which hoses are placed on each floor. In the event of a fire, anyone could turn the valve and have water automatically pumped out of a storage tank on the ground floor.

Wile believes that in event of a fire, many people couldn't handle the force of water that would come through the hose.

"It takes a pretty large person to handle that size hose," he said.

Wile says plans were submitted to the fire board requiring condominiums to be equipped with sprinkler systems, but these plans have been tabled.

Although the county has approved the site plan for the six condos, Wile said that the developers must still submit a set of drawings for building approval to both the Fire Prevention Bureau and the County Building and Zoning Department.

Tony Garland is the week's athlete

Tony Garland, Martin County High School junior, who scored the winning touchdown in Friday's 10-7 contest with Ft. Pierce wins the accolade of "Athlete of the Week."

Garland, playing his first year of varsity football as offensive back, scored on a 47-yard touchdown after an 88 yard rush in which he fended off eight defensive players.

"It was an outstanding individual effort," MCHS Head Coach, Gary Jones, told The Mirror, a co-sponsor of the award.

Tony now joins the growing list of athletes being recognized by the Ft. Pierce Jai-Alai fronton each week from which monthly winners are selected in a four-county area to compete for "Athlete of the Year," a title which includes a $500 scholarship as the award.

When ambulance whizzes by there goes EMT Nellie Cook

BY BERNIE CURWIEN
Tel. 334-0758

It's not easy to be and EMT (Emergency Medical Technician). Diligent study is required to pass a long, stiff examination and it has to be updated every 2 years. But, no wonder, as the EMT is in charge of the team, consisting of a driver and third person. The driver is a qualified CPR (Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation) and a graduate Defensive Driver. The third person is someone in training.

When you see the ambulance whizz by you can be assured there is plenty of skilled help on the way, and very likely Nellie Cook is in charge.

Nellie is a farm girl from Birch Hills, Saskatchewan. In 1960 she married Tom Cook from England and between both of them, they have 6 boys and 2 girls. When on their travel trailer honeymoon in 1969, a fellow camper at Daytona told them they better give Ocean Breeze a try as it was the greatest. So, they did, and for 21 years lived on SW 5th St., making frequent trips back to Canada.

While at OBP they became involved in square dancing and the camera club. Nellie wrote a column for the Stuart News, and Tom wrote one for The Mirror.

Around 1982, Nellie became interested in the "Pink Ladies" as she had had similar experience in a British Columbia hospital and continued to increase her medical knowledge by first aid courses with Al Keaton and Dr. Book.

Therefore she was ready, when in 1985 Harry Hoke started a park ambulance service when a victim of a serious accident was delayed in getting to the hospital. The service continued for years, with Nellie keeping things working smoothly until State regulations made it impossible to operate.

Ambulance aid funds were turned over to the Jensen Samaritan Ambulance service and Nellie went along too. The service grew and later became Greater Jensen Area Samaritan Ambulance Service, Inc.

While Nellie was on duty at the Squad Bldg. just off Savanna Rd, she had time to explain many things. George Krauss is now the president and Eve Wagner is still the secretary, and they have meetings in the squad building the first Wednesday of each month at 7 pm and the public is invited.

Next, Nellie told about "runs and shifts". The operating shifts are from 6:00 am to 6:30 pm and vice versa. It's a long day and at times a rough one, as even in the slack season they have over 80 runs a month, about 3 a day. And, right now, until more winter folks are back, there is a scarcity of EMTs, so often Nellie takes 3 shifts a week. But, she takes it in stride as the ambulance is her life's work and she's good at it.

Then, right in the middle of a sentence, there was a lot of loud "shrieking" and Nellie was gone in a whirl, with a quick "see you later". Later, Nellie showed off the 7 new ambulances and remarked that all the contributions by condos and mobile parks help them obtain the best equipment. Nellie pointed out that the Samaritans have to cover a huge area, just about everything north of the Roosevelt Bridge to beyond the county line, all of Sewalls Point, and up the Island to the Power Plant. Nellie cautioned that if you are just over the county line, you better not usee the 911 (use the old number) as you might get Ft. Pierce service.

This work is very rewarding, she reports. In the case of a signal 7 (a person near death), where the vital signs are lacking, they are in constant communication with hospital and the Civil Defense alert the bridge tenders. Nellie says, "We go like hell."

Nellie brought up this point. Often folks think they can make it to the hospital in their own car, and do. But, if there is any doubt at all they should call the ambulance. It's faster and everything will be ready when they arrive. There will be no standing around waiting.

Concluding Nellie said, "Yes there are a lot of boring hours of waiting and a lot of hard work. It's worth it, and much more."

We salute Nellie, and all the Samaritans.

The hospital answer: let them all compete

The recent denial by the state of all three applicants for building a health-care facility in Port St. Lucie really should come as no surprise. For it to surprise some as if did is due, no doubt, to the size of the city—some 35,000— and that there are no hospitals or clinics in a city which feels it should have its own and can afford one, or more.

But the state Office of Community Medical Facilities was faced with three very different applications for a certificate of need—each applicant wanting to start a qualitatively different health-care facility, an apples and oranges choice. For the state to have approved one of the applications meant the state selecting among 1) the medicine-using hospital; or 2) an osteopathic non-drug-using facility; or 3) an out-patient clinic where the patient is basically his or her own therapist.

The Tallahassee administrators appear eminently reasonable in balking at deciding from the outside what Port St. Lucie should have. There were no opinion polls of the people of the community to indicate their preference. And no community served by only an osteopathic-teaching hospital was offered as an example of clintele satisfaction. And no indication of how big a community can be and still be effectively cared for by an out-patient clinic was offered as a guideline.

In general, to say there is no unanimity of opinion on how to treat all ailments is an understatement in the complex and ofttimes perplexing field of human health. No one group of methods seems pragmatic enough to rate priority, though surely the drug approach is unequalled in its scientific underpinning. Sure, medical treatment works, but then sometimes it doesn't. Osteopathic methods work but not always. Others — chiropractic, acupuncture, Scientology, Christian Science, faith healing, hypnosis, etc., have their adherents.

To select one method of restoring health, or providing the right conditions so that nature can restore health as some are wont to say, requires a criterion which obviously the state administrative experts feel they do not have.

As a compromise, perhaps the Administrative Hearing Officer might grant all three applications on their appeal and limit each, say, to 30 beds (or the clinical equivalent). That would keep the total capacity close to the guidelines of the regional health council. The people in Port St. Lucie would then have a choice and there would be some hard results to determine which of the general approaches could be selected for expansion as the mainstream of health care.

More island dumping

The recent approval of six twenty-story condominiums on the southern end of Hutchinson Island in St. Lucie County by that county commission is an affront to the people of this entire area.

With no planning for traffic, impact on the area, water and sewage, and emergency services, the St. Lucie County Commission showed its naivete by approving the development of over 648 units within three miles of the Martin County line.

One commissioner even had the gall to say that road improvements always are ten years behind growth anyway. It is a poor attitude toward planned growth.

With the Florida Department of Transportation projecting 1988 before improvements to A1A can be made, the loading up of the island with high density development seems a terrible idea.

One cannot fault the developer. His job is to plan and sell. We can fault the St. Lucie County Commission for not providing needed planning.

On top of all this is the fact that the St. Lucie Fire District can only service ten floors high. In case of fire, the last eight floors should exit through the flames to join together on the twelth floor and pray.

We have dealt with the problem of bridge access to the island before, at length. St. Lucie County seems in no hurry to push for a bridge at Walton Road. As the population on the island climbs, and the development of Port St. Lucie continues to break all records, and the commercial development of U.S. 1 increases, the bridge is more and more needed. It is needed for access to and exit from the island.

The Jensen Beach Bridge is already heavily traveled. Procrastination by the Department of Transportation continues to create bottlenecks for motorists at A-1-A, Indian River Drive and in downtown Jensen Beach.

A new bridge at Walton Road is a must, and all efforts to get one built should be used. One hope for the future lies in the upcoming election. Candidates for the county commission should have a knowledge of and consideration and planning for the south county.

The residents of the south county area should not vote for a candidate who does not make a commitment to the planning needs and bridge access to Hutchinson Island.

Neglect of the island's south end had been the policy of the St. Lucie County Commission for many years. It was several years after Martin County completed its end of A-1-A before the north end of the island at Ft. Pierce was linked to the south end.

There were few improvements as thousands of recreational vehicle lots were approved and constructed, and more and more high rise condos built on the south end. There is still no permanent police or fire protection, or ambulance service there.

It is as if St. Lucie County stops at Ocean Village.

A library addition paid for by all

Expansion plans of the Port St. Lucie Library are getting under way, and the $94,000 addition will add 17,000 volumes to the library, and the necessary furniture and space to handle the increase.

The funding for the expansion has come, as it should, from all sectors of the community. The people put their money on the line through an active promotional campaign, raising $17,000 in donations from the residents and businessmen. The City of Port St. Lucie added another $20,000, and St. Lucie County and the library association will add the balance.

This is a perfect example of how the expansion of cultural values can be done; a combination of the people, the city, the county and the library association.

We are proud of what has been done. The effort offers hope for the future, of all groups working together to make the community a better place in which to live.

The rope remains

The unfortunate death of a young Port St. Lucie boy adds impetus to the need for safety along the shore of the North Fork of the St. Lucie River.

The 12-year-old youth swung out over the river on a rope to "splash a boat", and struck the side of the boat when he entered the water. His death was saddening, unfortunate, and a needless reminder of the need for more safety.

That a rope is tied to a tree on a waterway is not generally that unsafe. But to have that rope tied to a tree over a very busy highway for boats is unsafe.

Other youngsters have indicated that they will continue to swing out over the waterway, having their brand of fun. Who is to say how long it will take for another accident to happen.

The rope, for safety sake, should be removed.

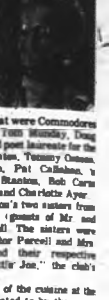
Happy Birthday



I went to a birthday party the other night that would rival the president's in size and zest for enthusiasm. The enthusiasm was genuine, too, in Happy Birthdaying their subject. Everybody at the Pelican knew Mr. Paul.

The subject of all the revelry was Don Paul, who for the past seven years has been manager of the Pelican Yacht Club in Fort Pierce and who in all that time has seen the growth anywhere but up.

Don's popularity with the members of the Pelican proves unquestionable as the big newly expanded dining room filled to the gunnels for the event. Tables were decorated with balloons, and members packed every table in the house, to help celebrate the 65th natal day of the tall handsome manager who had been so efficient in running the club for so many years.

All of the veteran members turned out for the celebration, including the commodores who were there to "roast" the honoree.

Many accomplishments have been achieved under Paul's leadership. Among them have been expanding and redecorating the bar, expanding the dining room, enlarging the kitchen, and expanding the ladies' room.

The recreation facilities too, have been expanded, what with the volley ball court and enlargement of the docking facilities to accommodate more large yachts. The Pelican has become one of the finest yacht clubs on the east coast, with a closed membership of 325.

At the "roasting table," putting Mr. Paul in the hot seat were Commodores and their wives Tom Munday, Doug Kelly (who turned post laureate for the occasion) Bill Yates, Tommy Osteen, David Haughton, Pat Callahan, a friend, Howard Stanton, Bob Carr and friends, Sid and Charlotte Ayer.

Guests were Don's two sisters from Pompano Beach (guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jon Scarcelli. The sisters were Mrs. Mantis Victor Parcell and Mrs. Bill Russell and their respective spouses and "little" Jon," the club's former maitre'd.

The excellence of the cuisine at the Pelican was attested to by the menu that birthday evening: steak and lobster which was a top-notch as the service displayed in serving it. A man shouldn't have to head up his own birthday party, and he didn't. An expert, Mr. Paul's much lauded maitre d' Averett Grace took over the job, while bartenders Pete and George kept the juices flowing from the bar. The whole Pelican staff jumped in to make it the best party of the year.

The crowning gift was a packet of $500 in $100 bills as a thank you offering for a job well done. What will he use it for?

"I'm going to take my wife out to dinner with it," came the prompt reply.

Letter to the editor

To the Editor

This is a love story, and like the song says, it goes on and on.

It goes on and on alright, for eight long years it's gone on and one, and as long as I'm hearing my soul. I might as well tell the relationship is gay. Even worse, it is all one sided.

Sounds just like you typical everyday soaper with a "goodbye world" ending, right? Wrong. It is the joy of my life, and to prove it a year ago I moved in lock, stock and barrel.

If you could see her though, you'd understand. Her breathtaking beauty stuns you! I, on the other hand, bear a remarkable resemblance to Benjamin Franklin, and my main vice up until then consisted of my quarter a game penny a down pount, Tuesday morning bridge club, whose only break with tradition came about when we decided to switch the ten o'clock break from coffee to gin!

She is complex, moody and totally unpredictable. Like an untamed thing, she can become wild, tumultuous and violent at one moment, and change before your very eyes into an innocence so pure and undefiled, you heart breaks for her vulnerability.

She can brag guests of wealth and industry to their knees.

I brought somebody to their knees once. He was a born again creationer who tried collecting through inspirational appeal which bore sinister overtones as to my salvation.

He lost.

Fragile as a piece of bone china on the surface, time and again she has endured punishment leaving her so battered and beaten, you'd swear she was down for the count, only to emerge not only more magnificent than before, but bearing her scars like a queen!

I too, have been visited by adversity in this life of tears, and while maybe I haven't carried my wounds like a badge of honor, I learned two important lessons. Never leave the house wearing glassed underwear, and no matter what it costs, have the fender fixed before he comes home!

She was born liberated, a free spirit who could never by wholly owned by anyone. She takes all comers. Living with her, dreams and fantasies buried long ago with your youth are miraculously resurrected, and like magic she will make you believe that maybe all of lifes promises do come true.

What's the lady's name? Actually she isn't a lady at all, well not the flesh and blood kind anyway. She is an island. Hutchinson Island, that is.

It would, to say the least, be a joy to able to close the above with a "and they lived happily ever after" ending. Unfortunatley these days, the island is beset with problems, the latest of which has more than a few noses out of joint.

It seems the Martin County Commissioners agreed that there were enough bad smels emanating from the mangrove swamps without adding to it by having garbage trucks driving up and down A1A.

However since they are obviously immortal, they figured cutting the number in half would have to be an improvement.

So with noses in the clouds, they gave a "franchise" to Nichols Sanatation. It makes good "sense" right? But is also makes good dollars for Nichols who promptly raised the rates up to fifty per-cent higher.

Now the condo associations are raising a stink of their own.

The one thing the commissioners want to avoid at election time is anything "smelly", so they had better start sniffing the air a little more or they could very well be cutting off their estimatable noses to spite their face.

No place like home here

If you've never wondered why this is called the Treasure Coast, you've never tried to find a place to live here that falls within the income level of upper middle poverty.

After a month of searching for a modest hermetite – a two-room tent would suffice – I may be driven to extremities (with no guarantee there's any thing available there). Meanwhile, I'm thinking of camping out on a causeway just to get picked up by the law. That could get me 30 days in jail and a repeat offense could get me another 60 days, which should at least get me through the tourist season.

It all reminds me of that old joke about the highway that's so busy the only way to get to the other side is to be born there. But being born again near the Martin St. Lucie county line doesn't include the promise of an efficiency here on earth. Or even within commuting distance.

My wants are simple and that's part of the problem. Everything is double: two bedrooms, two baths, and two incomes needed to pay the going rate.

Whatever became of those absconders of the good old days who would move out in the night leaving an unexpired lease? Where are they when you need them?

Nowadays if you see somebody moving furniture out by pick-up truck in the dead-of-night, it doesn't mean somebody's moving out, it's just somebody stealing furniture.

But the mind bloweingest housing of all hereabouts is the mobile home which isn't mobile because there's no place to mobile it to. Elsewhere, a 10-year-old model may be thought of as a swayback. Locally, it's considered vintage, having absorbed some of the land value it's growing on.

Luckily, my problem doesn't loom large at the moment. The most I occupy is mine until a snowbird who phoned ahead arrives and pushes me out in the cold.

Meanwhile, I do have a lead on a vacant house. I saw in the classifieds that someone's St. Bernard is missing. I'm third on the list. If the dog doesn't return there are only two ahead of me that want to rent the kennel. Maybe we can share it.

Such is the power of the press that even before my lamentations on the lack of a home sweet home hit the streets JB Fire Chief Joe Luciano came to my rescue. Of course, the freshness is clear by and I am a very loud lamentor so he might just have heard me crying into the wind.

The Lucianos maintain a cozy complex of efficiencies and by one of those coincidences that logic can't deal with they are planning to vacate in December to take up residence in Pinelake Village, the very moment I will become unsheltered.

It's all for the best. I'm sure the St. Bernard had a leash on the kennel.

After running the story a couple of weeks ago about what happens when you dial 911, we got two telephone calls pointing out an error. The civil defense office that handles emergencies in Jensen Beach isn't located in Fierce. In Martin County it's in Ft. Stuart. Sorry about that. Always like to get things straight.

I'm almost afraid of that last paragraph. Being a stranger in town everybody goes out of their way to help me find my way around. I'd no sooner submitted this week's filler for the feet of the op-ed page when Campbell was kind enough to point out that it's Ft. Pierce and Stuart and not vice versa.

"I was being subtle," I chied him.

My subtlety was lost on the typesetters also. They patiently rearranged the words as they ought to be without unduly embarrassing me by pointing out my error.

Maybe I should have gone with Port St. Jensen or Lucie Beach.

Girl Bassers

THOSE BASS'N GAL ANGLERS are making their mark. Elouise Stewart of Broken Bow, Okla., fishing in an area tournament, broke the Oklahoma smallmouth bass record by boating a smallmouth weighing five pounds, one and three-quarters ounces.

I'm going to get a chance to see just how those Bass'n Gals get it done under tournament conditions when I participate in the Bass'n Gal Classic on the Ouachita River near Monroe, La. this week as an observer. The competition is on Thursday and Friday, and features the top 28 Bass'n Gals for 1980. We'll have it all for you next week. Stay tuned!

Bill Salomone of 10102 S A1A, Jensen Beach, is eligible to win a free trip to Scotland, and $1,000 as a result of scoring a hole in one at the Martin County Golf and Country Club recently.

Salomone's ace qualified him for the 20th annual Rusty Nail Hole-in-one Sweepstakes, a national competition sponsored by the Drambuie Liquer Co. of Edinburgh, Scotland, with the winner to be announced early in 1981.

A "rusty nail" for the benefit of non-drinkers, is a twosome of drambuie and scotch.

AN ENERGY SAVING CHECK LIST

QUESTION: Could you provide me with some tips on energy savings? I know that we all must participate in our nation's energy conservation efforts. But I also would like to reduce the expenses of running my apartment house investment.

ANSWER: I'll be happy to provide a brief list of energy saving procedures. But first, recognize that energy conservation requires more than just Your interest and motivation. It is also important to have the support of your tenants. Often, an ongoing education program for your tenants is an important aspect of a successful conservation effort.

These programs can be quite effective when they offer specific suggestions to tenants. For example, you might point out the following energy saving measures for the kitchen: (1) Defrost refrigerators when frost in the freezer compartment is about a quarter of an inch thick. (2) Keep refrigerator coil surfaces clean to provide maxim. m cooling. (3) Fill the refrigerator to capacity so that it operates most economically. But be careful not to overload. (4) Do not set the refrigerator or freezer at a setting which is colder than necessary. (5) Use glass or ceramic baking dishes. These transfer heat better than metal. And they can be used in an oven set at about 25 degrees lower than required by metal dishes. (6) Cover pots and pans. This means less heat is used and allows for lower heat setting. (7) Make sure the oven is turned off after use. (8) Use small appliances, such as toaster ovens or crockpots, for small meals. (9) Fill the dishwasher to capacity before operating.

These are but a few examples of effective energy saving practices. Like many conservation measures, they are relatively inexpensive, involve little sacrifice, and are sometimes so obvious that we often overlook them.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

Photography is Fracapane's field

BY CATHIE MACAULAY

Charlie Fracapane is not just another flash in the pan. In fact much of his life has been spent in the dark. Darkroom that is.

Charlie is a photographer who has been in charge of the Mirror darkroom operations for almost a year.

The idea to stand behind a camera came early to him. Although his large family was involved in the construction business and expected him to help carry on the company, Charlie had different ideas.

At the age of 11 he got a job at Hutchins Studio in New Jersey for $3.50 a week. Every day after school and every weekend he helped the photographer. By the time he graduated from high school Charlie was already well experienced in the dark room.

He then went to New York to work for a commercial art studio. The George Lane Commercial Art Studio had many top notch clients under its care. One of them was Norman Rockwell. Well-known for his simplistic image of the American, Rockwell also used his talents for advertising. Charlie says he'd sometimes photograph his subject, and paint from the prints Charlie made. Charlie still has some of those shots at his patient's home in New Jersey.

Much has changed since the early days when a photographer carried a hundred pounds of equipment around with him, and old view finder cameras came equipped with glass plates that imprinted shots instead of the cut film used today.

Before strobe lights came into being, flash bulbs was used to achieve necessary lighting around a subject. Before the flash bluh, flash powder was used. According to Charlie, the powder was measured into a pan, depending upon the room size. Unfortunately for the photographer, the first shot was usually the last. Charlie says that the room would immediately fill with smoke. The fire department was sometime called by unknowing neighbors.

"We had to get out fast," says Charlie.

Times changed, and flash bulbs replaced powder. Cut film and 35 millimeter cameras enabled photographers to eliminate glass plates and cumbersome equipment.

"It was a Godsend to us," says Charlie.

Flash bulbs still posed their particular problems. Charlie cites one incident in which he was photographing a church wedding. With new bulbs inside his right coat pocket and used ones in the left side, he clinked his way down the aisles. Later, as he was driving away, down the then cobblestone roads, the bulbs knocked together and Charlie was at once in the midst of one gigantic flash. Fortunately, those days are gone.

Another large step in progress was the invention of scenascope. The brilliant mind of Walt Disney developed single-framed automation, which was the basis for his many films. Charlie was working for CBS at the time and tells of the lengthy process the animation entailed.

He says visa scope is an advancement of the old-time nickelodeon slide shows. The idea is to take a still object and bring it to life. Charlie cites the well-known Lucky Strike commercial where the pack of cigarettes danced to the music. The short ad entailed 2,000 drawings. Each time a drawing was made, it was single-framed on camera. When all the frames were combined, the subject appeared to be moving.

From animated still life, Charlie went into the world of film-making. Working for Twentieth Century Fox in New York, Charlie acted as cameraman for many films including "You've Got to Stay Happy" with Jimmy Stewart and Eddie Albert. "Slaughter on 10th Avenue", was yet another.

For Charlie, his career in photography took him throughout the country and eventually to Florida. Although he had vacationed here for many years, it was his wife Mary who sparked his desire to make the move permanent. Coincidentally, a friend of 35 years approached Charlie to ask for his help. Although the man was experienced behind a desk for the color photography company in Hialeah, he needed Charlie's experience to manage the 183 employees as well as the dark room production. Charlie accepted his offer.

After five years, Charlie decided to retire. He and Mary moved to Port St. Lucie where he put his early construction experience into practice.

Much of the work he did personally, and except for a few finishing touches, their home is complete. But Charlie wasn't satisfied. Retirement didn't suit him. There remained one facet of photography that he hadn't delved into. Newspaper journalism. He decided to work for the Mirror. Although he admits the darkroom brings him back to his younger days, Charlie still enjoys being in the business of bringing photographs to life.

Definitely, the Mirror darkroom enthusiasts every bit of expertise he has acquired in the field.

Much has changed since the days of Browne cameras and flash bulbs. Charlie has seen and worked with the best of them. Techniques may be advanced, equipment more technical, but through it all he says "A camera is a camera, no matter what."

He see the field of photography being continually specialized. "The competition is far more difficult," he says, and add that "A lab tech can make or break a photographer."

"A camera is a camera, no matter what." But in the case of Charlie Fracapane, the darkroom magician, expertise triumphs over all.

CHARLIE FRACAPANE, director of the Mirror darkroom operations, takes a moment out from his recent lecture to the staff on the finer points of photography. Charlie has been with the Mirror for almost a year and brings a wealth of experience with him. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)

AN ORGANIST in his spare time, Charlie Fracapane enjoys relaxing in his home in Port St. Lucie by playing any number of his favorite melodies. Charlie did a great deal of the construction work for the house he and his wife Mary plan to retire in. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)

Our Recreation Director, Lena Black has returned to the Park. So things will liven up. Already notices are up on the bulletin board on November activity starting in the recreation. And the snowbirds are returning as thirteen couples last week. They are – Roy & Bertha Lamon, Austin & Mae Williams, John & Grace Carson, David & Doris Freer, La Verne & Mildred Beatley, Dan & Dee Funch, Lena & Bob Black, Harry & Avondelle Norman & Marie Granstaff, Jim & Martha Lewis, Clarence & Bertha Oulette, Elsie Schaub, Cecil and Beryle Roy.

The H.Out mixed bowling team on Wednesday night Oct. 8 at Jensen Lanes won 4 points. They are surely doing well so far, also were sporting their new bowling shirts.

Our polling place, 15 precinct in the recreation hall drew a good amount of voters in the primary Oct. 7, nearly one-third of the registered. There are so many not yet returned.

Mr. Mrs. Roy Lamon have come back as permanent residents. Also Evelyn Christman van Bere. Evelyn will soon be an owner. Our family is growing each year.

Cecil and Beryle Roy pulled in Sunday, glad to be back in the park again.

Helen Allison's daughter-in-law Gayle lost her grandmother, Mrs. Jesse Smith on Oct. 7 after a lingering illness. Condolences to the family.

Bob Long, ably assisted by Art Nagy and Bob Royal, did a fine cement job under the back of his trailer. Later, Bob cooked sausage over the fire for his co-workers and friends.

Anniversaries congratulations to Barbara & Arthur Gunderson, 10-20; Lillian & George Bares, 10-21.

Happy Birthday Wishes to Evelyn Lang, 10-20; Frank Gilbert, Irving Ringer, Lee Stall, 10-21; Helen Knechtges, Dee Finch, Reg Turner, Jr. 10-22; Thomas Jr. O'Mara, 10-23.

This summer passed quickly for Peg and Reg Turner with many guests enjoying their hospitality. Dottie and Jack Smith of Holiday Out, spent a weekend with the Turners and they all enjoyed seeing Longwood Gardens near Kennett Square together. The Smiths had been touring the western states in their motor home. While in the Grand Tetons in Wyoming they stopped to visit Turner's charming daughter Anne who is a forest ranger headquartered in Jackson Hole. Rosalie Bryson and Tom Murphy also of Holiday Out were dinner guests of the Turners. Now Peg and Reg are enroute to Holiday Out with stops enroute to visit family and friends in Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia.

We will have a new writer from the North End. She is Virgina Stratford on lot 431, phone 229-2971. Please call her or stop by and give her your news. Or you can still give it to me, whichever is most convenient for you. Ginny is well known and I am very happy to have her join us. Let's keep the news flowing from the North End. And thanks to Betty Lester for her help.

Irene Hamm, of Boston, after her short stay in Martin Memorial Hospital. Now comes the healing and husband George is a grand nurse, I hear.

The Wednesday Night mixed bowling team of Holiday Out, at Jensen Lanes won four points on Oct. 15. It just happened to be Jack McConnell's birthday too.

Buck Freer is entertaining his brother Lester and wife Hilda, from Wallkill, N.Y., for a week. It is their first visit here to the park and they are pleasantly impressed with our park.

Ethel and Bob Schuldhorn entertained 10 guests at a beach bonfire on Monday, October 13. Served hot dogs and refreshments. I hear that it really was a fun night, of course the singing was a good wind up. Shades of Halloween.

Venture Three

Among recent arrivals of lot owners to Venture Three are Bud and Yvonne Wenecke who took part in their daughter's wedding in the White Mountains of New Hampshire. Adjusting to life on the Indian River, sailing, swimming both in our pool and the Atlantic, starting the Exercise Class six days a week, joining the Sewing Class on Mondays as well as other classes elsewhere. Yvonne enthusiastically invites you other girls to do the same.

The Murphys were happy with their new motor home, traveling to the Georgia Mountains, then on to New England to become reacquainted with their three grandsons and visiting friends in Connecticut.

Other lot owners seen about Venture Three are Rose Curth, Nell Tobin, the DeSmits (now settled in Venture Harbour), as well as Bill and Aldyth Goetz who are back from a lovely cool vacation in the North Carolina mountains.

Bud and Lou Press who have had a hectic summer with accidents, bad luck and illness bringing them back to Venture Three earlier than they planned have finally left for a trip North.

New lot owners Ray and Valarie Dombrenski having spent a few weeks in Venture Three have returned to their home in Brighton, Michigan and the working world, but promised to return during the holidays.

Friends of Clyde and Lola Bonar were happy to see them recently at Venture Three and hear all the good things about Barefoot Bay.

Help! Fresh magazines and books are needed for the Venture Three library. As of now the library area is full of flea market drop-offs. A good big book case would be welcome.

CLOSE UP OF JIGS—Jack Eckersley of the Martin County Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America holds up two cards of his snook jig that will be distributed soon as part of a membership drive by the chapter. The jigs, designed and made by Eckersley, have proved to be highly effective lures for snook. (Dick Lundin photo)

Lures for members is Walton League effort

The Martin County Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America feels that it needs more members and has opted for a new fishing lure as the promotional "gizmo" that will swell the ranks of the chapter, now some 50 strong.

Chapter president is Hugh Furman, Jack Eckersley is vice president, George Hansel is secretary and Herb Cory is treasurer, but it's chapter Vice President Eckersley whose jigs will be used for the promotional campaign.

He said he has been working on his jig for some two years but only a year ago settled on a one-ounce lead head and the streak of red in the nylon "feather." With 500 already manufactured in his little garage shop, Eckersley says he'll make another 500 before shutting down production for the promotional campaign.

"We don't want them sold. It's a promotional ploy to get new members for the chapter. Many of our present members are old and some are somewhat disabled. We need to expand our membership to bring in people with new ideas and new energies to further Izaak Walton ideals and goals," he said.

The chapter plans to have the tackle shops that helped with the recent Youth Tournament distribute the jigs, perhaps as a part of a shop sales promotion, Eckersley added.

The Jiggerike, a hand-tied lure, is made specifically for snook and channel bass (redfish) but is also effective for bluefish, flounder and other predators foraging for baitfish.

"The 'Ikes' are a national organization of fishermen, hunters and conservationists. Why don't you join us," Eckersley urged?

COLONIAL MANTEL is all ready to go, with its stack of Pennsylvania white birch logs. It came out of the old Washington House in Baltimore.

MASSIVE QUARTZ and a cedar mantel adorn this fireplace located in the Rice's trophy room. Brought back by their children who travelled to Mexico, the hearth is complete with a crane for hanging kettles. It is one of Peter Rice's favorite. (Portured)

Plenty of room for stockings

Story by Sally Latham and photos by Cathie Macaulay

If Santa Claus gets a bit fuddled during his visit to the Peter Paul Rices of Harlow Street in Port St. Lucie, it's small wonder he has six fireplaces to hang stockings on.

From the outside, the Rice home doesn't appear over-turretted or over-chimneyed. In fact, the attractive stone-front home has more the appearance of a Pennsylvania farmhouse. The big surprise comes inside.

In every room one finds a mantel, of every type and description. And none of them seems out of place.

Take the mantel in the trophy room, for example. Of a misty massive quartz, it has a crane for hanging kettles, and is a giant cedar mantel brought home from Mexico by sons Peter Paul Rice Jr. and Kerry Rice.

In the dining room time turns to colonial with a very old fireplace with a heavy beveled mirror. The Rices acquired this one from an old Baltimore home built in the 1800's. They found the elegant piece in a Maryland antique shop.

Some of the grandiose collection are sheerly for show, like the colonial piece and the purely decorative piece they found in Washington.

One of the most historic of the Rice collection is one dismantled from a building on 97th Street in Washington. The building was taken down to make way for the new Eisenhower Center. It originally had a gold and rope design.

Only two of the Rice collection are non-imports — one a fireplace bought locally, for purely decorative purposes, and a second more practical, a fireplace grille Pete and Pauline are building together, for grilling steaks and hamburgers.

All this fetish about mantels grew out of Pauline's childhood. A room simply wasn't a room without a fireplace in it. She grew up in a small Pennsylvania town where fireplaces were the only way to heat. She transmitted that love to her home in Florida.

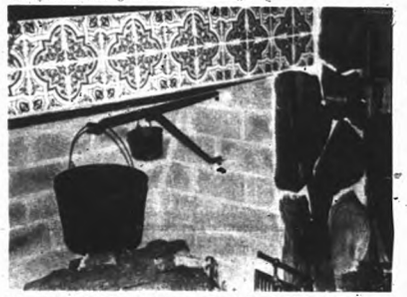
Peter R. Rice, an educator and administrator retired to Port St. Lucie after 35 years with Sidwell Friends School. He joined the Sidwell staff in 1945 following his honorable discharge from the U.S. Army where he had served as flight officer in the European Theatre. Before his enlistment he received his BS degree from Mansfield from State Teachers' College at Mansfield, Pa. He later earned his master's degree from George Washington at Washington, D.C.

Rice's work in the educational field took the couple on extensive travels in Europe in the field of progressive educational work. He was so involved in progressive day camp operation that he bought Echo Hill which specialized in a camping program for six years.

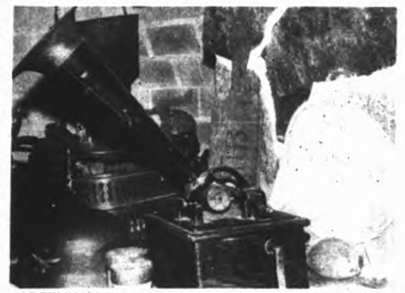
The camp is now being run by son Peter P. Rice Jr.

Mrs. Rice has as deep an interest in history in the making as does her husband.

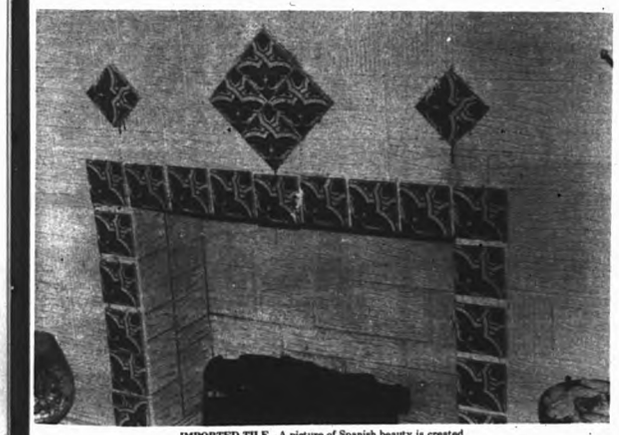
It was her grandfather, in fact, who worked with Thomas Edison on development of the mutes on an organ. Much of his work was extended to wiring it. One might easily call the household Harmony House with the blurn of young voices blended with the tonal magic of mechanical music. No, Santa should have no trouble in finding it.



ORIGINAL FIXTURE—One of the prime reasons for a fireplace is to heat water for washing. Here's a lovely original sample of a bucket and crane used to heat the water for washing.



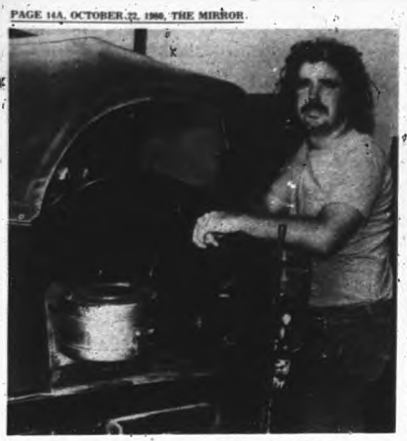
OLD PHONOGRAPH rests next to the fireplace that is in the den of the Rice's home. It is in keeping with so many of the other antiques that are found in their home in Port St. Lucie.



IMPORTED TILE—A picture of Spanish beauty is created from tile brought back from Mexico imported by the Rices' sons from Mexico.

BARBEQUE GRILL—A beautiful grill is the product of Peter and Pauline Rice. Although Pauline admits they both had a little problem meeting bricks in the center, the finished product is nothing but perfection.

COMPLETE DISPLAY—This white and French gold mantel is accessorized by complete early fireplace needs — the bellows, cannonball "firedogs," and shovel-broom and tong set.



BETTER DAYS are yet to come for this 1925 Rolls Royce when it once more becomes a Silver Ghost. Lying on the front seat are the silver headlights. Once owned by Gen. Jack Pershing, it was acquired by Ed Kirkhart, who, with the aid of Ed, Jr., intends to renovate it.

EQUAL RIGHTS include buffing, polishing and sandblasting the finish off old cars for Tasha Hubeny, an MCHS senior who works weekends and after school learning auto body repair and finishing at Kirkhart's AAA shop.

THE FLYING LADY, the heavy silver hood ornament that identifies a classic Rolls Royce, seems to have flown but the familiar lines of a Rolls are easily recognizable.

MAHOGANY DASHBOARD is checked out by Ed Kirkhart. There seem to be gauges for everything, he noted, including an altimeter.

Old cars mean business

BY AILSA DEWING

Collecting antique automobiles has become an American pastime. Those who can afford it acquire old cars and refurbish them - rebuilding them piece by piece. Others may settle for repainting and reupholstering, cosmetic glossing. And even those who don't own an antiquemobile themselves seem to enjoy looking at them.

The popularity of oldtime cars has given rise to a string of new business and rekindled interest in some old crafts. In Jensen Beach, it's providing Ed Kirkhart and his brother, Butch, with a sideline at their AAA Paint and Body shop.

Inside and outside the garage on Industrial Boulevard, old timers from the 20s and 30s are parked alongside today's sportier models. They're all there to have their battle scars smoothed out and painted over but there's one prime difference. The paint may be long gone from the old flivvers, worn away by weather and neglect but their metal bodies aren't as rust corroded as today's cars. The heavy metal has withstood old age.

"They use tin today," explains Ed. The old bodies are easier to work with. The metal doesn't shrink when you take a torch to it."

Revamping yesteryear's autos is a labor of love for Ed-Kirkhart who's been at it since he was 16 when his father, also Ed Kirkhart, first began acquiring antique cars.

It's a lucrative business says Ed, because a complete refurbishing will take between 2,000 and 4,000 hours. But it's not the bread-and-butter of body repair work.

"Most antique car owners don't have the ready cash to go ahead with a renovation from start to finish. It's kind of a pay-as-you-go proposition," Kirkhart says.

Most of Kirkhart's jobs on old cars call for renovation rather than restoration, he says. Only the classics, such as Rolls Royces, Packards, Hudsons and Pierce Arrows are worth renovating — completely disassembling down to the last nut and bolt and painstakingly rebuilding, duplicating the original upholstery and replacing missing parts.

The depression era Chevies and Fords, interesting as they are, usually get by with a new finish, a replaced engine, and new interior — all of which can be purchased from firms that specialize in making replacement parts for the pre-World War II working man's cars.

"Today you could build yourself a Model T by buying all the parts," says Ed, but it wouldn't be vintage.

Duplicating parts for classic cars, however, isn't as simple. Replacement parts usually have to be recast using an original part to make the mold. Progress on a renovation is often held while the owner's searching for a duplicate model with an owner willing to loan a piece of the car, Kirkhart explains.

And the recasting is expensive because the metal needed may well be brass or silverplated.

Among the metalworkers who lend their talents to restorations are band instrument repairers, experts at reworking fine metals.

Upholstering craftsmen have also found a new area for their art, recreating the elegant button-tufted diamond-quilted designs that once graced car seats. Such craftsmen are now in great demand by classic auto owners.

There is one auto accessory, however, which is never duplicated — the radiator ornament on an early model Rolls Royce known as the Flying Lady. Crafted of silver, the Flying Lady has become so valuable that owners don't even display her at auto shows. It's accepted that the owner of an early Rolls has the ornament in his or her possession, says Kirkhart.

Whether renovating a classic or refinishing a less costly antiquemobile, the right color paint is called for and Kirkhart dispells some myths about early car colors.

"People think that all the early Fords were black, but that's not so. From 1908 until 1912 Fords were painted blue, red, green or white. It was only between 1913 and 1927 that Model T's came in black only."

As for the classics of the late '20s and into the '30s, they were painted whatever color the owner selected, says Kirkhart.

One old car awaiting Kirkhart's expertise is his own 1929 Model A but even that doesn't rate the excitement of another antique that's come into his life: a Silver Ghost Rolls Royce purportedly once owned by Gen. "Black Jack" Pershing, of World War I fame.

Recently acquired by Kirkhart's father, the fabulous classic has deteriorated into a dull black hulk with torn and ragged upholstery. Its traditional toolbox is missing and it's been shorn of its original mahogany running boards.

But young Ed Kirkhart can envision it as it will be one day with its silver gray paint and red handcrafted upholstery, its silver headlights and fittings dazzling bright — a masterpiece among autos.

UNMASKED Tasha Hubeny is seen to be not "one of the boys" but she's just not another pretty face either.

Orange Bowl Junior Queen tryouts set

The Stuart Recreation Dept., in cooperation with the Junior Woman's Club of Stuart, will sponsor the Junior Orange Bowl Queen Elimination Contest to be held Monday, Oct. 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the recreation center in Stuart.

The purpose of the contest, which is open to young ladies, residents of Florida born after Jan. 1, 1967, and prior to Oct. 1, 1980, is to choose a representative typical teenage girl in the Junior High School age of 12-13. Ann Peterson of the Junior Orange Bowl committee from Coral Gables said, "We are not looking for glamour, but rather for fresh wholesome good looks and personality."

Interested young ladies may pick up the 1980 Junior Orange Bowl preliminary queen contest official application at the Stuart Recreation Center or the Stuart Middle School. Completed application forms must be turned in no later than 4 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 23, at the Stuart Recreation Center on Flagler Avenue.

Buffalo slayers again, Dolphins go to Shea

BY DICK LUNDIN

IT WASN'T ARTISTIC. It wasn't spectacular. It wasn't a cliffhanger, either. Miami's Dolphins, facing a do-or-die game against Buffalo, simply dug down deep and outhustled the Bills in the Orange Bowl Sunday afternoon in winning, 17-14.

The most impressive thing about the "must" victory was the fact that Miami scored first and led all the way. Its defense was overpowering in keeping Joe Ferguson, Joe Cribbs and the rest of the once division leading Bills pretty well in check, and off the board in a first half that ended an astonishing 14-0 in favor of the Dolphins.

THE HEROES in victory had to be strong safety Don Bessillieu who played a strong game and raced 44 yards to score with a Cribbs' fumble and the game scarcely three minutes old, and newcomer Terry Robiskie who may be the running back Miami has been seeking all year long.

Big plays are essentials and Bessillieu seems to be around when they happen. The Bills were moving upfield at their 46 when Ferguson hit the dangerous Cribbs with a pass in the right flat. Cribbs had trouble holding onto the ball and keeping his balance, so was vulnerable when hit by defensive end Vern Den Herder. Young Bessillieu was Johnny-on-the-spot in snatching the bouncing ball and dashing down the west sideline 44 yards for the first touchdown by a Miami defensive player since Gerald Small did it back in 1978.

That stunning strike seemed to cool the Bills and fire the Dolphins, putting them in the driver's seat and scenting the sweet smell of winning as the underdog.

The first quarter ended 7-0 Miami, but already, with Robiskie running the ball with authority and LSU rookie David Woodley quarterbacking in steady if not sensational fashion (the plays coming in from the coaching staff), the Dolphins were an obviously improved ball club.

WHEN WOODLEY was intercepted deep by Mario Clark on Miami's version of the old flea-flicker pass, it looked like the youngster might be in for a bad day passing, but that was his only interception as he threw but 17 times, completing 11 for 93 yards and one touchdown.

He is the only quarterback to go the distance for Miami this year, and it couldn't have come at a better time, with No. 1 Bob Griese still out with a sore shoulder and No. 2 Don Strock apparently not really No. 2 in Coach Don Shula's estimation, off his performances so far in 1980.

THAT ROBISKIE was something else. He runs like there's no tomorrow, picking up key yards in 18 attempts, the best performance by a Miami running back this year. As a result, Miami outgained the Bills on the ground, 149 to 68 yards, and had some semblance of a ball control game, running off 62 offensive plays to 48 for Buffalo with feared passer Ferguson and the hard running Cribbs.

His greatest effort was a 36 yard burst through the middle on a drive that aborted at the Buffalo 26 midway through the second quarter when Delvin Williams fumbled and the Bills recovered. Williams, with only 31 yards in 10 carries, may become more effective running with Robiskie as the two mesh into the Miami system.

PRAISE "GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS COME, but don't forget some words of thanksgiving for Cribbs. He was a one-man-gang up in Buffalo earlier in the season but Sunday his second of three fumbles set up Miami's second touchdown in the first half when he was hit by the omnipresent Bessillieu and fumbled the ball away to Glenn Blackwood at the Buffalo 27.

Woodley and Robiskie worked the ball down in the two-yard-line setting up a two-yard pass to wide receiver Nat Moore (4-39) for a touchdown just inside the southeast pylon, with only 6:22 left in that incredible 14-0 first half.

The desperate Bills surged back for touchdowns by Cribbs (3-yard-run) and wide receiver Jerry Butler (7-yard pass) in the third and fourth quarters. The first was set up at the Miami 26 when Robiskie fumbled, but Cribbs returned the favor minutes later when he fumbled a handoff going through the line and Blackwood fell on the ball at the Buffalo 32.

THAT THIRD Cribbs' fumble set up a 32-yard field goal by Uwe von Schamann with 4:44 left in the third quarter, giving the spirited Dolphins a 17-7 lead and negating that late score by the Bills that only served to provide some late suspense for the 41,638 faithful Dol Fans who came to see if Miami could bounce back from the Massacre at Foxboro. They came. They saw. They believed.

The suspense came after Clark had scored with 1:19 left in the game and the score 17-14. The Bills tried an onside kick but the ball sailed right into the hands of Jeff Allen and that ended any hopes Buffalo had of scoring again.

THE VICTORY put Miami at 4-3 along with Baltimore in the AFC East, right behind 6-1 New England and 5-2 Buffalo, and ahead of the 1-6 trailing New York Jets who are Miami's next opponent up in Shea Stadium on Monday at 1:0 p.m.

Just about counted out after the New England fiasco, the Dolphins are now back in the thick of the chase for one of the two American Conference Wild Card spots on the December playoffs. Only Buffalo has a better won-lost record in that respect.

Coming up, New England is at Buffalo, Miami is at the Jets, and Baltimore hosts St. Louis. The best outcome for Miami would be for the Colts, Patriots and Jets to lose Sunday.

COACH SHULA, beaming after the game Sunday: "We're very happy about the win. I can't tell you how important that game was to our football team after that demoralizing affair up in Foxboro last week. Yet, we decided to keep the faith and go with our people at least one more week, and now we've proved that we're a good team.

"The big play was Bessillieu's fumble recovery. Woodley handled himself well and made some big plays. He showed a lot of poise. We're very pleased with Robiskie's performance. The things he added to our offense today were very helpful (very possibly, the understatement of the year, considering that Miami had no running game whatsoever until Robiskie came along)."

Shula pointed out that the return to action of 1979's No. 1 draft choice, Michigan's Jon Giesler, was a big boost to the offensive line that now presents Giesler and Eric Laakso at tackles, Ed Newman and Bob Kuechenberg at guards and Mark Dennard at center, the lineup Shula had on the drawing board in preseason.

"I'm just hoping we can keep this line intact the rest of the way," Shula said.

On the play selection pattern, Shula explained: "We went in the plays in different ways with different players. It can get quite confusing but only once did we have to call a timeout."

The Buffalo rushers had enough trouble getting to Woodley but their problems were miniscule compared to trying to get to Woodley in the dressing room after the game. He said all of the right things you'd expect of a poised youngster after successfully enduring his first real NFL baptism of fire. Unthinkably, he then commenced after answering all of the trite questions posed as only sportswriters can pose them: "I've still got a lot to learn though."

He looks like Miami a quarterback of the future, and possibly to No. 2 now.

WE WERE 10-6 picking the NFL last week, so let's try it again. Miami over the Jets; Denver over the Giants, Minnesota to drub Green Bay, New England to edge Buffalo, Washington to whip New Orleans, Pittsburgh to outlast Cleveland, Baltimore to defeat St. Louis, Kansas City to shock Detroit, Seattle to outlast Oakland, Tampa Bay to beat San Francisco in overtime, Cincinnati to upset Houston, Philadelphia to dope out defense-minded Chicago, San Diego to outscore Dallas.

You can see Miami-Jets on Channels 10-13 Monday night, and Tampa Bay at Frisco on Channel 4 at 4 p.m.

Pro-Lady event inaugural debuts at Sandpiper Bay

J.D. Murchison takes solo honors

BY MIKE SANDY

The golf spotlight shined bright and long on La Femme as 88 gals of the Sandpiper Women's group participated in the inaugural "Pro-Lady" golf tournament played on the championship 18-hole Saints course Friday. The event included 20 of the area's top pros with each pay-for-play contestant teamed with three women in the Best Two Balls of a Foursome test.

A team headed by youthful J. D. Murchison of Stuart captured team honors with a 21-under par tally of 123, five shots better than the second place finishers. Included on the winning combo were Lorraine (Larry) Martel, Mary Maney and Cora Mae Linabury while the runnerup quartet led by Dave Graham had femmes Gusty Hickman, Gretchen Dalton and Phil Healy.

A pair of teams finished in a deadlock at 16-under par 130 with Bruce Harrison teaming up with Kay Benz, Barbie Ferguson and Irene Chapman and Lene Rinker paving the way with Ann Marx, Sally Lasher and Sylvia Barrwell.

At 13 under par for an in-the-money tally of 131, Brett Upper treked the course imparting his lady partners Kay Scott, Emily Griffin and Jerry Feerusen.

The top pro award was captured by J. D. Murchison who fashioned a four under par 68 trailed by pros J. J. LaFlair, Brett Upper and Larry Rinker each with 71's. Sandy Scharlau, Les Agne and Bruce Harrison racked with 73's.

Head golf pro Chuck Johnson of the Sandpiper Bay resort received requests from many of the women contestants who want more of the same Pro Lady events in the future and it is more than likely that Johnson will succumb to their wishes since the event has turned a "howling and screaming" success.

One of the days highlites was the "eagle" two registered by Tequesta C.C. pro Charlie Robinson who appeared to be off and running on the very first hole when he caromed an eight iron shot from 136 yards away. Another eagle was registered on the second hole by Bruce Harrison who "threed" the par 5 hole.

The regular Pro Ams will resume Friday at the Saints course Friday, Oct. 24. Entrants are urged to sign-up at either the Saints or Sinners pro shop during the week. With many of the pros returned to the area from northern vacations, Johnson assured there will be an ample number to gradually bring the field in the popular weekly test to larger fields and increased purses.

Tennis

BY TOM FALKENBURG

Director of Tennis — Indian River Plantation

Back home for the season now, and glad to be here, travelling is nice, but I think getting back home is nicer.

This has been a very good year in tennis for me. It started early in the summer when I went to Sarasota and won the Florida USPTA senior singles and doubles championship.

Then because of not seeing my mother for some years, I cancelled my trip to England and the summer tennis camp there was run by Peter Smith so Connie and I took a vacation (first one with no tennis) in many many moons. We stayed in Southampton some, and with Connie's Aunt Flora in Mattituck. They live just across the two bays. I did play twice in two weeks, just to be ready for the real biggie, National Grass Seniors in Germantown, Pa. This is considered the Wimbledon of Senior tennis. All the top ranked players in the U.S. were there and I consider this my biggest win, when Buck Archer and I won the doubles defeating the No. 1 ranked team in the finals.

Back to IRP for a couple of days and then off again to Sarasota and the National Team (USPTA) Championships plus the National Convention and racket testing. I was happy to have fielded a winning team, so Florida again won the senior div. The seminars were the most comprehensive and constructive that I have attended in over 8 years. Back to IRP a couple of days and off to Knoxville, Tn. Buck Archer of Shelby N.C. and I were the defending champs in this National Senior Clay Court Championship. We did not play well enough, and lost in the finals. But I guess a Silver Ball is not too bad.

A few more days at IRP and then Oct. 9 went to the Diplomat for a golf outing hosted by Golf Digest-Tennis magazines. After a nice lunch, I hit the 1st tee, and without swinging a club in 3 months, shot 76. After the cocktail party we hit the road for Ponte Vedra, Jacksonville for the National USPTA Clay Court Championship. After defeating Manny Winitsky (No. 1 in Fla.) in the semi's I lost to Leon Wilson in the finals. But I got the last word, when J. P. Fieganbaum and I came back and defeated Leon and Bill Billings in the finals of the doubles for another national championship.

Back in the saddle at IRP, when Wally Burleson offered us the Laver box at the Lynda Carter-Maybelline Tennis Classic, Deerfield. This is always fun because we see so many old friends. Someone said, that today people go to tennis tournaments to be seen and see who is there, rather than watch the tennis. We did both. Good tennis, and Bill Oogbertson kept an eye on the times, most of the time, unless Lynda Carter walked by. You're right Bill, she does look like a girl.

People are talking about how Stuart has grown, I remember when Deerfield was smaller than Stuart is now.

We watched coach Don Candy working with Pam Shriver, and when they finished and walked over to greet us, the first thing Pam did was look at Connie's Gold tennis ball and exclaim, "boy would I ever love to have one of those." Pam said she had several silver balls but really wants a golf. I, am sure she will have one in a few years. Connie and I have known Don Candy for some time, and he was my doubles partner at Forest Hills a few years back.

Tennis is supposed to be sliding in popularity, and I think it is in some places, but still growing in other areas. This $100,000 Classic was an added attraction, and as plans are going now, a very small tournament. The reason I say that is because the WTA wants to break away from the '81 U.S. Open and have their own tournament. A separate "Women's Open." More money, more TV coverage, and expand the draw from 96 to 128. (Why don't they also play 3 out of five sets instead of 2 out of 3 if they want to be completely equal?)

All this is in the wake of the announcement that the U.S. Open is going to increase the prize money from last year's high of $685,000 to the One Million Bucks. Plus increasing the women's draw to 128, and this is the only tournament that offers equal prize money both men and women.

In 1975 I won a 45 Sr. tournament in Palm Beach for the third straight year and was looking forward to receiving the Silver Bowl. Instead they gave me an envelope with a check for $25.00, my introduction to money tennis. This year I received as much as $500.00, and I still miss the plain simple silver cups and bowls. As they say, nothing stays the same.

State parks beckon hikers and birders

BY DICK LUNDIN

WITH THE ADVENT OF FALL, state parks in north Florida are offering recreation seekers a number of hiking opportunities. From now through March, weekend walks are scheduled at the following seven parks, according to Lt. Don Younker, naturalist with the Division of Recreation and Parks' regional office in Gainesville:

Ichetucknee Springs State Park, northwest of Fort White — a seven-hour trip on the fourth Saturday of each month, 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

San Felasco Hammock State Preserve, near Gainesville — the first and third Saturdays, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

O'Leno State Park, above High Springs — the second Saturday of each month, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Manatee Springs State Park, near Chiefland — Saturdays from 8:30 to 11 a.m., with wildlife observation walks at Payne's Prairie State Preserve, Gainesville, Saturdays, from 9-11 a.m.

Devil's Millhopper State Geological Site, outside Gainesville — Saturdays at 9:30 a.m., and at Mike Roess Gold Head Branch State Park, Keystone Heights, Saturdays and Sundays at, 10:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Lt. Younker urges that you register by calling the parks weekdays between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Parks requiring reservations are: San Felasco Hammock (904) 377-5835; Ichetucknee Springs (904) 497-2511; O'Leno (904) 454-1853; Manatee Springs (904) 454-1853; Payne's Prairie (904) 466-3397; Gold Head Branch (904) 473-4701.

Hikers preferring overnight trips can plan backpacking outings at O'Leno and Gold Head Branch. The cost is one dollar per person each night, with a 12-person limit set. The camping area in O'Leno is at Sweet Water Lake, reached via a five-mile or three-mile route. The trail at Gold Head winds for one-half mile to a primitive camping area overlooking Lake Johnson.

For more information, call Lt. Younker or Audrey Dunham at (904) 488-7326.

WHEN THE SIX-MEMBER Conservation and Recreation Lands Selection Committee of the state met in Tallahassee recently, they picked 27 land preservation projects to recommend for purchase by the State of Florida.

Last on the list of priorities are the South Savannas (coastal freshwater marsh and upland systems) in Martin and St. Lucie Counties.

The Three Lakes Ranch Addition just above Yeehaw Junction (natural wetlands, six rare bird species) in Osceola County, is No. 18 on the recommended list. Top priority was given to Rookery Bay (estuarine sanctuary for wading birds, marine life and small mammals) in Collier County.

Public hearings will be held around the state beginning Monday, Oct. 20 in North Miami and concluding on Friday, Oct. 24, in Panama City. The others will be Tuesday, Oct. 21 in Fort Myers; Wednesday, Oct. 22, 6 p.m., Hillsborough County Courthouse, Third Floor Auditorium, Tampa; and Thursday, Oct. 23, Sanford.

When the five public hearings are completed, the final project list will be set at a CARL Selection Committee meeting tentatively scheduled for 2 p.m., Wednesday, Nov. 5, in Tallahassee. By early December, the committee reportedly anticipates sending the final proposals to Gov. Bob Graham and cabinet, according to the DNR. Sitting as the Board of Trustees of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund, they have the final decision on which lands will actually be purchased from the $31 million the DNR reports as being available.

MUZZLELOADING PISTOLEERS will be happy to learn that the use of muzzleloading pistols has been approved for the fall hunting season by the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Fred Stanberry, director of the Division of Wildlife, said the regulation change allowing the use of black powder pistols of a rifled bore of at least 40 caliber came after consideration of a request from gun hunters. "Hunters can now hunt with a muzzleloading handgun or carry a muzzleloading handgun as a back-up weapon for their muzzleloading rifle during any muzzleloading gun season," Stanberry stated.

Stanberry urged muzzleloading gun hunters to be sure their handguns have sufficient stopping power prior to hunting larger game with them, noting that cap and ball revolvers meet the definition of a muzzleloader and are legal.

The first opportunity area hunters will have to use a black powder handgun will come Oct. 24 when the muzzleloading gun season opens for three days only in the Everglades region, closing Oct 26. Check individual area regulations before making plans to hunt a muzzleloading area (Lt. B. F. Lampton, 683-6749, in West Palm is the man to query).

STONE CRABBERS should take note that the 1980 stone crab season opened Oct. 15 and that only stone crab claws which measure two and three-quarter inches or more, measured by a straight line from the elbow to the tip of the lower immovable finger, may be removed, according to state law. The live crustacean must be returned to the same area from which taken.

A permit is required for persons taking stone crabs by traps. All traps must be constructed of wood or have a biodegradable panel, according to the Florida Department of Natural Resources.

THE WEAKFISH that wander down south along the Atlantic coast don't usually grow more than four or five pounds but up north at such spots as New York's Fire Island and Jones Inlet and New Jersey's Brigantine Beach and Delaware Bay they run much bigger. William N. Harold of Rye, New York set a new weakfish IGFA record while fishing in Long Island Sound on May 31. His whopper weighed in at 17 lbs. 11 ounces for a new 12-lb. class line record.

Also, keep in mind that there's a full moon on Oct. 23, the hunter's moon, and that the tides will be running strong beneath that full-moon.

There are blues and mackerel

BY DICK LAYDEN

THE BLUEFISHING in the Hutchinson Island surf continues to be good, this only exception being that now the snapper blues are taking cut bait like ribbon fish and mullet instead of hitting the Krocodile spoons like they were earlier.

There are Spanish mackerel schooling off the beaches northeast of the St. Lucie Inlet one to four miles offshore Most of the catches are being made on Clarkspoons. In the same general vicinity, about four miles north of the inlet in 60-100 ft. of water, there are lots of school-sized king mackerel in the 8-12 lb class. Some have been taken this week on blue little Clarkspoons being offered their small cousins the Spanish.

Bottom fishing on the reefs off the St. Inlet is pretty good for Lane and yellowtail snapper, but the problem has been to hold bottom what with the strong currents running offshore.

Trolfishing out in 600 ft. of water continues to be good but you need some pretty sophisticated rigging to get down where the golden tilefish are to be found.

Seatrout are best now on the grass flats just north of the power plant, and there are snook in the river taking live pinfish and shrimp.

Whiting action in the surf has tailed off but if you have a yen for some whiting as table fare try the Mudhole just south of the Oceana condo or around the Park-N-Fish area down south of the Jensen Causeway off A1A.

Some fast action on snook was reported Monday at the Roosevelt Bridge on U.S. 1. It took place at night on an incoming tide with live finger mullet and red tail hawk feathered jigs doing most of the damage.

CAPT. MARLIN MOODY form the party boat Lady Stuart (286-1860) going half days and Wednesday and Friday nights from the Sailfish Marina just east of Port Salerno off A1A below Stuart. "Fishing's fair to middlin now. Dick Friday night the seas were rough up to eight feet but we fished off the Holiday Inn and got 50 Lane snapper 50 small yellowtails, 2 or 3 grouper and 24 small blues. Saturday morning, we had another beautiful catch just like that. On Sunday, we had 18 kings and 6 Spanish mackerel also 7 dolphin all taken out at Six Mile Reef. On Monday it was another story, just a few snapper and we couldn't seem to find the kings. Generally it's looking good again."

ON THE FRESHWATER SCENE, from Big Bass Lodge at Lake Port on the north shore of Lake Okeechobee, some 20 miles west of the Kissimmee River Bridge on SR 78, Mary Tindell: "Bass fishing has picked up lately and now quite a few bass in the three to five pound range are being taken on plastic worms and live shiners out in the Monkey Box area. The specks are beginning to be live minnows in deep water in the Harney Pond Canal and out around the Twin markers. They're still catching bluegills, bream and on live worms, and a few shellcrackers too, near Bird Island."

DAVE LAMB from Jensen Bait and Tackle: "Fishing is pretty good and the bluefishing in the surf is excellent. The trout are good on the flats north of the power plant. They river is fairly crawling with jack crevalles from two to 8 pounds. It's hard to get a bait down to the fish you're after without a jack snatching it first. Wes Branten got a 6-8 6 lb 8 oz. flounder from our dock this week. They're all over the river now and I'm going to see if I can't spear a few this weekend. We've got tons of mullet in the river now and there are some really big tarpon after them. Morris Polen caught 13 blues to 4-0 and a 3-0 black drum all on cut ribbon fish and mullet in the surf south of the Holiday Inn. Kenny Kosher 14 blues to 4-0 cut mullet same place. Joe Ianeri 22 blues, cut mullet, same place. Bob Jarosek 8 bluing, 4 croakers and a 4-0 snook, shrimp and sand fleas, power plant surf. Bob Brellington 3 trout and 28 mangrove snapper, live shrimp, Little Mosquito Bridge. Jensen Causeway. Jeff Rebbert, 3 snook to 12-0 and 2 trout to 2-0, live shrimp and pinfish, south of the Ernest Lyons (25 cent) Bridge. Jay Shank, 3 flounder to 6-0, and 5 croaker, live shrimp. Evans Crary (10 cent) Bridge.

MURIEL WEIDEMAN, D&M Bait and Tackle, south end of the Roosevelt Bridge: "They caught some excellent snook Tregs the bridge on Monday night on little live finger mullet and red tail hawks all on an incoming tide. Frank Greeco caught 41 mangrove snapper on dead shrimp fishing in the river near the Palm City Bridge, just to the south; Joe Frazer and Daryle Patterson from Belle Glade caught 12 nice black drum on live shrimp and clams, also a bunch of mangrove snappers and sheepshead from the bridge. Drum fishing is very good from the Roosevelt right now."

FROM THE SNOOK NOOK in Jensen, Ron Ellis standing in for Tom Stewart: "The blues are still in the surf from 1-3 lbs. pretty much as they were last week only now they're going for cut bait. There are some snook in the river and around the bridges. There are mighty few whiting and pompano in the surf right now."

The Nook's log: Scott Gallivan, 3 snook to 21-0, live shrimp, the Mosquito Bridge, Jensen Causeway. Mark May, an 8-4 flounder, live finger mullet, river. Whitney Mitchell, a 6-0 Spanish mackerel trolling ballyhoo offshore. Shirley Mason, 9 blues, cut mullet, surf. Roy Kennedy, 6 blues, cut mullet, surf. Ed Hughes, a 4-0 channel bass (redfish) cut mackerel, surf. Anthony Battaglia, 19 blues, cut mackerel. Holiday Inn surf. Bertha and Nik Carlson, 14 blues, cut mullet SL Inlet. Bill Ditzel, 5 trout, live shrimp, at the power plant. Ray Ditzel and Bob Haines, 7 trout, 4 mangrove snapper and an African pompano live shrimp, N. of power plant. Stan Zegraves, 7 trout and a snook, 21-21 mirrolure, wading near the power plant.

CRUCK SHEPHERD, from the Bait Shop in Jensen: "The blues are gone and there are Spanish mackerel about a mile north of the SL inlet just off shore some big schools with fish to 4 lbs. Carl Anderson and Ralph Worcester caught 12 blues on cut ribbon fish in the Holiday Inn surf. Henry Blair, 10 whiting, the Mudhole south of the Oceana condo dead shrimp. Butch Owens, a 7-4 Florida largemouth bass, plastic worm, Jensen Savannas. Jim Shipman, a 6-8 snook, live shrimp Fort Pierce S. Jetty. Walter Gorman 30 blues, cut mackerel. Park-N-Fish: George Thompson and Karl Kapp, 18 blues, cut mackerel. Mudhole: Steve Vernon, 96 lbs. of Spanish mackerel from 1-4 lbs. off the SL Inlet and a little N.E. fishing about a mile offshore with Clarkspoons also getting 3 king mackerel to 10-0 on the same little spoons.

FROM THE MANATEE BAIT AND TACKLE: Capt. Kid Crawford of the charter boat Lucy K: "There's a fair to good amount of kings about 4 miles north of the inlet in 60-100 ft. of water. They're 8-12 lb school kings. There are a lot of Spanish mackerel offshore a little north of the inlet, some one to four miles out. Many are in the 6-7 lb class. Sails are scarce but we raised one out in 600 ft and caught a few scattered dolphin there. Snappers are good on the Six Mile Reef. There are a lot of blues at the Crops Roads. There are some snook, mangrove snappers and some small black grouper at the new jetty taking live mullet mostly. Fish there on an outgoing tide at full high and watch out for big tackle-busting tarpon. It looks like it's starting to pick up. The water was pretty nice out there on Monday but the current was running hard. Trolfishing continues to be good-way out in about 600 ft. of water."

Have yet to learn how many pay-for play golfers have filed entries for the million dollar World Match Play Golf Championship at the Dunes in Las Vegas, Nov. 11-16. Entry fee is $5,000 and only the first 256 will be accepted according to founder of the event Texas Dolly Brunson, reputed to be the world's poker king.

Understand that Don Cherry, a hometown buddy of Texas Dolly's from Sweetwater, Texas, was appointed tournament director who seemed ideal for the job. He knows his way around golf and Las Vegas. As a former scratch golfer himself, Cherry also is some-time famous as a singer when he fronted "Band of Gold" recording sold more than a million records. He played on the pro tour with such notables as Ben Hogan, Sam Snead and Arnold Palmer.

Cherry surely has a direct line to many of the pros. He reported a week ago that the response has been "fantastic."

Texas Dolly who has become a legend in his own right, envisions a swarm of Lee Trevinos coming out of the woodwork. Everybody knows how the Merry Mex hustled bucks by playing with a pop bottle before he hit the big time in 1980.

Texas Dolly figures he now has the type tournament, a real open charm pionship for everybody. There are no qualifying rounds and all a player need do is plank down $5,000 in cold cash.

The whole thing started when Texas Dolly and a couple of his poker playing pals were watching the windup of a tour event on TV. They saw Tom Watson, or Curtis Strange or perhaps Trevino, lining up putts on the 72nd hole when Dolly growled, "What's the big deal" Pressure" Bah. If he blows the putt, he still grabs $30,000 or $50,000 if he makes it. The Texan then remarked or queried "What if he was stroking for his own dough"?

The idea for the golf tournament was conceived there and then between Rolland Othick, who used to coach at Wichita State, and Jamie Thompson, a former basketball star at Wichita.

Within a few weeks some 9,000 flyers circulated country clubs throughout the nation. Texas Dolly who hit the beams at more than 300 pounds, is a former star basketball player at Hardin-Simmons, moving from the cage game to the poker tables and along with Amarillo Slim, the pair became the most celebrated poker players in the world.

Texas Dolly is as avid a golfer as you might find anywhere and will go for any gambling gimmick. He'll play with nothing but a four iron, on his knees or with shoes on backward. He had been on a $50,000 bet that he could get from 336 pounds down to 265 by Oct. 15. (Wonder how he made out on that bet?)

The format of Dolly's tournament is 18 holes match play with single rounds the first three days and double rounds the last three days. Purses are said to range from $250,000 first to $5,000 for the top 64 losers. Win two matches and you break even. It's a wild and crazy scheme, but as Will Grimsley of the Miami Herald put it, "Maybe Texas Dolly has his thumb on the national pulse."

Practically every sports enthusiast likes to take a bit of action now and then and it's known that golf is an action sports where weekend golfers have their "nassau" bets whether it be for 50 cents or 50 dollars. Golfers of all shapes, sizes and caliber like the means of testing their own skills instead of laying down hard cash on unknown events.

Betting is truly a "way of life" and sports events have provided the vehicles where one can back his choice with cash on the line. Millions of dollars are thi ddy on horse and dog racing. The pari-mutuel system and the various sporting events continue to attract thousands daily.

While millions have been wagered throughout the land on the World Series, the biggest handle for all bookmakers has come about with the advent of pro football. Lines are published weekly in all leading news papers, denoting the point spreads and many follow "Jimmy the Greek's" figures for a guide.

A new wrinkle has been inaugurated by the linemakers and bookmakers. You need not pick a team to win or lose. All you need to know is the total number of points team, facing each other will produce during the game. If the linemaker fog example puts up a figure of 29 on the game between New York Giants and New England Patriots, then you can make a bet of "over or under." If you bet "over" and if both teams put up a combined total of 23 points you win the bet. Should the teams score a combined total of 26, you lose the bet. For the privilege of making the bet, the bettor usually lays 12 to 10. Should he lose, he pays $12 and should he win, he collects $10.

This type of betting has attracted many who believe they have a safer bet by making a complete study of the scoring records of both teams. There are reports that many leading book makers are making sizable wagers in the "over and under" system of betting.

We have made a personal survey of golf courses along the Treasure Coast of Florida the past pair of Sundays to learn whether play on the links during the past two Sabbaths has been waning or decreasing with the Pro Football being televised. Our findings were strange in that play has increased and that many of these hitting the little white ball are considered avid football fans.

Many of these sports "buffs" are taking time to play with their wives and neighbors. We asked two or three of these men and their wives and learned their spouses are having "happy" Sundays a change over Sundays of recent years when the male gender was glued to the tubes watching the Miami Dolphins in action in NFL league play from the Orange Bowl in Miami.

Can it be that the "legion" of ardent Dolphin followers is having a change of heart? Could it be the thousands of Dolphin fans who constantly viewed the Dolphin games over WTVX-TV, have lost or are greatly losing interest in the fate of the Dolphins?

Sports fans come in all shapes and sizes, but they are singular in their makeups that they want to see "fair play" all the way. The Dolphins, who are having their problems in more ways than one this year, had their first shut out of the decade, a 27-0 thrashing at the hands of the New England Patriots.

The Dolphin management might find less than a corporal's guard paying hard cash to view the fruitless Dolphins in action at future home games. Fans along the Treasure Coast are not taking lightly the Dolphins appeal recently to have the 75 mile blackout rule which prohibits Channel 34 in Fort Pierce from televising the Dolphins home games.

The rule is denying many thousands of previously loyal fans as well as shut-ins, senior citizens and youngsters from seeing their former favorites playing at home.

The football fans along the Treasure Coast have lost interest in the Dolphins and believe the move is a rip-off and that the shed-in-the-wood Dolfans are finding new interests.

They will undoubtedly divert their allegiances to other NFL teams or to other activities on the Sabbath or Monday nights.

Miami's Dolphins are really ignoring the value of the strong support they have received from the fans along our coastal area. The Dolphins must depend on fan interest to the north, cause that's where the multitude exists.

We would like to see the Channel 34 officials arrange to carry Tampa home games. In this fashion folks who have dreams of witnessing a game from the stands could easily change their loyalty to the Bucs. We take the stand that the Dolphin powers-to-be are not looking beyond their noses in the drastic decisions made against the fans to the north.

Ramp will aid disabled bowlers

BY AILSA DEWING

A new kind of bowling will begin at the Jensen Lanes Nov. 9 when a group of physically disabled people start their own kegling season using a ball ramp that can be affixed to a wheelchair.

When the bowling ball is placed on the ramp's platform, a wheelchair bowler can release the ball and direct its path by aiming the ramp.

The special ramp was constructed by Martin County Sheriff Fred Emery, program director for the ACE Club, from a sketch drawn by ACE organizer and president Joe Elko.

Although the bowling sessions, scheduled at 2 p.m. on the second and fourth Sundays of each month at the Jensen Lanes, are being sponsored by the ACE Club, they are open to all disabled persons, according to Elko.

Jensen Lanes has set aside two lanes for the ACE-sponsored group.

The ACE Club, an acronym for Achievement, Creativity, and Experience, is an organization for the physically disabled which meets the first Sunday of the month at the Jensen Beach Community Church.

The bowling program is just one of several recreational events sponsored by ACE Which has previously held a pool party and barbecue, a visit to a horse ranch and a boat ride.

The ball ramp, which is enabling the group to add bowling to its activities, was sketched by Elko from his memory of a metal one used by United Cerebral Palsy of New York. He adapted the design for construction from polyvinyl chloride pipe. The ramp fits over the arms of a wheelchair and suction cups keep the ramp in place during use.

Elko is hoping that a minimum ten people will sign up for the bowling season so that bowlers can organize teams. However, bowlers' scores will be recorded and they will vie for individual trophies from the start, he said. At an end-of-season dinner, awards will be given for best bowler, best improved, and high scores, among others.

"Transportation is the biggest problem," Elko said. "If we had more drivers, I'm pretty sure we could double the number of people participating in our programs."

Anyone who wants to join the bowling group or the ACE Club or who wants to volunteer as a driver can contact Elko at 334-3602.

Eye symposium to be held

A free eye symposium will be offered by a panel of three doctors from the largest independent eye research institute in the world from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Friday, Nov. 14 at the Stuart Women's Club, 729 E. Ocean Drive.

The symposium will be presented as a public service by the Eye Research Institute of Retina Foundation, Boston, Mass., so that the public might become more aware of potential vision problems and what to do about them. Everyone is invited to attend. There will be no admission charge, and no tickets are required. There is no reserve seating.

The three eminent authorities from the Institute will make presentations concerning the function and diseases of the eye. Their discussions will cover new procedures and devices that offer hope to people with eye problems or concerns. The last half of the program will be devoted to questions from the audience. All presentations and answers to questions will be made in non-technical, easy to understand language.

The November 14 Stuart symposium is sponsored by Palm Beach County Friends of the Eye Research Institute.

Garden Mausoleum and Niches

The ultimate means of perpetuating the memory of a loved one

at Pre Construction Cost

Selection of a final resting place is a sacred family duty which, sooner or later, we must all face. How much better to do it now-while members of the family are able to consult together, discuss calmly, and decide sensibly on what would be best for all. Here caskets rest permanently-always dry and sheltered from the elements. Always cared for and protected in an atmosphere of inspiring beauty.

Please Consider Now

There would be no graves, vaults or monuments to buy.

This desired method of burial is no more expensive than conventional underground burial.

Budget terms suitable for any family.

A mausoleum endowment care trust assures continued maintenance and beauty.

Stops inflation...perhaps saving hundred of dollars in the future.

Phase II Completed
Phase III under Construction

Choice locations available at pre-construction prices in Phase 3. SAVE UP TO $800.

Martin renews bridge plea

BY AILSA DEWING

A plea to St. Lucie County to build a bridge to Hutchinson Island and let developers help pay for it has been made by Martin County Commissioners.

The announcement that St. Lucie Commissioners have approved construction of six 30-story condominiums just three miles north of the county line has prompted Martin County Commissioners to forward a resolution to its neighboring county on the north calling for an additional bridge across the Indian River and suggesting that it be partially funded by impact fees on St. Lucie developers.

Pointing out that Martin County has limited the number of units that can be built on the island as well as controlling the population density because of the lack of bridges providing access to the island, Martin commissioners have expressed their concern that St. Lucie County intensifies the [illegible] of an additional bridge by approving high density projects and by the presence of the nuclear power plant.

Consequently, Martin's commissioners say they not only offer its support to St. Lucie in implementing construction of an additional bridge, they are also asking assistance from all appropriate state and federal agencies in solving the problem of overloaded bridges in Martin County.

This is the wording generally of a resolution approved by Martin's board of commissioners at their meeting last Tuesday but which St. Lucie commissioners have yet to act on.

St. Lucie Commissioner George Price, however, doesn't see how that board can act on the request because there are no funds available, he says, and he doubts St. Lucie commissioners will charge one developer impact fees when none have been imposed on any other developer up to now.

According to Price, Florida Department of Transportation (DOT) was asked years ago to consider constructing a bridge that would connect at Walton or Midway roads.

DOT, however, reports that its studies to date don't support the need for another Hutchinson Island bridge, or even traffic signals to control the flow onto the island over the Jensen Beach Causeway.

Bruce Friedman, assistant director of traffic operations engineering in DOT's Ft. Lauderdale office, reports that studies using traffic counters both on a 24 hour basis and measuring peak flows for four hours in the morning and the afternoon show that the heaviest traffic only occurs for "an hour or two."

"If the traffic changes when the condominiums are built, we'd have to recount," he said.

FAMILIAR SCENE is Martin County motorists trying to enter A1A on Hutchinson Island from the Jensen Beach Causeway is traffic backed up all the way to South Indian River Drive. The threat of more traffic to be created by six 20-story condominiums going up in St. Lucie County has prompted Martin County Commissioners to urge St. Lucie County to construct another bridge.

Wacha sues Pitchford for slander

Claiming that "statements, innuendos and slanderous remarks of A. H. Pitchford are false and unjustified," County Commissioner Frank A. Wacha is seeking more than $100,000 damages in a lawsuit against the Palm City resident, charging him with libel and slander.

Wacha, who is a candidate for re-election as District 1 commissioner, Nov. 4, read a statement at a press conference called in the county administrative office late Tuesday morning, announcing that his attorney, Raul A. Gamba, of Stuart, had filed the "suit against Pitchford that morning in circuit court.

Gamba said they would ask $100,000 in punitive damages and $5,000 for compensatory damage.

Pitchford, who was defeated in the September Republican primary election in a race against Pamela A. Boswell for the District 5 commission seat, filed a complaint Sept. 18 with that state attorney's office charging that county commissioners violated its ordinance in granting a PUD permit to Martin Downs development.

Wacha's attorney said he does not know the disposition of Pitchford's complaint, and that he does not know whether the investigation has been concluded, but that Wacha's lawsuit has nothing to do with Pitchford's complaint.

The suit is based on statements made in newspapers, said Gamba, referring to three published letters to editors attributed to Pitchford in which he alleged Wacha had broken the law by not enforcing a county ordinance and linking Wacha to Jack Carmody, an attorney for the firm which represents Martin Downs, while also serving as Wacha's political campaign manager.

Copies of the newspaper letters were attached as exhibits to the complaints.

Two of the letters were published during the past week, Wacha noted. There is no way for me to answer those allegations between now and the election except by suing."

Wacha said he had hoped things wouldn't get to this point. "But he said. "The article that appeared a few days ago was the straw that broke the camel's back."

The complaint does not name the newspapers which published Pitchford's letters, Wacha explained, "because the newspapers didn't do anything improper." The articles appeared in the Oct. 13 and 16 editions of the Stuart News and the Tequesta Courier on Oct. 23.

Alleging that Pitchford has made slanderous statements at meetings, Whacha said that at political meetings where he was accompanied by his wife, she had been asked about the charges against Wacha.

"There are no charges against me," Wacha asserted.

A telephone recorded message which Pitchford has will not be referred to in the allegations in the complaint, Gamba said.

The actual trial date for Wacha's suit to be heard could take anywhere from four to 10 months, Gamba said. At that time "we will be able to prove monetary loss and loss of business," the attorney said.

A full text of Wacha's statement follows:

As most of you know, having followed my campaign for re-election to the County Commission, I have been continuely harassed by a small organized group. I recognize that as a public official with sixteen years of service, I should expect to be scrutinized and criticized. Unfortunately, one man has seen fit to go beyond the bounds of good taste.

There has been this morning filed as my behalf a law suit against A. H. Pitchford for libel and slander. I am seeking punitive damages along with compensatory damages that have resulted from his actions.

In all my years of watching and participating in politics in Martin County, I have never seen the vindictiveness that Mr. Pitchford has brought to this campaign. I believe it has detracted from the issues and has been a source of embarrassment not only to me and my family but to my opponent. I had hoped that after having his questions answered early in the campaign, Mr. Pitchford would become a non-issue and that a clean positive campaign could have been conducted.

I regret that this action must be taken prior to the election, but I and my supporters feel that it is necessary in order to inform the citizens of Martin County that the statements, innuendos and slanderous remarks of A. H. Pitchford are false and unjustified. I have not broken any laws; there are no criminal charges pending against me. I have followed the advice of the County Attorney in all legal questions pertaining to county business. Hopefully, this action will now return the campaign to a choice between myself and my opponent on the issues of interest to the people of Martin County.

White Cane Day to aid blind work

Jensen Lions Club members will be on the streets Friday and Saturday distributing White Cane lapel pins in exchange for contributions to the club's projects for the blind.

The fund drive is headed by Edward L. "Bonem" Mahoney with members Bill Bailey and Bob Wilson serving as co-chairmen.

Proceeds from the drive will go toward the Lions Leader Dog program and other projects to assist the blind.

White Cane Day is the first of three fund-raising activities planned by the Jensen Beach Lions in coming months to fund their numerous benefist projects.

On Dec. 7, Lions will hold a Pancake Day at Langford Park and Dec. 13 there will be a Christmas Cheer event that will include a giveaway of "A Bushel of Cheer and Fixin's."

Some 60 Lions Club members, wives, and guests donned Halloween costumes Saturday night for a supper and frolic at the Langford Park fieldhouse.

Harvey Schlemmer walked off with the prize for the "most typical," Bob Wilson won the "most authentic" award, Marie Wilson received the prize for the "most imaginative", Gladys Gardner were the "prettiest" costume, and Charlie Brown Wilson took the "scariest costume" prize.

Judges were Verna Kisling, Lee Garnett and Martha Moore, who attended as guests.

Helping with arrangements were Bob and Marie Wilson, Lyall Bowen, Bill and Maxine Bailey, and Harvey and Jone Schlemmer.

WHITE CANE DAYS will be here Friday and Saturday when Jensen Beach Lions Club will visit shopping centers and business areas seeking donations for the organization's Leader Dog and other projects to benefit the blind. Donors will receive a white cane emblem to show they have given. Chamber of Commerce Secretary Dennis Doyle, right, kicked off the fund drive with a donation to Bob Wilson, left, and Bill Bailey, co-chairmen of the drive. Edward L. JB miss is Junior OB contestant

Pattie emerged as the county's Junior Miss Monday night during qualifying rounds held at the Stuart Recreation Center where 34 teenage girls competed for the title of Martin County Junior Miss and Stuart Junior Miss.

The Stuart title went to 13-year-old Holly Hooks of 1049 NW RiverTrail, Stuart.

Patti, the daughter of Mrs. Maurine Lesniak, is an 8th grade student at Stuart Middle School. Holly, the daughter of Dr. Charles Hooks, is also a Stuart Middle School student.

The winning names survived a seven elimination rounds to earn their titles. First they displayed their poise and appearance, after which they were judged on personality a process which reduced a field of 34 charming young ladies to a line-up of eight semi-finalists.

Still in the running at the semi-final judging were five Jensen Beach girls: Linda Mang, Kerri Lord, Dawn Gerall, Jenny Thurlow and Patti; and three Stuart girls: Michelle Powers, Celine Carmody, and Holly.

On Sunday, Patti and Holly will compete in the finals to name the 1980 Junior Orange Bowl Queen and her court. Judging will take place at the Country Club of Coral Gables at 11 a.m. and the winner will ride in style in the Orange Bowl Parade.

Monday night's contest was conducted by the Stuart Junior Women's Club with Monica Leigaber as chairman. Serving as judges were Laura Tucker, Pearl Hendrick, and Richard Hansen.

Ballot is big, be prepared

The ballot for next Tuesday's general election is a long one. Most Martin County voters will face making 27 separate decisions when they go to the polls, a good argument for writing down decisions beforehand and carrying them along to the voting booth.

Tuesday's ballot leads off with the contenders for the office of President and Vice President of the United States.

The Florida ballot lists Democratic incumbent candidates Jimmy Carter for President and Walter F. Mondale, Vice President. Republican candidates Ronald Reagan for President, George Bush, Vice President, Libertarian candidates Ed Clark and David Koch, for President and Vice President, respectively, and Independent candidates John B. Anderson for President with Patrick J. Lucey as running-mate for the Vice Presidency.

For voters who don't support any of the above, there is a blank box on the ballot for naming a write-in candidate. Unlisted candidates for President and their running mates are Clifton DeBerry and Matilde Zimmermann, Deirdre Griswold and Larry Holmes, Gus Hall and Angela Y. Davis, David McReynolds and Diane J. Drufenbrock.

There are two Congressional contests this year, one to name a U.S. Senator and the other to choose the U.S. Representative from District 10.

Seeking the senatorial post are Bill Gunter, Dem., and Paula Hawkins, Rep., plus a write-in hopeful Andrea Baron.

Gunter, 46, has been serving as Florida's insurance commissioner since 1976. He previously served two terms in the state senate and was elected to the U.S. House in 1972. In 1974 he lost the race for U.S. Senator. Gunter is a resident of Tallahassee.

Hawkins, 53, has served six years as Florida's Public Service Commissioner, was defeated in the 1974 race for U.S. Senator and in 1978 lost in the election for lieutenant governor of the state. She resides in Winter Park.

Competing for the District 10 seat in the U.S. House are incumbent L.A. (Skip) Bafalis, Rep., and Richard D. (Sparky) Sparkman, Dem.

Bafalis, 51, is a resident of Ft. Myers Beach, who has served in the House since 1972. A former state senator, he was defeated in his run for governor in 1970.

Sparkman, 39, is a Naples attorney, and a former school teacher and social worker.

The only state legislative post to be voted on in Martin County this year is that of State Senator from the 27th District. The candidates are Tom Lewis, Rep., and Jeffrey L. Burch, Dem.

Lewis, 56, a resident of North Palm Beach, is seeking election to the senate after four consecutive terms in the state House. In 1978 and 80 he served as House minority whip.

Burke, 25, is a Palm Beach resident and a newcomer to the political scene.

At the county level there are seven posts to be filled in Martin County including those of sheriff, property appraiser, superintendent of schools, supervisor of elections, and three commission seats.

In the race for sheriff it is incumbent James D. "Holt, Rep., against Bruce L. "Hesareus, Dem. Holt, 48, is a former deputy sheriff, has been sheriff since 1972 and previously served as a U.S. Marshal. L'Heureux, 33, is a Stuart man, and has been a deputy sheriff for nine years.

Running for county property appraiser are the incumbent, A. D. (Augie) Mailregeot, 42, Dem., and Joan Felton, Rep. Mailregeot is seeking his second term in office. Felton, resigned from the appraisor's staff to run for the office.

The contest for county superintendent of schools is between incumbent V. James Navitsky, 43, Rep., who has held the post for the past 13 years and Clifford Lynch, 40, Dem., a resident of Palm City and a schools superintendent in Ohio for seven years. He is presently the owner-operator of a landscape and lawn maintenance service.

Seeking to unseat Supervisor of Elections Peggy Robbins, Dem., is Linda Pelletier, Rep. Robbins is seeking her third term. Pelletier is a registered nurse and political activist.

The county commission seats to be filled Tuesday represent Districts 1, 3, and 5.

In District 1, veteran Commissioner Frank A. Wacha, 58, Dem., is pitted against Alice K. Hayang, 39, Rep., a retired counseling engineer and resident of Hutchinson Island. Wacha, a Jensen Beach resident, is seeking his fifth term.

For the District 3 seat it is Rex M. Andrews, 41, Dem., facing Sherri King, 30, Rep., an administrative aide at Martin Memorial Hospital. Andrews is a self-employed accountant.

And in District 5, incumbent Commissioner John W. Holt, Jr., Dem., is opposed by Pamela H. Boswell, a Palm City realtor.

At this point, Martin County voters will be starting down the third column of the ballot — a constitutional election in which voters need only say whether or not they wish to retain six justices of the state supreme court, namely, James C. Adkins, James E. Alderman, Joe Boyd, Arthur J. England, Parker Lee McDonald, and Ben F. Overton.

Column four asks voters if they wish to retain five judges now on the 4th District Court of Appeal, including John R. Bergania, James C. Downey, Hugh S. Glickstein, George W. Harvey, and Daniel T. K. Hurley.

Voters in the 17th precinct only will vote for two members of the Loxahatchee River Environmental Control District — raising their total election day decisions to 29.

The final task for Tuesday's voters will be to approve or disapprove five proposed amendments to the State Constitution. A resume of the amendments appears on page 1 in a separate article.

'Possum Long Week' starts Nov. 9

Martin County's only nature center, Possum Long, will begin its annual "Possum Long Week" Sunday, Nov. 9, with a fund-raising pancake breakfast from 8 a.m. until noon in the Martin County High School cafeteria.

Sponsored by the county Audubon Society, which operates PLNC, the events will continue through Nov. 16 in a campaign to focus attention on the plants, birds, and wildlife of Martin County.

"The pancake breakfast is the chief source of supportive funds for Possum Long," said Mrs. Robert M. Ormiston, in publicizing the week's events. Tickets are $2.50 apiece.

Following the Sunday morning breakfast, opening ceremonies will be held at 3 p.m. at the Center on Hibiscus Street off East Ocean Boulevard, Stuart. The theme will be "The Green Canopy of Martin County" and Wayne Blythe, Martin's urban forester, will be the keynote speaker.

On Monday, the PLNC will honor garden clubs, offer plants, fruit jams, jellies, and breads for sale, and conduct a "How-to" session on bromeliads. A consultant will be on hand from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. with Clay Carnavas presiding.

Tuesday's program from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. is devoted to birds. At 10 a.m. it will be "Birding in Martin County" with Louise Sheward plus some ideas on what to plant for bird food and cover. Plants will be on sale.

At 10 a.m. Wednesday, Capt. E. B. Ing will discuss "The Fascination of Orchids," and at 11 a.m. "Aromatics" will be the theme of Fuzzy Lord, discussing herbs and spices to grow in the subtropical garden, house, or patio. The plant sale will continue through 3 p.m.

Young people will be honored guests Thursday as they go "On the Trail of Florida Native Plants" with Maggie Hurchalla. At 11 a.m. Jean Henry will talk about "Caring for Wild life." The special guests will include students from Hobe Sound Nature Center and Lon Tyson's horticultural group from Stuart's Murray Middle School.

Palm Beach County's Urban Horticulturist Gene Joyner will be on hand at 10:15 a.m. Friday for a seminar on "Rare Tropical Fruit and Nut Trees at Home in Martin County."

Friday noon is time for the tropical brunch in the Ag Building followed by a fruit lore ramble at 1:30 conducted by Joyner. Plants, jam, jelly, and breads will be on sale until 3 p.m. "nd the close of Possum Long Week.

PLNC is a nature center owned and operated by Martin County Audubon Society on five acres of semi-jungle parkland.

Dedicated in 1973, the center was named for 'Possum Long, a Martin County school teacher in the 1930s and 40s. Upon retirement, Long established a small nursery to experiment with sub-tropical plants. His land was sold after his death by his daughter Juanita Prince to the county Audubon Society for a nominal sum with the stipulation that the center would bear his name and be used a a public park.

The Society has since purchased several adjoining lots. A donation of land from Hobe Sd. Hill Hussey brought the total site to 24 lots with an assessed valuation of $100,000.

The Audubon Society members have met all mortgage obligations except for a $10,000 balance which will be met with $5,000 annual payments until January 1982.

STUART, FLORIDA 33494
October 1980
Dear Friend,
My decision to come out of semi-retirement to seek the office of County Commissioner of District 1, Martin County was prompted by my concern about the rapid degradation of the "distinctive quality of life" in Martin County. I've been observing this for almost ten years and I've come to the conclusion that it's time for a change.
The Commission needs new ideas and fresh approaches to very complex problems such as planning, conservation, sewage and County budgeting. We must find solutions to the chaos in traffic, potable water, water pollution, over crowding of schools and the rapid deterioration factor of the assets and atmosphere that brought us here in the first place.
MARTIN COUNTY NEEDS NEW THINKING, NEW APPROACHES TO ALREADY COMPLEX PROBLEMS.
We cannot continue to play "Catch Up" after the damage is done. We need to look at the total picture with long range planning.
My lifetime career as an engineering executive of a large corporation and as a consultant for several major companies both here and abroad has given me experience in problem solving.
I have been involved in the fight for reasonable planning for Martin County and feel certain I can make worthwhile contributions to solving Martin County's problems.
I love Martin County, there is an excellent opportunity at this time to "turn around" a bad situation; it's worth fighting for. I need your help to bring about a change.
Sincerely,
Alex L. Haynes

Interest on Savings Bonds goes up Nov. 1

The Treasury Department has raised the interest rate paid on all new issues of U.S. Savings Bonds by one percent effective Nov. 1, 1980, Dale M. Hudson of First National Bank and Trust Company of Stuart and today Hudson is the Savings Bonds volunteer chairman for Martin County.

In addition, all Series E, EE, H, and HH Bonds and Savings Notes now outstanding have had their interim yields increased by one percent to their next maturity, minimum said. more than $70 billion worth of Savings Bonds are now outstanding.

The new interest rate is eight percent for Series EE Bonds held to a nine-year maturity. The interim yields on these bonds have also been improved to 5.5 percent after one year and 7.5 percent after five years. Series HH Bonds will now earn 7.5 percent to their 10 year maturity.

The rate increase was made possible by legislation permitting the Secretary of the Treasury, with the President's approval, to raise Savings Bonds interest rates by up to one percent during any six-month period. The rates previously in effect were seven percent on EE Bonds held 11 years, and 8.5 percent on HH Bonds held 10 years. Depending on market conditions, the Treasury says, a further rate increase of up to one percent may be made as early as May 1, 1981.

'Wilbur Day' at JBE

When Jensen Beach Elementary School pupils of Barbara Wallace and Janet Clark finished reading "Charlotte's Web," the story of a pig named Wilbur whose life was saved by a spider, the second graders wanted to do something to celebrate Wilbur's survival. And that's how "Wilbur Day" came about at JBE.

The youngsters made posters heralding the event. They created shadow boxes out of shoeboxes depicting scenes from the book. And they wore t-shirts that had been silk-screened "Long Live Wilbur."

At the end of the class day the two grades assembled in the school cafeteria to watch a movie and enjoy refreshments which included cakes decorated with Charlotte's cobwebs and a replica of Wilbur. The cakes were baked by the teachers and decorated by Louise Williams.

The best posters and shadowboxes were judged and awards went to Louis Taormina and Scott Campbell in Wallace's class and Christie Erdman and Bryan Williams in Clark's class.

Setting the record straight

Political claims shift like sand

Ordinarily an attempt to correct the exaggerated charges and counter charges that accompany most political campaigns is a hopeless undertaking

It is like digging a hole at the beach where the surf rolls over the sand Everytime you scoop out a handful of sand, two more are washed in by the sea

But I am compelled to try in the case of Martin County Commissioner Frank Wacha because of the unfairness of the accusations being leveled against him and because Wacha has served the county selflessly for more than 20 years

As readers of this page know, this newspaper has not been reluctant to criticize Wacha and the County Commission through the years Just because we recommend someone for election does not mean that the same person gets four years of special protection from criticism

However we never have had occasion to challenge his integrity

Wacha is a certified public accountant He has made his living in this business for 20 years

As a commissioner he has brought these accounting skills to the county

I know because when I was a reporter covering the County Commission it was Wacha who always put the numbers together that made the county budget

All five commissioners decided how the money would be spent, but often it was Wacha working into the wee hours that made the county budget balance

He continues to work as a CPA but in 1978 he took the necessary tests and was presented with a state license to sell real estate He did not use the license in 1978. He sold a small amount of real estate in 1979 through Ransom Tilton's office in Jensen Beach

As a result of this, the major thrust of his opposition's campaign against him has been that his license to sell real estate and his connection with Ransom Tilton who has had several matters go before the board over the years, constitute a conflict of interest

The fact is Wacha never has cast a deciding vote on an issue brought before the County Commission by Tilton and, no evidence has been presented to show that he has in any way gained personally from his position on the board

Whether Wacha wins or loses next month it should not be on the basis of unfounded accusations that attempt to impeach his integrity

A campaign that follows that course follows a low road

In a community where population growth has been rapid, a large number of voters have no long-term history of experience with elected officials to draw upon when they go into the voting booth

The risk is that voters who have not known a candidate over a number of years will accept the worst

And that situation leaves the door open for new candidates who, unencumbered by records of their own, can denigrate the incumbent by alleging the worst

The result of this is the destruction of the continuity of authority that is absolutely vital to long-range community planning and zoning

But on a human level, it is one thing to criticize a candidate on his record and another to accuse him of a breach of ethics Accusations, cavalierly asserted, should not be allowed to taint reputation for honesty that has developed over 20 years of public service in the same community

Wacha's challenger is Alex Haynes, a former Democrat who turned Republican in February of this year

While accusing Wacha of a conflict of interest, Haynes boldly advertised that he will not accept campaign contributions from special interest groups

Nevertheless, Haynes has received substantial campaign contributions from Jupiter Island property owners including $200 from one of the island's more prominent residents Nathaniel Reed

Interestingly enough, Wacha has received no contributions from Jupiter Island

Reed and a number of other islanders have been at odds with Wacha for years.

One of several disputes has been public access to the beaches

Islanders generally have tried to limit access Wacha has worked to open it up

For instance, there are more than three miles of public beach on the north end of Jupiter Island and all of that is served by less than 50 parking spaces

Jupiter Island has a special interest in limiting the number of mainlanders who wish to visit their island And, they certainly would be expected to support the candidate most sympathetic with their point of view

There is nothing wrong with that

However, it is laughable for Haynes to take their money and still claim that he will not accept campaign contributions from special interest groups

Re-Elect Frank A. WACHA

FRANK WACHA will work for...

- ★ Adoption of the Comprehensive Plan.
- ★ Four-laning of East Ocean Blvd.
- ★ Completion of the entire walk-bike path system in Martin County.
- ★ Improvement of the intersection of Indian River Drive and Causeway Blvd.
- ★ Improvement of the intersection of A-1-A and Causeway Blvd.
- ★ Completion of the bulkheading of Jensen Causeway

A Personal Message To Condominium Owners

Dear Condominium Resident,

As a resident of Beacon 21, I am writing this letter to solicit your support for re-electing our friend County Commissioner Frank A. Wacha to his seat on the Board of County Commission for District #1 of Martin County.

Commissioner Wacha has been the member of the commission who has lead the fight to preserve the rights of the owners and residents of condominium against developer changes that would adversely affect them.

Frank lead the fight against time sharing of Dolphins Bay (Fairwinds Cove); he guided us at Beacon 21 in our land-lease purchase and in developer changes. He aided the residents of Miles Grant and Indian River Point in their developer vs. owners disputes. When the owners in Suntide and other Hutchinson Island residents were victims of vandalism, it was Commissioner Wacha who led the way for an additional sheriff's patrol, and it was Frank Wacha who suggested the budget transfers to put the extra patrol on immediately.

Frank A. Wacha is still an owner at Beacon 21; he knows condominium problems and how to solve them. Let's help keep him on the County Board.

Respectfully,

Mildred Koestner

The Mirror recommends

The ballot is long, and involved. The voters face some of the most important decisions they will face in many years, for a wide range of political philosophies are on the line in all phases of government.

We suggest that voters clip the sample ballot in this issue, mark their choices, and take that ballot into the voting booth to expedite their voting.

The Mirror recommends the following:

For President

Ronald Reagan offers America an opportunity to change the liberal bureaucratic appointees in Washington, reduce government bungling, and bring sense and strength to our waffling economic and foreign policy.

For U.S. Senator

Paula Hawkins offers America the chance to bring some fiscal responsibility to the U.S. Congress. This year the Republicans have an opportunity to gain control of the U.S. Senate. That alone, with a Republican president, could bring a balanced budget, lowered inflation and more common sense in Washington.

For U.S. House of Representatives

District 10

L. A. "Skip" Bafalis has served well and long. He is an outstanding congressman.

For State Senator

27th District

Tom Lewis has the record, the experience, and the dedication to be an excellent senator.

For Sheriff

James D. Holt has been an excellent sheriff for Martin County. He has been responsive to the needs of the people, and has the admiration and respect of lawmen.

For Property Appraiser

Augie Malfregeot has been a competent appraiser for the county during a very trying period. He should be retained.

Superintendent of Schools

V. James Navitsky has handled a very difficult position well. If there is one major thing Navitsky has accomplished, it is the minimum of racial strife in the schools over the past 12 years, as compared to counties to the north and the south.

Supervisor of Elections

Peggy S. Robbins runs an efficient office and has eliminated the problems of the past, works well with the public, and has encouraged voter registration.

County Commission

District One

Frank A. Wacha has been an outstanding commissioner for Jensen Beach and Martin County. He knows both well, and is the key financial commissioner on the board. His accomplishments are legion. His solutions to problems are practical. His integrity and dedication are unquestioned.

County Commission

District Three

Rex Andrews is the most qualified of the south county candidates, and has a record of community activities to back it up. Andrews is practical and low key, offering sound planning in his platform.

County Commission

District Five

In this election, The Mirror editorial board is divided. On one side is incumbent Commissioner John Holt. Indiantown rancher who has strong integrity and is a steady force on the commission. However, Holt's voting pattern has waffled on several key issues, and his failure to represent Palm City as a part of his district brings questions of his representation in the next four years. Holt's challenger, Pamela Boswell, is a novice, with much to learn both in politics and county government. Her one-issue campaign roads and bridges, indicates the lack of broad county knowledge. The Mirror has no recommendation in this race.

Nonpartisan

Supreme Court

All justices deserve to be retained in the supreme court as recommended by the Martin County Bar Association.

Nonpartisan

District Court of Appeal

All judges deserve to be retained, as recommended by the Martin County Bar Association.

Constitutional Amendments

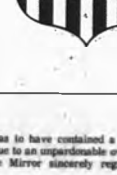
No. 1: The constitutional Revision Commission is a notable failure. It is ultra-political, its meetings chaotic, producing few good recommendations. FOR abolishing the commission.

No. 2: The rights of citizens to privacy must be protected. FOR the right to privacy.

No. 3: The legislature should not remove the three chances that there are to see what is in a bill. Often it is in the third reading that a flawed or bad bill is discovered. AGAINST the amendment.

No. 4: The state should be allowed to issue bonds for water facilities, our most pressing need. FOR the amendment.

No. 5: Since all taxes eventually end up in ad valorum taxes, we oppose giving the state the opportunity to go beyond gasoline taxes and tolls to finance road acquisition and improvement. AGAINST the amendment.



The Mirror regrets....

Last week's issue of The Mirror was to have contained a paid-for advertisement for Alex Haynes, and due to an unpardonable oversight, the political ad was committed. The Mirror sincerely regrets the omission.

Look at the quality of life

I think that this area is the most beautiful in the world. We have the sun, the tropical beauty of the palms and flowers year around, the most magnificent rivers, and some pretty great people.

My little corner of the world, my office on the second floor of The Mirror building, has a window to our quality of life. I look down to see waving palms, the cold rails of the Florida East Coast Railroad, the American flag lying in front of the post office and the Southeast Bank, and the flag flying above the Florida state flag on the fire department flagpole.

The giant fir tree at Pop Tilton's home dominates the center of my picture. It is waving in the gentle southeast breeze. That breeze is also causing ripples on the mile-wide Indian River. As I write, two large sailboats and a yacht are heading south on the Intracoastal Waterway. A Hobie-Cat dances across their wake, its orange and yellow sail pointing toward the puffy white clouds.

(There goes Fire Chief Joe Luciano down Palmetto Street, on his way home for lunch.)

Toward the south, tall pines, palms and palmettos form a green umbrella to the neat rows of mobile homes in Ocean Breeze Park. The east bridge of the Indian River Causeway is visible in the sunlight, and the ever green horizon line of Hutchinson Island looks protective of the Atlantic Ocean behind it.

The few condominiums along the beaches and river edge are striking as they interrupt the green. I can identify Angler's Cove, Beechwood, Hutchinson House, Green Turtle, and the Holiday Inn.

Looking northward, the Jensen Causeway forms a white stripe across the grey-blue of the river. A lone fisherman is outwitting a trout at the end of the Frank Wacha Bridge fishing pier. Several sailboats ride quietly at anchor.

(An elderly man on a motorbike just rode up Sunview. He is wearing a straw hat, plaid shirt, walking shorts, and has a bright orange flag flying from a staff on the bike.)

This is our quality of life.

There are those who would say that the quality of life has been degraded over the past twenty years.

I have lived in Jensen Beach for 22 years. I have never forgotten to see how beautiful it is here, and remind myself every morning to look at the river. I am driving along, all the sun rising in mist, or haze, or cloudy or clear weather.

I love the quality of life here, and feel that the county has done a great job over the past 22 years in maintaining that quality.

Our Hutchinson Island is beautiful, my picture window view is not cluttered with tall buildings on the horizon. The wide Indian River is still as beautiful, and cleaner than it was back then.

We do have a few more buildings, and a few more people. Thank God they have the opportunity to see my Jensen Beach. They can go to the beaches, or fish from our pier, or boat in our river.

The good sense of our county commissioners over the past 20 years has kept the density of population down, forcing developers to build fewer homes on more land. Our water is still excellent, and we have maintained that "village charm" we wanted.

The same traffic problems of 22 years ago have continued even as we built and improved our roads, but I guess that is a part of our living here. As we continue to improve roads we will find more problems.

(The lawn maintenance man from the warehouse across the street is cutting the grass along the FEC right-of-way. That's neighborly.)

A shrimp trawler is heading north on the waterway. He will pass under our bridge, and head into St. Lucie County.

Oh, yes. I look to the north, in St. Lucie County. Giant cranes wrestle steel and concrete into newly forming high rise condominiums. The green of the island is broken by the condos already completed. Six more will rise twenty-stories into the air soon, and add six hundred units to the thousands of recreation vehicle lots and condominiums already there.

Strange. The nearest fire department is in Ft. Pierce. With less than a thousand units occupied in the Martin County side of Hutchinson Island, the county has already broken ground on a fire station to cover that area, to be manned by volunteers of the Rio Fire Department.

Rio will be able to protect any of our four-story buildings. (That is the limit, you know, in Martin County.) St. Lucie foresees, if they can get sixteen miles down the island in time, can only protect up to ten stories.

Yes, I'm proud of the quality of life here. I am proud of what our commissioners has done to protect what we have, and to allow others to join us so that they, too, could enjoy our paradise.

I guess it is all in degree.

(A truck loaded with lumber just drove down Candace from Porter Lumber, heading for a home that is being built.)

We will continue to grow, and under the guidelines we already have, grow properly.

We are a lot better off than those to the north or to the south. My picture window of Jensen Beach tells me that. Frank Wacha had a lot to do with my quality of life here over those 22 years. That is why I chuckle when I hear that that this life is being degraded.

(A formation of pelicans just flew south along the river edge.)

For anyone who would believe that this isn't the greatest spot on earth, I invite them to come up to my little corner of the world, and look out my Jensen Beach picture window.

The Vega Survival Kit

It's new on the market and it came to me in a plain brown envelope.

It's called the Vega Survival Kit, the wit child of Vic Buechelt of Bill Schultz Chevrolet in Ft. Pierce, defender of Vega owners and Victorian grandmothers, who may be the first automobile salesman ever to ask the question: "Would you sell this woman a used car?" And supply his own answer: "Not if she's trading in a Vega, thank you."

Buechelt put the kit together in the spirit of fun in response to a consumer complaint in this column a couple of weeks back on Vega generator lights that blink in the night without knowing what they're blinking about.

Buechelt's five-piece kit contains one vacuum sealed, underwriter tested and approved ten-amp replacement fuse; a high-impact, low glare, nonsparks-ritued, easy to carry or lose polypropoline flashlight; an embossed leatherlook, rust-resistant generator light patch (in case it's the fuse that's good and the generator that's bad); a re-usable fluorescent black and red "For Sale" sign, and a low-impact "sold" sign.

He points out that the generator light patch comes with a clear plastic jacket to protect my mental incompetence certificate.

In his sales hunt for an invention that isn't going anywhere anyway, he audaciously insults this prospective noncustomer with the comment that I probably bought a second Vega because I couldn't trade off the first one for anything else.

I think he's hit on something there. I did run into some unusual car salesmen when I was shopping to trade off my first Vega.

There was the Hazard dealer who couldn't say when the next shipment would be in, wasn't sure he was getting any more, and asked me to keep in touch because he didn't like chasing down customers.

Then there was a Shogun dealer who couldn't find keys to any of the cars I wanted to look at. He gave me some brochures and told me to come back Sunday morning. The brochures were pretty but they were written in Japanese. I went back but he'd apparently forgotten they closed Sundays.

A Honda dealer kicked the tires. My car collapsed and he charged me $18 to tow it out to the curb, with veiled hints of having me charged with trespassing on a used car lot.

I tried several auto agencies. Most of the people I talked to said they weren't sales people, that they worked in bookkeeping. They promised to have a salesman call if one showed up.

One dealer was willing to trade my Vega for a purple Pinto with matching fire extinguisher and asbestos interior if I wouldn't tell his mother on him.

I finally made a deal at Mike's All Night Auto Sales and Adult Bookstore: dealer's cost plus FOB delivery downtown Miami at 4 a.m. in the bus terminal parking lot plus a three-year subscription to the Hustler.

All the above is written in fun. Some of it's true but not the part about where I bought the Vega. I bought it from a reputable dealer who told me it formerly belonged to his mother. The rear bumper wouldn't let her bring her car with her.

In case it got by you, Oct. 20 was officially proclaimed by the PSL City Council as "Ailsa Dewing Day," in honor of the arrival of a son to City Manager and Mrs. Mike Dewing, Oct. 17.

Spook night

I've always been more than a little afraid of All Souls Day. It's not that scary things happen to me — it's the ridiculous. And for a little girl to be laughed at when she's trying to be serious is just about the worst thing that can happen, when you're ten years old.

There was the Halloween when my friend Mary and I were going to a party dressed like the Princess and Prince Charming. Mary's father was a stern Presbyterian minister, and smallest trick-or-treating, so I wasn't totally dismayed when my prince failed to put in a showing. Instead of going to bed in a suit I sat on the edge of our porch, empty basket on my lap, looking miserable. I wound up with more bonbons than half the kids in town.

I've been almost everything memorable on spook night — from the most haggish witch to the humblest pumpkincarrier. And I was very bad at all of them. I was the curse of my mother's expression. An artist, she loved to be creative at Halloween. If I were to be a great white rabbit, I'd be the one with the smear of carrot down the front; if I were billed as a fairy with gossamer wings, I'd be the kid with no flippers.

Perhaps this all stems back to the fact that on Halloween, I was by far more the scarer than the scaree. Every rat, however big, became a cruel one-arched black cats were friends of Hades, and every growling dog a hound fresh from hell.

To make it worse, we lived in the middle of a memorial park, and those huge sizzles with his cannon between our only defense against the ghastly army coming over the hill.

No Halloween was never my favorite. You can bet your bottom pumpkin on that.

But I always did like autumn — autumn with its leaves still tinged with green ramming with red, orange and russet ... when you could get away with the grass to make flattened nooks of yourself, perfect images that lasted until the next gust of wind ... when the raspy sound around the block was the crispy-crackle of leaves being rifled.

I loved the whirl pools of burning, making, shameless of the great piles and of the carefully banked mountains of ashes under carefully honed cosmos.

And the crisp, dry tang of the whole exciting experience, all of fall with its foretaste of winter can't hold a match candle to the ghostees and goblins of Halloween.

Firestone will speak at evening of the arts

Georgia Firestone, Florida Secretary of the State, will be the honored guest and speaker at the First Annual Evening of the Arts to be held at Sandpiper Bay Saturday night.

The optional black tie event, sponsored by the Arts Foundation of Martin County, will be the official "kicker" for a massive fund raising campaign for the proposed $4 million dollar Cultural Arts Center for Martin County.

Firestone, a longtime friend of the arts, has been responsible for considerable legislation involving the arts. Most of the Senate bills he has written and introduced are geared to funding the support of arts institutions and for increased staffing at the state level to enable more guidance for city and county arts councils and individual arts groups such as the Arts Foundation of Martin County.

Sen. Firestone has introduced legislation which includes:

—A $1.1 million appropriation to the division of Cultural Affairs in addition to the current $400,000 funding to the Fine Arts Council of Florida.

—A statewide Art-in-Public-Places program that would allow 1.5 per cent of the cost of state buildings to go for the purchase of art.

—$35,000 to be used for an economic impact study to determine the size of the "arts industry" in the state. A preliminary survey by Division of Cultural Affairs indicates it's more than $2 billion ($B225).

—A relaxation of the state's tax on ticket admission, which is currently 4 percent. This bill would set a 2 percent tax for nonprofit organizations, which could allow more funds to be channeled back into the arts organization ($B304).

—A tax credit to corporations (against state corporate profit tax) for donations to arts organizations ($B304).

Firestone will be discussing the importance of these bills as well as the importance of the arts in general for the Florida's economy at the First Annual Evening of the Arts.

The public is invited to attend the benefit for a tax deductible contribution of $100 a couple. The evening will include a private art show, buffet dinner and dancing to the Dutchin-Grant Orchestra.

Five state amendments are proposed

Florida voters will also be asked to rubber on five proposed amendments to the State Constitution in Tuesday's election.

Here is a resume of the five proposals. (Today's editorial page includes The Mirror's recommendations.)

Amendment No. 1:

Constitution Revision Commission

Article XI, Section 2 of the State Constitution currently provides for a commission, composed of 37 members, whose purpose is to review the Constitution every 20 years and consider changes necessary to keep the Constitution up-to-date. The amendment would abolish the Constitution Revision Commission.

Amendment No. 2:

Right of Privacy

This amendment establishes a Constitutional right of privacy stating that, unless otherwise provided in the Constitution, all persons have the right to be free from governmental intrusion into their private life.

Amendment No. 3:

Bills by the Legislature

The Constitution currently requires each bill to be read three times, by title, in each house of the legislature before final passage. This amendment provides that publication in the journal of each house could serve as the first reading in that house.

Amendment No. 4:

Water Facility Bonds

This amendment provides that state bonds may be issued, without an election, to finance the construction of water facilities as authorized by general law.

Amendment No. 5:

Motor Fuel Taxes

This amendment would authorize changes in the law relating to the second gas tax to allow counties to use this money for road maintenance instead of just for acquisition and construction, and to use revenues, other than the tax and pledged tolls, to pay off road bonds and in determining the debt service requirements on those bonds.

HOPE FOR HEALTH

Keys to Good Health Naturally

By Dr. Jack L. Webb

Poor Sleeping Posture Can Lead To A Rude Awakening

Many of our clinic patients report that they first become aware of their condition upon awaking with a sharp stabbing type pain and stiffness of the involved spinal area, usually the low back.

If you are 30 years of age, you have already spent approximately ten years sleeping. In fact, whatever your age, about one third of your life has been spent in slumber and the position in which you spend that third of your life can have a great effect on the condition of your health.

You spend as much time sleeping each day as you do working. Add you do it seven days a week. You wouldn't think of sitting or standing in an awkward position for six to nine hours, yet so many people do the equivalent, and worse, by sleeping in poor posture positions.

There's more to getting a really good night's sleep than just getting to sleep. Here are some guidelines that might be helpful in attaining and maintaining good sleeping posture.

Pick out a good mattress. The mattress you sleep on should be comfortable, but should be firm enough to give well-balanced support. Good quality water beds have been a back saver for many of our patients.

Don't sleep on your stomach. Low back problems are compounded by sleeping on the abdomen. The best position is to sleep on your side with one or both knees drawn up.

Select a good pillow. It is the answer to many neck problems. Sleeping without a pillow is a sure way to develop discomfort in the neck. And pillows that are too thick are as harmful as pillows that are too thin.

Have periodic spinal examinations. Check-ups of the spine and nervous system are important in order to maintain the structural integrity of your body.

Cousteau was first in IRCC Arts series

By CATHIE MACAULAY

The Indian River Community College played host to Jean Michel Cousteau in the first of its performing art series.

Cousteau lectured at the theatre on his "Project Ocean Search Expeditions." Through films and slides he brought the audience to an unspoiled, tropical island in the South Pacific called Wuvulu.

Wuvulu is located off New Guinea and is the site of some of the most abundant marine life found in the world. According to Cousteau, 680 natives live simply on the 12 mile island, once a German colony. The population was increased to 680 when Cousteau and his researchers spent over a month on the island studying the rich coral beds.

Thanks to the natives who built a compound for the researchers, the team was able to study their findings under thatched roofs. According to Cousteau, the climate is idyllic. The island's close proximity to the equator allows for neither hurricanes nor fowl weather.

Once settled, and after the customary feast with the islanders, the team of researchers went out into the 50 foot deep coral beds. There they found more plant and animal diversification than anywhere in the world. The group has yet to label all the different marine life, but they intend to return to the area many times yet.

According to Cousteau, the natives as well as the island, are untouched by human nor environmental pollution. The people are healthy and live in a communal atmosphere. Every day, the women take their only net into the waters. By means of stomping and yelling they scare the fish into the waiting net. When they return to the village the meal is cooked over open fires by other natives. Children climb the palm trees to gather coconuts so that coconut milk, their daily staple can be made. The older villagers contribute woven baskets, tools, or toys for the children.

Cousteau's annual visit to Wuvulu may be a scientific one, but to the islanders, "It's almost like Christmas," he says. It is a time for celebration and a feast of exotic foods. As always, friendships are renewed, making the expedition's departure for some, a tearful sense. But the group will return next year for further marine studies in an attempt to glean more information to share with the world.

Although Cousteau's films depicted an island filled with serenity and tropical beauty, they were shown for a specific purpose. Jean Michel is in the business of educating people. Through his research, people are shown that nature and civilization can co-exist. Although the film was of small colony in the South Pacific, Cousteau believes that co-habitation can survive on a larger scale. To achieve that goal, the American people must first be re-educated, he says.

"We cannot manipulate until we know what we are doing," he adds.

Jean Michel believes many of the current problems facing people today stem from a general ignorance of the environment.

One problem he cited was the tremendous land clearing around the Amazon River basin. According to Cousteau, the Amazon provides the world with 25 percent of its oxygen. At the present trend, the equivalent of the size of Indiana is being cleared in the basin area each year. Jean Michel believes the world eco-system may one day be in serious jeopardy if clearing continues at this rate.

The Amazon is threatened by lack of understanding," says Cousteau. In an attempt to reverse the situation, he and a team of researchers are planning a trip to the basin to study the effects the clearing has already had on the river.

Effects of pollution on bodies of water closer to home have already been studied. During the past four months, Cousteau and his team of researchers have travelled to the Great Lakes to determine the water's quality, or lack of it. When the project is completed, findings will be reported to the U.S. Congress.

One recent problem that struck a chord of sentiment with many Americans was the slaughtering of humpback whales by fishermen. They claimed the mammals were destroying their nets as well as their incomes. With the help of the Cousteau Society, a Save the Nets Company was organized, consisting of both fishermen and scientists. By employing the use of radios and scuba divers, the stranded whales are now being released from the nets unharmed and without net damage.

Although Cousteau does not see a major pollution reversal in this country, he maintains the "U.S. has the power to solve the problem." But first Americans must alter their false approach to economy of thinking that environmental management is too costly a process to effectively implement.

"To lead a clean life is economical. Time will prove the theory correct," he says.

Time is something of value to Cousteau. Since the death of his brother, Jean Michel has spent more time lecturing in addition to his many expeditions. The lectures are a vital facet to the Cousteau Society's goal of informing the public, but the Calypso is where his heart lies.

"If I wanted a vacation, I would do exactly what I'm doing now on Calypso," he says.

Cousteau takes the constant reminder of his father's name in stride and instead, focuses his energies into expanding the earlier concept of allying conservationists.

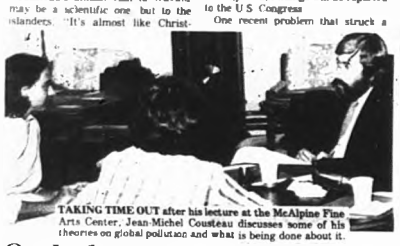
The Cousteau Society evolved from a simple idea that humans could breathe from an aqua lung. From that, it has spiraled into a group of 160,000 whose concern is to educate people on a global scale about the advantages a symbiotic relationship with the environment can offer.

Perhaps someday, when 217,000 gallons of oil are no longer spilled into the ocean each hour, and other critical pollution problems are resolved, then future children will enjoy that which their ancestors beheld years ago.

"I want my son to see the same beauty I saw when I was his age," says Cousteau.

The beauty of a small island in the South Pacific was depicted in his presentation at the IRCC College. Perhaps, softly in the audience walked away with a sense of purpose towards the safety of the environment. At the very least, there were those who said, "This one lecture was worth the entire season's tickets."

JEAN-MICHEL COUSTEAU was the first guest speaker at the newly completed McAlpin Fine Arts Center at Indian River Community College. Cousteau was present to discuss his project ocean search. He and a team of researchers travelled to the South Pacific island of Wuvulu and members of the audience received the benefits of his visit. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)



TAKING TIME OUT after his lecture at the McAlpine Fine Arts Center, Jean-Michel Cousteau discusses some of his theories on global pollution and what is being done about it.

Orchid to be auctioned off

Orchid plants will be auctioned to the public by the Martin County Orchid Society, Thursday, Oct. 30, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Martin County Agricultural Center, South A1A.

Plants will include a large selection of blooming size cattleyas, phalaenopsis, vandas, dendrobiums, and specie orchids. Plants are being donated by society memebers from their own orchid collections, and some plants have been purchased from wholesale growers.

The auction will benefit the club's orchid show to be held at the Agricultural Center on Palm Sunday 1981. "Orchid Rendevous" was the theme of the show given last spring, the first one staged at the Agricultural auditorium, which was acclaimed for its beautiful displays of colorful orchids. Plans are underway to make the 1981 show project another outstanding achievement.

Hugh Curran, president, invites orchid fans in the area to attend this auction, and take advantage of the many bargains. Society members will be on hand to assist. Admission is free to the public. Further information may be obtained by phone at 287-0863.

Power plant to have new evacuation plan

BY CATHIE MACAULAY

The St. Lucie Nuclear Power Plant has scheduled an evacuation drill for mid-November.

According to St. Lucie County Disaster Preparedness Director Phillip J. Rodi, the exercise will be a renewal of last year's plan. The Federal Nuclear REgulatory Commission (NRC) has dictated that a new plan be effective as of April 1, 1981.

The regulations call for a ten-mile emergency planning zone. Evacuations to the north would be routed on A-1A to U.S. 1, the Florida Turnpike, and Interstate 95. Southerly routes would be divided over the Jensen Beach and Stuart Causeways to Highway 1 and the turnpike.

The new ruling states that residents must be evacuated at least 20 miles away from the power plant. Additionally, should an accident occur, contamination must be checked up to a distance of 50 miles from the plant. Included, would be the study of pollutants in citrus, vegetation, and cattle.

"Three mile island has caused a lot of problems," said Rodi. He added the myriad additional regulations are a comeback measure by the NRC to "try and redeem themselves."

Rodi believes the additional required measures will be expensive. Although the evacuation procedure is being jointly planned by Florida Power and Light, St. Lucie County, and the State of Florida, exactly who will foot the bill has yet to be determined.

The Regulatory Commission is not putting one red cent into the county coffers," said Rodi. Although he believed FPL should absorb a large part of the cost, a final decision will not be reached until plans and their cost are finalized in the next two months.

In the event of an evacuation, a ten mile area surrounding the plant must be notified within 15 minutes of the accident. Rodi said this will be accomplished with the help of the Sheriff and City Police Departments as well as the news media. When routes are determined, residents of Hutchinson Island will be given maps showing their respective evacuation routes.

Rodi said that meteorlogical data will determine what areas must first be cleared. The island has a prevailing east southeast wind direction which he believes would carry any contaminants in an area from Midway Road to the south part of Fort Pierce.

Wash-down stations will be set up on I-95, the turnpike, and U.S. 1 near Vero Beach to remove contaminants.

Rodi said the new evacuation system will take more hardware, communications, and money to implement.

"We created a monster when we created the NRC," he added.

No exam make-up allowed at MCHS

Mrs. Wanda Yarboro, assistant principal of Martin County High School, advises parents to arrange vacation plans so that students will be available for all exams. No make-up exams will be given after the holidays, she announced.

The examination schedule is Tuesday, Dec. 16, Wednesday, Dec. 17, Thursday, Dec. 18, and Friday, Dec. 19.

Secondary Level Examination Program (SLEP) test will be held Friday, Dec. 19.

WHAT IS A BALLOON MORTGAGE?

QUESTION: I have heard the expression "balloon mortgage" used in connection with real estate investments. Would you please explain just what this curious term means?

ANSWER: In a direct reduction mortgage, the total of the monthly payments not only pays the interest but completely liquidates the loan. When the note on a balloon mortgage comes due, however, there is till a remaining balance. The mortgage agreement calls for a final "balloon" payment at that time to cover the outstanding sum.

Quite frequently the seller of real estate investment property will take back what is referred to as a "purchase money mortgage." The payments on this form of financing often are not sufficient to repay the full value of the loan by the time the note comes due. The owner of the property must then rearrange the financing to pay off the outstanding balance. There are several ways this can be done--by refinancing or by adding additional cash, for example. Your real estate broker will be happy to assist you in arranging the right financing package for your needs.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

PAM BOSWELL

WANTS YOU TO UNDERSTAND

Bridge and road maintenance, while vital, is only one of the issues Pam Boswell, Republican Candidate for County Commissioner Seat 5 has been addressing. Boswell's bridge issue is graphically illustrated by the photo of the Berry Avenue bridge in Palm City.

This bridge illustrates a dangerous situation that has existed far too long. We need better efficiency in maintaining our roads and bridges.

Rid ourselves of some of the beaurucracy

Boswell's goals are your needs also!

WE NEED to establish a county wide drainage plan and implement it.

WE NEED to encourage, support and expand all volunteer programs.

WE NEED to provide and implement a Comprehensive Plan

WE NEED to provide jobs for our younger residents. We should encourage light, clean industry to help provide jobs, which will also broaden our tax base.

WE NEED to establish a liason committee of high school students and hold a "Government Day" to allow our younger citizens to become aware of our democratic processes.

I need your vote

I AM CAPABLE * I HAVE COMMON SENSE * I WILL LISTEN * I WILL WORK ON THESE ISSUES * THIS IS MY COUNTY TOO, AND MY ONLY WISH IS TO HELP IMPROVE IT

ROLLER OPERATORS Diane Barker and Darlene Smith are two of the many construction workers currently working in Port St. Lucie. Their jobs include checking the grades, operating the roller machines, and helping dig footing when necessary. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)

CONSTRUCTION WORKERS look different these days. Diane Barker and Darlene Smith are two of the workers clearing the land for the Winn Dixie site location. Both women say they went into the field because of the opportunity to be outdoors as well as the good salaries. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)

Hard hats are for everyone

BY CATHIE MACAULAY

Clearing for the new Winn-Dixie supermarket site in Port St. Lucie has begun. Passing residents can see burning piles of brush and hard hat construction workers leveling the ground for construction.

Diane Barker and Darlene Smith are construction workers. Employed by Dickerson, Inc., they are manning (or womaning) the roller machines at the Winn Dixie site.

Both women have just recently come into this line of work. They were lured away from their previous jobs by the outdoors and the pay.

"I was an all-around secretary" said Diane, but added that the salary is notoriously poor for those jobs. Instead, she joined her husband in the construction business.

Although the women are not yet experienced enough to operate some of the heavier equipment, they check gradings, and work the roller machines. When needed, they dig ditches and footings.

They say the work is tiring. The hot sun, the noise, and the long hours take their toll at the end of the day. But to them, the benefits far outweigh the bad points.

On the roller machine is a line of dials and lights that reminds one of an airplane cockpit.

"It's not that hard to operate" says Darlene. Her friend Diane adds that although the equipment may initially appear frightening because of its size and loudness, they now enjoy working it.

When asked if they planned to make this a short career they replied "No, its too much fun." Diane believes that the men they work with enjoy having them on the job. She thought they boosted morale and gave the men someone to kid with. "Everybody helps each other out" was a male worker's comment.

And what do two female construction employees do when they are not on the job? Diane and her husband are raising their six-month-old boy. Darlene says she and her husband live rather quietly, and enjoy being outdoors on weekends.

Women in the construction business are more prevalent each year. According to Jo Wilson, a lead-framing carpenter for a Port St. Lucie development, women are on the job as roofers, lead carpenters, surveyors, and frame workers.

"They don't bother me as long as they do their job" he added. Diane Barker and Darlene Smith plan to be on the job for quite some time. Both believe that because of the high wages, more women will eventually join them in their line of work.

JBE Halloween Carnival nets $3,000

Everybody was there including Miss Piggy, the devil, a schmoo, an alligator, and a Christmas tree with lights. It was the annual Jensen Beach Halloween Carnival which drew a crowd of hundreds to the school grounds and raised some $3,00, according to the chairman, Beverly Meer.

The afternoon's activities opened with a costume parade in the cafeteria with each grade competing for prizes for the prettiest, scariest, funniest, and most original. Many costumes reflected lively imagination as well as craftsmanship. Mary Lou Sanders served as mistress of ceremonies and Genie Buchanan was parade chairman.

On the school lawn there was a variety of booths including games of chance and skill, spun cotton candy, popcorn, coffee and doughnuts, and one selling houseplants.

A highlight of the carnival was the spook house created by Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Fowler. Visitors wandered through tunnels of black plastic where they were startled by monsters leaping out from the dark and scarifying scenes made more weird with the use of blacklight and fluorescent paint.

Here are the winners of the costume parade listed in order of the prettiest, scariest, funniest, and most original:

Kindergarten: Marey Burford, Michael Conti, Steffany Vernon, Kerri Wallace; 1st grade: Melany Olsen, Dan Purdue, Rae Ann Meeker, Tristi Allard; 2nd grade: Tiffany Bennett, Toni Dagata, Jeff Ray, James Harrell, 3rd grade: Denise Slockbower, Billy Shanley, Billy Petterson, Tyler Smithey; 4th grade: Jeri Van Curen, Dawn Horvath, (Jennifer Harrell, Allison and Kelly Patton), [illegible] Smith; 5th grade: Sharon Jerden, Frank Travota, Michael [illegible] Karin Leone.

Seven seniors are commended

Seven Martin County High School seniors have been commended for outstanding performance in the 26th National Merit Scholarship Program.

The commended students are Mary S. Bastian, Michael Budnick, John J. Geraghty, Greg Orear, Gary T. Ray, Gene A. Ray and Wayne M. Sutherland.

According to MCHS Principal Dale Cryan, the students showed exceptional academic promise, scoring among the top five percent of Merit Program participants.

Students in the top four percent are eligible to compete as semifinalists for 1981 merit scholarships.

SA opens in Stuart

The local Salvation Army unit is expanding its operations in order to better serve the ever-growing needs of the Indian River area, according to Lt. Charles J. Noel, unit commander.

The unit is opening an office this week in Stuart, 501 N. U.S. 1.

Heretofore, those areas have been served from the main office, but the caseload and needs are growing to the extent that they may now be served more properly from local operations, Lt. Noel said.

For example, the lieutenant pointed out, the recently-undertaken Misdemeanor Probation Program now includes around 300 individuals, while the unit's regular program caseload is steadily growing heavier.

Ada Baum was School volunteer teacher 45 years

BY ERNIE CURWEN

Many seniors are bored stiff with TV, cards and shopping and would like to fill their empty hours, doing something interesting and helpful, but don't know how to go about it.

Well, it's easy, just call Marge Power, at Adult Education (287-6400; Ext. 163) and tell her you are willing to help with the school 'kids'.

All sorts of help is needed, from 'one-to-one' on the '3Rs' to clerical work. Only qualification, according to Marge, "Do you like kids?" (Also Janet Rizzolo can use slide shows on study related subjects).

So, one day a few years ago, Ada Baum of 1 Pepper St. OBP, decided that shuffling and cards weren't enough and volunteered for this work, and although without transportation, she has continued to help out 2 or 3 days a week. And, her 45 years of teaching came in mighty handy.

Ada was born in a small Canadian village that has scarcely grown a bit in the last 75 years. Ada has a brother living there, whom she visits every summer. It's called Bathany, Ont. and that's where she grew up, until she went to the Peterboro Normal School.

Ada was a reel ol' time teacher, starting with the one room school house, where she taugh 8 grades at a time. Then, in Toronto, she taught under the modern conditions.

During this time, Ada raised a family of 2 girls and 3 boys, all now married, giving Ada 13 grandchildren and 6 'greats'. She sees them often, with frequent trips to Saskatchewan. Also, her son Jerry visits here every winter, staying over on the Island.

Ada came to Ocean Breeze in 1949. Her daughter knew a man on 10th st who had a trailer for sale. It looked better to her than the West Palm area, where her favorite pastime shuffling wasn't convenient. In 1959, she married Bill Baum and moved to 1 Pepper St. and that's where she lives at present.

Shuffling is Ada's main interest outside of volunteer school work, although she does play 'thirteen' at times and was once an ardent duplicate bridge player, under Dr. Moore's instructions.

But, shuffling was her main recreation throughout the years, she played in many tournaments, winning some trophies; also, at one time Ada was a referee and did that walking back and forth. Ada says that she's still 'shuffling along' as it is good out-of-doors exercise. As transportation allows, she helps out at church affairs and with her neighbors.

Then, around 1976, when Boyd Smith headed up the AARP Senior Information Center, Ada 'manned' the information table at Publix, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. every Friday during the winter months. This was a most worth-while project and a great place to meet and help the seniors of Martin County with their problems, regards: insurances; taxes; meetings; meals; social security; medicare; transportation, etc. When seniors needed help, Ada was there, willing and able, with answers to all those questions the seniors wanted to ask, but didn't know where to ask.

School volunteering started up in Ontario a few years ago, when the new math was introduced (years earlier than here) and student help was needed on a 'one to one' basis. When the need occured here, Ada was ready to help out. But she had a transportation problem (in those days MCCA had only one bus), so she had to settle for working next door at the Environmental Study Center.

Ada did some work with the students who had reading and writing problems, but generally it was helping to keep the young folks in order and rounding up the 'strays'. They went to the ocean, to the river, to the savannas to learn about birds, beasts, bugs, fish and the creepy-crawlies, trees, plants, algae and all the things that make up the environment.

There was a lot of walking at times, right now she is confined to clerical but plus-80-year-old Ada never had a problem keeping up, although some of the small fry were worried about her. One time a lil' lad asked Ada if she was tired, and was amazed when she said "No", as he had to admit that he was. This is what Ada liked to do best, but work in the administration office. More like Ada are needed.

Shutters have come off everywhere, looks as if over 50 percent of the winter residents (snow birds) are back and have opened up for another season. It was a happy time as friends and neighbors got together after a few months separation and the weather cooperated with bright blue skies, balmy breezes, mid-eighty temperatures and a little much needed rain.

All said, they darn glad to be back, the miserable 30 and 40 degree weather 'was for the birds' (but not the snow birds).

Generally, the number of returnees drop off just before voting day in presidential election year, but not this year as afound 50 flew-in last week to make a recorded total of 185. They were as follows:

Tom and Dorothy Elliot; George and Betty Ryder; Edward and Theresa Losier; Devereux and Margret Cunningham; Velma Westcott; Steve and Alice Gegan; Henry and Pricilla Peterson; Carl and Dorothy Huggins; Joe and Elsie Battles.

Harry and Margret Sharp; Joe and Ann Balinghoff; Lewis and Kathleen Newman; Earl and Clara Fisher; Jannette Morse; Alice Mathews; George and Marg Hindman; Cyril and Mable Stevens; Rhea Woodbury; Jerry and Norma Irish; Ted Chilton.

Frank and Cindy Zimmerman; Frank and Georgina McDonagh; Pete and Evelyn Hillman; Malcolm and Irene Wildey; Elfreda Cherrier; Robert and Violet Hagnaman; Hazel Carlson; Percy and Ethel Jones; Mike Dryer.

Folks have asked from time to time about the Door to Door Limousine Service to West Palm Airport. So, here it is again. Leaves Jensen Beach about 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. and returns, leaving airport at 1:30 and 4:00 p.m. Costs $14.00 per person; for reservations 334-5500.

PARK EVENTS

GAME NIGHT with number calling, resumed its winter schedule; 7 p.m. every Monday and Wednesday in the Clubhouse. It was decided to help hold the line on inflation. The card change will remain 25 cents and not go to 35 cents as suggested by some players. It's good to see some restraint on higher prices.

LEATHER CLASS started Thursday, Oct. 25 and will continue, every Thursday, 1 to 4 p.m. in the Clubhouse. According to instructor Mary Strohm, there is room for more. Reg. fee $5.00, info. 334-2345.

CERAMIC CLASS will start first semester, Nov. 3, in the Ceramic Room. Classes every Monday and Friday 9 to 12. Reg. fee $5.00. Instructor Belva Dean, says plase apply early as class is limited to 20 students. For info. 334-6085.

DANCE CLASSES will get started around Nov. 1, about the same as last year, watch bulletin boards. There just might be a Saturday Night dance on Nov. 1 (mixed, square, round and ballroom).

By-the-way, square dancing western style got its start in Colorado around 1948, when Dr. Lloyd Shaw was studying USA folk dancing and had his students try out variations of the ol' Eastern style square dancing. The first two new movements tried were 'Do-Paso' and 'Alamand-Thar,' and now there are over 3500 'calls,' with 6 to 8 new ones per month, but only 2 or 3 per year survive. However, the Mainstream Dancers (most of us here) only have to have 100-200 calls on tap for instant replay.

The dances were at first run by 'prompters,' but with the advent of electronic music systems, 'Callers' took over and now there are 9000 or so, world wide, calling to over 3 million dancers (those with an English, German or Japanese accent are a lot of fun). The costumes have evolved, from ankle length skirts and hoop skirts (it must have been novel dancing with a floor full of swirling 'hoops') to the present day western duds for the men and short fluffy skirts and pettipants for the 'gals.'

SHUFFLERS were at 'loose-ends' last weekend when the courts were having their Wash-Wax & Polish, so they will be ready for the season start next week. Sorry to report the Guys and Gals challenge tournament didn't come off. Gals couldn't muster enough strength (or was it players).

Lots of folks have come back, so names have been added to the team lists as follows: Indian River League, Tom and Dorothy Elliott; Pete and Evelyn Hillman. Central League, Bert and Evelyn Dandy. Backaroos, George Dean; Bert Dandy; Peanuts Cunningham; C. J. Stevens; Pete Hileman.

GOLFERS are off to an early start with the first round on Saturday Oct. 25, 10 a.m. at the Holiday Country Club. They had some lively matches last year, so all OBP golfers better get in on the fun. For info. see Merle Bender, 3 NE 10th St.

Tennis

BY TOM FALKENBURG
Director of Tennis Indian River Plantation

Sunday afternoon at the Plantation Mixed Doubles Handicap Round Robin Switcheroo, the weather was magnificent and the contestants could hardly wait to do battle.

Twenty contestants played 4 games with the no-add system, to speed up playing time, and with their handicaps no one knew exactly how they were doing until the final match. When all the scores were in, this is how they finished. Don ST. Onge, men's winner with 16 games. Jeryn Garich, women's winner with 18 games. Ed Garich, lost in play off to Don, giving him 2nd place. Jean Wamnes, took 2nd in the women's with 17 games. Hilde Pate, Caroline Conn, & Ann Munson all tied with 16 games.

The rest of the field was also closely bunched, making the handicapper happy. Betsy Bevis just missed low honors, Judy McCaskill edged her out by 1 game.

Sixty dollars in 'funny money' was distributed among the winners. All of these contestants got a little sampling of what the Octoberfest Week-End activities will be like, November 1st and 2nd at the Plantation. Bob Erikson, golf pro reports many entries for the golf events, and tennis also looks like its going to be a big turnout, should be with over $1000 in funny money prizes. The reason its called 'funny money', is that its so much fun to spend.

Renee' Richards called last weekend to see if we could string up a racket for her match with Zenda Leiss at the Tioman Club in Vero. She came down to pick it up, and again mentioned how much she liked IRP and the WTA tourney we had. She said that she has started working out with weights, exercise, and running to get in top shape for these youngsters. Then she asked me what sort of program I was on when playing the circuit, and I said all I did was play tennis 6 hours a day like everyone else of that era. Gonzales, Kramer, Riggs, Budge and that group never to my knowledge did anything but play a lot of tennis.

But it is much different when you are 46 years old and trying to keep up with the youngsters. She played a fair young girl from Bolleteri's Camp from Sarasota, in the finals at Riomar Yacht Club in Vero, and lost 4-6, 7-6 (10-8), 6-1. You can just see the legs giving out. However, if she can get in the Ladies 45 Div. at the U.S. Open next year, Renee' will be super tough against any women her age. In the men's final Craig Wittus, Ft Lauderdale, Def. Ben Testerman, Knoxville, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2.

Samaritans Calling

BY NELLIE D. COOK

A few weeks ago I mentioned our Loan Closet was at an all time low. Today it is lower. Now in case anyone does not know about this service to the residents of Jensen Area, the Loan Closet began back in the early 60s when Clem Curtis and Rosemund Chambers began collecting an assortment of used wheel chairs, walkers, canes, and storing them for the use of others when they were in need of the same.

The idea took on well and we got many, many items from families, when they had no further use for them and were kind enough to pass them to us. Many others could benefit from them, and then return them to the Samaritans.

When Ocean Breeze Ambulance had to close out, they too added the greater part of their supplies to us.

So great were the number of items we accumulated, when the County built our building, quite a large area called "the Cage" was set aside for them.

Less than a year and a half ago our Cage was well stocked, but the service became wider known, or there were more in need due to our increased population, they went. Whatever the reason, something has to be done if this service is going to continue.

If you have any of our supplies, PLEASE return them if not still in use. If you are unable to return them yourselves, let us know and some of our Auxillary members will pick them up. Just let us know. Here is a quote from our Loan Closet Mangaer, Ray La Frey. "In view of the fact our Local Closet is getting so low, we may have to institute some form of deposit, or rental before we let out. Another reminder. "We do not service outside of the Jensen Area. The reason being, most of our equipment has been donated by residents of Jensen."

When returning anything, please sign your name to the book or clip board used for this purpose so we can take your name off the Borrowed Slip.

Two new rigs are in service, and may I add that after being thoroughly cleaned and fully stocked, they both passed the county and state rating with an EXCELLENT.

We would like to thank all who helped transfer the supplies and electrical equipment. Thanks to the Auxillary members who helped. Especially the Tongate family who brought their children, the youngest being 9½ months. They made our day.

Some seniors are saying that they are not going to bother to vote this year as they prefer 'NONE OF THE ABOVE'. However, AARP and all other senior organizations are saying that's all wrong, they say go to the polls and vote regardless, vote 'against' something, but "VOTE", to let them know there is a big bunch out here watching them. Then, regardless of the outcome, they will be on their toes to do the best they can (it's a hope), and you'll know you haven't shirked your duty and privilege.

This week the seniors spent most of their time grumbling about the dull election and continued double digit inflation and wondering if the rumored 'Hostage Release' was another hoax, so here's something of interest from a weekly magazine.

John C. Pollock, Research Director of Research & Forecasters, Inc. reported that corporation managers are trying to retain more of the older workers, now that mandatory retirement at 65 is no longer required, as "OLDER WORKERS ARE MORE PRODUCTIVE". That the seniors have always know, but are glad others now realize it.

Detroit cars up 23 percent while foreign cars up only 12 percent, was a kind-of follow-up item. For surely that's no way to sell more cars, and maybe the older workers will have to show them how they did it.

Anyway, the point is that United Auto Workers want 4 or 5 years of protective tariff, which they admit will cost the general public at least 8 billion dollars. But, they say it will be well worth it to get their union members back to work. Maybe, that is what is needed, but here's a thought.

If such a tariff is enacted, it should have some 'strings' attached to it, like the Chrysler loan guarantee. The auto industry should be required to get its house in order, by increasing worker productivity and product quality, so that again american made cars would be preferred over all other, everywhere in the world, without any special government support. That's something to think about and if you agree, write to Congress.

Here's something else to think about. The affluent 1970 retirees are getting increased media attention lately, causing some backlash of "What do seniors need programs for, they are getting bigger income now than when they were working". It must be remembered, that there are still millions of 1960 retirees struggling to get by, without much success, for here's what they have to contend with.

Last week's Mirror, mentioned prices of 15 years ago; bacon 39 cents; apples 5 pounds 39 cents; white meat tuna, 3 cans for $1; best bread 23 cents; hamberg 54 cents; new big car $2500; gasoline 35 cents; doctor $5; etc. Some workers and officials, say so what, all incomes are up in proportion.

But, that's not the case of the 1960 retiree, who's income was 'pegged' when the above prices were normal, so it's no wonder they can't make their Social Security check last out the month and it looks like double digit inflation is here to stay. Therefore, VOTE for who you think will seriously try to peg inflation and perhaps most of all, provide leadership; TO GIVE US THE WILL TO DO WHAT WE MUST TO GET OURSELVES OUT OF THIS MESS, no matter how much it hurts.

CHAPTER EVENTS

The regular monthly meeting, Thurs. Oct. 16, was well attended and was opened promptly at 1:30 p.m. by president John Vance. First there was a short memorial service for Mr. Charles MacIntyre (president) who was killed recently in an auto accident. It was conducted by Chapter Chaplin, Ethel Tucker, with Eulogy by Ernie Curwen and closed with a hymn beautifully sang by Ethel Tucker, without accompaniment.

Next some changes were voted on: Ruth Woodruff, 1st V.P.; Pearl Wyse, 2nd V.P. and Dorothy Stokes a Director, all to fill vacated positions. Dorothy Stokes was appointed Building Block Chairman and Lavern Meyer will take over the 'Call Girls' from Lucy Prohaska, who has done a remarkable job handling the girls, but for reason of health must resign. Many, many thanks, Lucy.

32nd ANNIVERSARY

Hoyt C. Murphy Inc., Realtors

The 32nd annual meeting of Hoyt C. Murphy Inc., Realtors was held at the Holiday Inn West Saturday. During the annual meeting recognition was given to the contest winners and the top producers' bonus checks were presented to various members of the organization for outstanding performance. The business meeting was followed by a cocktail party for all personnel and their families at the Holiday Inn.

The Murphy organization began as a one man office over 32 years ago. During the years it has grown to be one of the largest Real Estate organizations in Florida. It is incorporated and many of the officers and personnel have been associated with the company for over 25 years. The Murphy organization belongs to the local, state, national, and international Association of Realtors.

Hoyt C. Murphy, the founder of the organization, is past president of the Ft. Pierce Board of Realtors and also past state president of the Farm and Land Brokers. Murphy is one of approximately 370 Accredited Farm and Land Brokers in the United States. He was the first member in the Indian River area. Murphy was just recently named to "Who's Who in Real Estate" an honor obtained by less than 5% of the nation's Realtors. He is also past president of the Ft. Pierce St. Lucie County Chamber of Commerce and a member of Rotary, and the Elks Club.

Credit for the continued growth and success of the agency according to Murphy is due to the many loyal hard working associates and office personnel. "We take great pride in our personnel and Realtor Associates," says Murphy. "We offer them every opportunity to make money and become professionals in the Real Estate business. We are also grateful for the many clients that refer business to our organization from year to year. The majority of our business now comes from referrals built up over the past 32 years. We have done business with buyers and sellers from every state and many foreign countries. Many of our clients or their families have done business with our agency for over 30 years."

The principle offices are located in Ft. Pierce, Vero Beach, and Port St. Lucie. Complete real estate service is available including listings, sales, management, consultation, and appraisals. Separate departments specialize in the various phases of real estate. Sales for the past year increased 27% and Murphy predicts a continued increase in spite of high interest rates and predictions of a general slow up in the economy.

During the past year a second office was opened in Vero Beach and the Port St. Lucie office has been more than doubled in size. Murphy has purchased the 16 year old Saunders estate adjoining the main office. Restoration is now in progress to make this into an office annex.

Murphy stated, "From the day that we started business to the present time we have used the slogan, 'FOR THE BEST IN REAL ESTATE'. In order to live up to this slogan we go into our 33rd year with the best staff management, sales, and office personnel and also a new training program. Expansion is also planned. We shall continue to offer buyers and sellers 'The Best in Real Estate'."

THE NEW CHAMPION—Fran Wade of Texarkana, Texas holds the plaque emblematic of the 1980 women's bass fishing world championship. Fran won the honor and $5,000 in cash and merchandise, including a Ranger bass boat, against a field of the top 28 Bass'n Gal contestants during the two-day Classic fished on the Ouachita River in Louisiana, Oct. 24-25. She took over from Chris Houston, the 1979 winner, who finished second this time.

BASS'N GAL FOUNDER—Sugar Ferris, founder and president of Bass'n Gal acted as M-C during the weigh-in ceremonies after the Classic bass fishing tournament fished for two days on the Ouachita River by the 29 top women bassers for 1980. At the microphone, she is interviewing one of the contestants while the weighmaster waits to weigh in the fish.

Dam honey hole wins Wade Ouachita classic

Story and photos By Dick Lundin

BY DICK LUNDIN

THAT OLD SAW about the "grass is greener on the other side" held true for Texarkana's Fran Wade who won the $15,000 first prize in last week's Bass'n Gal Classic on the Ouachita River at Monroe, La.

The attractive 34-year-old angler drove her bass boat 36 miles up the river and Bayou D'Arbonne to the spillway at the Lake D'Arbonne dam both days of the tournament, Thursday and Friday, to the "honey hole" she'd located during Tuesday and Wednesday's practice rounds. It didn't let her down.

She took the lead the first day in the 28-contestant field vying for the 1980 women's bass fishing world championship with an impressive 13 lb 1 oz. catch and then coasted in with a two-day total of 17 lbs. 10 oz., enough to distance runnerup Chris Houston, 1980 Bass'n Gal Angler of the Year who wound up with 15-7 yet caught her limit of five bass, 12 inches or better, both days.

Wade said she'd taken an hour and 10 minutes and lots and lots of gas to make the trip to the dam but affirmitted it was a good investment as she received the championship plaque, jacket, bass boat, merchandise and cash at the weigh-in platform after the tournament was over at 3:30 p.m. on Friday.

The other top 10 finishers in the tournament were Linda England, 14-2; Wendy Blackwell, 13-9; Fran Chambers, 12-11; Myria Martin, 11-15; Janice Cheek, 11-13; Margaret Morgan and Freda Adams, 10-12; Lyn Gauthier, 9-14.

Sugar Ferris, Bass'n Gal founder, and husband, Bob, announced after the event that "because of the good catches and popularity of the area with the contestants" Bass'n Gal will hold one of its regular national tournaments on the Ouachita River in 1982.

Lyn Gauthier of Shreveport, La. caught the big bass of the tournament on the first day. It weighed 5 lbs. 5 oz.

Bass'n Gal was founded in 1976 by Sugar Ferris after she had conducted a series of FEM tournaments for women on Lake Livingston in Texas. "We organized in rebellion of not being able to participate in men's events," Sugar said somewhat defiantly.

In 1978, Bass'n Gal debuted with the Louisiana Invitational on Toledo Bend and followed through with the Arkansas Invitational on Lake Millwood, the Tennessee Invitational on Percy Priest and the Texas Invitational on Sam Rayburn, concluding with the first Classic on the St. John's River.

In 1979, Bass'n Gals fished the Florida Invitational on the St. John's, the Missouri Invitational at Table Rock, the Texas Invitational on Lake Livingston, the Louisiana Invitational at Toledo Bend, and the Classic at Lake Dardanelle, Arkansas.

In 1980, preceding the Classic on the Ouachita River, they fished the Georgia Invitational on West Point Lake, the Kentucky Invitational on Kentucky-Barkley Lakes, the Arkansas-Invitational on Lake Millwood, and the Texas Invitational at Toledo Bend.

LIKE THE LPGA, Bass'n Gal has had its birth pangs but the 1980 Classic at Monroe, La. last week was done in style and there seems to be little doubt that the women have successfully proved their right to be competing in the bass tournament field. This year, their events have been attended by an average of 150 contestants, about half and half, boats and non-boats. "Our girls are equal to the men and can feel a strike and set a hook just as quick if not quicker," Sugar said.

The biggest problem that Bass'n Gal seems to face is that smallness of its purses. Too many of its contestants, even those who qualified for this year's Classic, just don't make enough in prize money to begin to offset their expenses. I fished as an observer last week with Linda Moore and Corky Becker, both from Welaka, Florida on the St. John's. This year, Linda won a paltry $200 and yet finished a very respectable 13th on the list of those winning Classic points. Corky won $493 in finishing 19th.

Entry fees are only $50 and that, as Corky pointed out wryly, is just a small part of the $700-800 it costs her and husband Allen to make each out-of-state tournament. "We had to have a garage sale and Allen had to work overtime so we could be here at the Classic," Corky confessed.

Both Linda and Corky, as just about every other Bass'n Gal participating in the Classic, couldn't say enough nice things about their spouses who "made it all possible."

THE TWO FLORIDIANS have somewhat differing philosophies. Corky learned to bass fish on the Chattahoochee River in Georgia, fell in love with bass fishing on the St. Johns, and is a rabid bass tournament gal. Bass'n Gal events are the high points of her year and you'd have to see her crouched behind the controls of her bass boat, waiting for that electrifying "one minute to takeoff" announcement; to see her come alive and leave the humdrum workaday world for two days of pure excitement and camaraderie.

Linda is much more serious about the whole thing. She looks upon it as a challenge, something to do well, but something she says she may leave behind some day once she feels she has mastered it.

Both, the 39-year-old Corky and the 36-year-old Linda, mother of three, go at it hammer and tongs as do all of the other Bass'n Gals. "Keep chunkin' is their watchword," and they live by their word on the water once the signal's given to go.

I especially liked Linda's resolve to do all she can to have bass spawning limits made off limits "to insure future productivity."

Unfortunately, the Classic wasn't their cup of tea this year. Linda was shut out the first day but for several bass under the specified 12-inch limit, and you could tell how her pride was injured. Corky came in with two keepers weighing a little over two pounds the first day, but fell off to a single one-pounder the second day when Linda improved her catch to finish a little ahead of her Florida colleague.

ONE OTHER THING. Linda drives her bass boat like there's a tomorrow. Corky drives hers like there isn't. I thought the wild ride I took across Lake Okeechobee last May was tops in wild excitement, but a 20-mile zig-zag ride with Corky down the Ouachita River at dawn at speeds from 60 to 65 miles per hours, topped it. It was cold and I had no goggles (Corky did). When she finally slowed down at her destination, Bayou Chenier, and I could collect myself and take a deep breath, I asked her if we'd reached Baton Rouge yet? What a bone-chilling, breath-taking ride! Somehow, if I had never disdained owning a 150 H.P. Mercury outboard before, a day with Corky Becker convinced me I'm just too old for such mile-a-minute thrills on the water.

AS AN OBSERVER, I was allowed to fish whenever it suited the contestant, but fishing with borrowed tackle and lures and at the back of the boat wasn't calculated to catch many bass. I caught three, all under 12 inches, in the two days, fishing perhaps 3-4 hours overall. It was a great experience and I wouldn't have missed watching those great Bass'n Gals in action, but if I want to go bass fishing it won't be as an observer again. Definitely not.

The Ouachita River is way over-rated if you compare it to Florida's wild rivers. The advance word was that it is one of America's most scenic rivers. If that's so, you have to exclude Florida because our rivers have far more natural beauty than there is anywhere up and down the Ouachita, and Florida largemouths make yearlings out of the Ouachita's biggest bass. There's no way I'd recommend that any Floridian go way out there to fish for bass when we have more and bigger bass right here at home.

The fishing Thursday and Friday wasn't too good out there but the full moon on the 23rd and a cold front that moved in Thursday night, making it cold and windy on Friday, didn't help bass fishing any on the Ouachita.

If the name Ouachita boggles your mind, it's a 900 mile long river, rising in the Ouachita Mountains in western Arkansas. It flows east, southeast and south through southern Arkansas and northeast Louisiana into the Red River stystem, becoming the Black River when it joins up with the Tensas River. That help any?

A LOCAL CHAPTER of Bass'n Gal might be in order here if there are enough women in the area who like to bass fish. That's how Linda Moore and Corky Becker became members of Bass'n Gal. They both belong to Bass'n Babes, a local Welaka bass club and wound up on the tournament trail after getting competitive experience bass fishing in chapter tournaments and in couples' tournaments on the St. John's River.

Also, maybe it's time that the Suart-Fort Pierce Bass Club starts up an auxiliary Jr. Bass Club for area boys and girls, with divisions like, say, 9-11 and 12-15. I know that this is primarily a saltwater fishing area but we have lots of fresh water too, such as canals, ponds, the Jensen Savannas and nearby lakes like Marian, Okeechobee, Blue Cypress and Kissimmee. This is something that ought to be given serious consideration and I for one would be glad to help with it. For starters, we might call it the Savannas Yearling Bass Club.

CORKY BECKER—It was cold on the Ouachita River in Louisiana last Friday but Bass'n Gal contestant Corky Becker from Welaka, Florida was dressed for it. She even had on a snowmobile suit to protect her from the weather while she fished in the women's world championship Classic. Luck was against her both days of the bass tournament but she said just to be there was the experience of a lifetime. (Dick Lundin photo)

MIAMI DOLPHINS

Pesky Jets just about end Dolphins' playoff hopes

BY DICK LUNDIN

MIAMI'S DOLPHINS, playing a "must" game in Shea Stadium Monday night, played dead most of the way against the 1-6 New York Jets in losing to the Gothamites for the fifth straight time, 17-14, and just about ending their flickering hopes for a post-season playoff berth.

Now 4-4, and tied with Baltimore, two games behind the 6-2 Buffalo Bills and New England Patriots, the Dolphins face the almost impossible task — for them — of winning on the road the next two games. They play the Oakland Raiders next Sunday and the Los Angeles Rams the following Sunday, both games out on the West Coast where Miami teams are traditional losers.

By all yardsticks, then, they figure to return to the Orange Bowl with a 4-6 record to meet the San Francisco 49ers three weeks from now.

Of course, if they should miraculously even split the next two games, they'd retain a slim chance of still making those coveted playoff games as a Wild Card, but look at that situation!

Right now, there are six teams in the AFC with better records than the Dolphins and that means that three of them are in competition for a Wild Card slot. Buffalo and New England are 6-2, and Cleveland, Houston, San Diego and Oakland are all 5-3. At 4-4, the Dolphins are even up with Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Kansas City, Denver and Seattle.

The playoff picture's bleak, right?

WHAT HAPPENED in that "must" game up in Shea where the downtrodden Jets whipped the Dolphins for the fifth straight time? Plenty, and all bad.

Rookie David Woodley went all the way at quarterback and didn't do a bad job, but the entire Miami team seemed in limbo for the first 54 minutes of the game, except for an opening kickoff drive that fizzled after reaching the New York 24. Ken Schroy intercepted Woodley to abort what was to be Miami's only offensive thrust until the closing minutes.

The Jets then drove 99 yards in 17 plays to take a 7-0 lead, Scott Dierking scoring. The Jets did it again late in the second quarter with Richard Todd driving them 74 yards in 13 plays. He ran it over from 16 yards out to make it 14-0, and when Pat Leahy kicked a 48-yard field goal with 6:31 left to play, it looked like curtains.

ONLY THEN, down 17-0 and all but out of it, did Miami come alive.

Using Nick Giaquinto, Tony Nathan, Joe Rose and Duriel Harris as passing targets, Woodley led an 87-yard drive in 17 plays that culminated in an 11-yard scoring pass to Nathan and a 17-7 deficit with just 1:00 on the clock. It looked like just a face-saver.

An outside kick was successful, however, and the fired-up Dolphins stormed downfield again on passes to Giaquinto and Harris,Nathan diving over from one yard out to make it a respectable 17-14 with just eight seconds remaining in the game.

Miami didn't try another onside kick and the game ended with Todd falling on the ball and time running out.

En pace requiescat!

Woodley really got a passing workout in his second starting role, hitting on 22 of 42 passes for 224 yards and one touchdown. He was intercepted twice. Todd was 11 for 20 and was intercepted by Glenn Blackwood, Don Bessillieu and Don McNeal, but Miami was unable to capitalize on any of the New York miscues.

Delvin Williams led Miami rushers with 43 yards in 11 carries. Terry Robiskie was 8-27.

Nat Moore, Harris and Nathan caught four passes each from Woodley but it was the passes dropped that may have influenced the outcome more than the 22 that were caught. On one series, Moore, Hardy and Nathan dropped "catchable" passes blunting a burgeoning third quarter drive.

New York revived its ball control game of 1979 in marching for its first two touchdowns, with Dierking, Kevin Long and Bruce Harper running freely against a Miami defense that stiffened too late.

ELSEWHERE AROUND THE NFL, things are beginning to come into focus now that the 1980 season has reached the halfway point.

Probably the most shocking turn of events has been taking place in the AFC Central where the Pittsburgh Steelers have ruled for so many years. Who can remember the last time that Pittsburgh, injuries or not, stood at 4-4 and one game behind 5-3 Houston and Cleveland? Even the Cincinnati Bengals are 3-5 and just one game behind the Steelers. "How are the mighty fallen" might be a little premature, however. Once Pittsburgh gets Swann, Stallworth, Harris and Bradshaw back in the lineup it could be Katy-bar-the-door, but for now the long time have-nots in the AFC Central are living it up.

Nearly as amazing is the situation out in the AFC West where the surprising Oakland Raiders are tied with the favored San Diego Chargers at 5-3, just ahead of the 4-4 Kansas City, Denver and Seattle outfits. This is the only division in the NFL that doesn't have a loser after the first eight games.

On that note, it's interesting to observe that there are only five NFC teams (Philadelphia, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles and Atlanta) with .500 or better marks, whereas in the stronger AFC there are no less than 12! You have to wonder how long it'll take for the NFC to achieve parity with the AFC.

San Diego visits tough Cincinnati next Sunday while the Raiders will be entertaining their Miami "cousins" out on the West Coast where Miami has never beaten Oakland. The Raiders should be atop the AFC West when night falls out west next Sunday — unless Coach Shula finally figures out a way to win at Oakland.

OVER IN THE NFC, the Philadelphia Eagles lead the Dallas Cowboys in the NFC East, Philly is 7-1 while Dallas is 6-2. Chasing the two but far back on the track are 3-5 St. Louis and Washington and the bedraggled, hapless New York Giants. The Eagles play at Seattle and Dallas is at St. Louis next. Either could come a cropper but both will be heavily favored.

Out in the NFC West, those never-say-die Atlanta Falcons had to put up or shut up in Atlanta last Sunday and they put up as the division leading Los Angeles Rams fell back into a 5-3 tie with the Falcons. Both are ahead of 3-5 and skidding San Francisco and the sorrowful, inept New Orleans Saints with that horrendous 0-8. The Rams should be back on top next Sunday night what with the Saints playing at Los Angeles and the Falcons taking on the tough Bills in Buffalo, some task.

In the NFL's weakest division, the NFC Central, the Detroit Lions still cling to the lead at 5-3 but seem to be failing. In second place are Tampa Bay and Green Bay at 3-4-1, followed by Chicago and Minnesota with 3-5 records. The Lions and Billy Sims should brake their skid in hosting sagging San Francisco Sunday. Tampa Bay ought to find the visiting N.Y. Giants easy pickings. The Packers face a potential buzz saw in meeting the infuriated Steelers at Three Rivers. Bart Starr couldn't pick a worse time to vacation at Three Rivers.

Sam Hoover is the star

Sam Hoover, Martin County High's No. One cross-country team runner who's third in the Suncoast East Conference championship, has the nomination for "Athlete of the Week" in the Ft. Pierce Jai-Alai competition.

Hoover ran the three-mile course in 16 minutes and nine seconds and MCHS Track Coach John O'Connor predicts Hoover will break 16 minutes within the next two weeks.

"He's a hard worker with an excellent attitude towards training," O'Connor said.

With his nomination as "Athlete of the Week" Houston enters the judging for "Athlete of the Month," with weekly winners from the four-county area contending.

A trophy is waiting this month's outstanding athlete and an opportunity to be named "Athlete of the Year" which an accompanying $500 scholarship as the award.

Pyle and Cioffi look for APGA ranking

Two of the area's young golf professionals, Jay Pyle and Tom Cioffi are anxiously awaiting the day when they will receive their cards designating them as qualified Class A PGA professionals. Both have completed their time as apprentices and each has completed Business I and 2 courses at prescribed PGA schools and passed their player ability courses.

One of the final phases was the examinations they took last week upon completion of Course 2 of the PGA Business School which both attended for five days at Innsbrook. They took their final exams last week in that phase at Palm Beach Junior College. Both Cioffi and Pyle are awaiting a date soon when they will appear before a South Florida PGA Committee for sponsoring and interviews. Should they receive the sanctions of the committee each should receive appointments as Class A qualified PGA professionals.

Pyle is currently serving as head professional at Martin Downs Crane Creek and Cioffi is at Heritage Ridge in Hobe Sound.

Waldbillig scores ace

"Patience is truly a virtue" in the case of Marvin Waldbillig who scored the first hole in-one in his 35 years of golfing when he bagged an ace on the difficult par three 180 yard 16th hole at JDM Sunday.

Marvelous Marv, as he called by intimates, claims he has been close to the dream shot many times playing many miles of golf and striking more than a million blows throughout the years and having played more than 1000 courses from the Canadian border to the lower tip of Florida.

Marv, in scoring his first ace, executed the shot with the most difficult club, his driver, because of a strong wind which prevailed on JDM's South Course. Included in the foursome with Waldbillig were his wife Helen and their hosts Mr. and Mrs. Fred Doscher, who recently became members of JDM after many years as regulars at Sandpiper Bay.

Sandpiper Bay ladies play point tourney

Cora Mae Lindbury ran away with the fourth flight with a 47 total. Sylva Barnwell was at 38, Elfriede Wochatz 37. Jerry Bowrosen, 36, Maxie Rutherford, 35, and IvaDean Bouch scored 34.

Leaders of the fifth flight were Betty Nardone and Dotty Wolford with 39 points each. Three golfers 8 Gunna Leyda, Ruby Mack and Eleanor Flanagan were tied with 35, while Marion Brandon scored 34.

Larrabee is in charge of more than 160 golf carts. Others who are Cart and Bag Jockeys at the facility include Jim Furst, Tom Sarkesian, Lewis "Bud" Clahaugh, Harry Mingins, John Burmeister.

Sandtrap

BY MIKE SANDY

The Rinkers of Stuart continue to dominate the golf news in this area with the latest report having to do with 17 ... Gold Lauri Rinker already ... her sights on turning pro and joining the LPGA tour in 1983. She is a sophomore at the University of Florida in Gainesville where she is captain of the Lady Gators golf team.

In her recent bid for additional national honors, she played the Cedar Ridge C C course in Tulsa where she finished as second medalist and the fact that she conquered the tough course in her final round added to her aims. The same course will be the site of the U.S.G.A. Women's Open in 1983 and Lauri plans on participating in that event since she will be graduating in the Sprng of that year.

Larry who trained to France aiming to earn a qualifying spot on the PGA tour next year, missed by one shot. He plans to resume his participation in the J. C. Goosie Space Coast Mini tour event throughout Central Florida, an event in which he came through winning more than $30,000 plus another $10,000 in a similar tour throughout New England during the Fall season. Larry finished second in the Florida PGA this year adding some $3,300 to his bank account.

Meanwhile, reports have it that Lenny Rinker, a member of the Un. of Alabama golf team, is also entertaining the idea of turning pro, depending on how he improves during the next year.

And now comes word that Laine Rinker, father of the kids, has become a professional golfer with the "accent" on teaching golf to beginners and pros alike. It is a known fact that Laine, a former flower grower, has become a student of the golf game. He has made a comprehensive study of the golf swings of the top players, the biggest money winners.

He has a film library of such notables as Jack Nicholas, Arnold Palmer, Lee Trevino, Ben Hogan, Sam Snead and others. He has equipment with "stop-action", features in which he points out the basic moves in the golf swing, and he sincerely believes that a golfer who needs help can absorb the fundamentals of the correct moves.

Laine indicated he will use his film library and will give "swing" lessons in a net at Holiday C C.

A visitor this week to the Sandpiper Bay area was Xavier Rescigno, former minor and major league pitcher, who came here to spend time with two old friends, John A. DiBiasi of Port St. Lucie and Phil Kenny of Jupiter. The trio invited yours truly to a game of golf. We remember Mr. X when he played in the Eastern Baseball League as a member of the Albany Senators under "Rip" Collins.

The golf shots were many for DiBiasi and Kenny while X and yours truly recalled many incidents on and off the diamond. Both X and I talked of Eddie Sawyer who managed the Philadelphia Whiz Kids to a National League pennant in the 50's. X played under Eddie and I shared many a room with Sawyer when I covered Eastern League play. The first either of us have seen Sawyer was when he was honored by throwing out the first ball opening the recent Series.

"GRIP IT NATURALLY," SAYS RENO "TRIP" TRIPPERANO

Let's start at the beginning. The grip is the first thing you do. Right? The best grip comes naturally. To assume a natural grip with your left hand, you simply hold the hands at your side and let them hang naturally. Then merely move them forward onto the club without any turning or twisting of the wrists. In short, place your hands on the club in the same manner as they hang at your side. For most people, this will position the left hand so that the back of the hand faces more or less down the line of flight of the ball.

If you were to strike an object with the back of your left hand, you would naturally do so with the back of the hand rather than the back of the fingers. The same principle applies to golf, in that the back of the left hand and the wrist must lead the clubhead into the ball and it should absorb the force of the impact without breaking the wrist or your grip. This firm striking action is more likely to occur when the club is held so that pressure in the last two fingers of the wedge the grip securely against the fleshy part of the hand.

Apply the right hand to form a palm to palm grip. To achieve the proper right hand grip, let your right hand hang naturally at your side. Then simply move it forward to the club shaft so that it is applied to the club with the palm parallel to the palm of the left hand. The right wrist is more flexible and usable if you hold the club more with the fingers than the palm. Just as a baseball player can throw the baseball further with more snap if he holds the ball with his fingers than with the palm of his hand, so it is with the grip of the right hand.

Choose the size and type of grip that is best molded for your hands, to insure a single unit in the grip, whether it is interlocking, overlapping or the baseball grip.

Remember the first thing you do is grip the club. Do it properly and you'll enjoy the better results and lower scores.

Jean Henry talks birds

Jean Henry, director of the Audubon Wildlife Hospital in Stuart, recently spoke to the women of the Rio Lindo Garden Club.

Members of the group had the opportunity to hear about some of the work currently being done to preserve the wildlife in the area. Many of the injured animals in St. Lucie County as well as other areas are brought to Jean Henry. With her many years of experience, she not only nurses back to health, but teaches the younger animals how to adapt to the wilds.

Ms. Henry told the audience there remains one eagle's nest in the area. She added that the land, owned by General Development Corp, is staked out for building.

"It's going to go" said Ms. Henry.

Her concern for what she considers an endangered wildlife refuge area was apparant when she spoke of the situation with the Savannas. She said "This is a disgrace. To spend five million dollars for a piece of property and junk it." She added that ten years from now, there won't be any refuge areas to speak of.

Ms. Henry brought various wildlife birds with her to the program. With the help of her associate Ruth Stanwood, members of the garden club were able to see rare type of birds.

A Screech Owl that Ms. Henry says will never fly again, perched itself on her arm. She said the bird was shot and its delicate bones shattered. Another animal brought was the young Red Tail Hawk. The unfortunate bird had hit a high tension wire and had permanently lost a wing as a result.

A Barred Owl was found shot in Martin County and was brought to Ms. Henry for care. The rare animal is one of two species with solid brown eyes. She told the audience another Barred Owl that had met a similar fate in St. Lucie County. The two birds are in a mating cage, and Ms. Henry says she's keeping her fingers crossed.

Some of the problems facing animals today is not only a lack of refuge but a contamination of the food system. She explained that many birds are poisoned by a gradual build up of poisons in the fish they eat. She added that nutrients from the agricultural areas is transmitted through the fish into the birds.

"We must learn to live in harmony" Ms. Henry said.

JEAN HENRY calls this bird the brown face of Phyllis Diller. It is a one year old American Bidder that is soon to be released into freedom. Ms. Henry said he was hit by a car and was nursed back to health. (Photo by Cathie Macaulay)

Summer is over and fishing is getting better

BY DICK LUNDIN

IF YOU'RE EVER GOING FISHING around here, this is the time to do it, because action is heavy on just about every fishing front you can name, and sheer poetry on bluefishing in the Hutchinson Island surf.

Those blues have been in the surf up and down the beaches from the power plant to the House of Refuge for several weeks, but the schools were relatively small and you had to pick your spots. Now, that's all changed and we seem to have the greatest early season migration of bluefish in many a year, and they're running larger too, up to five and six pounds.

There is one thing, though. The best action on blues is always out a little ways from the beach and with a four to five ounce weight needed most of the time, you're better off with a stiff-tipped surf casting rod of at least 10 and preferably 12 to 13 feet in length. Such a rod can carry the weight without any strain and will enable you to easily cast your cut bait or spoon far out where the big schools of snapper and chopper blues are foraging for the baitfish frequenting the surf.

The best time is to fish the surf around a high tide, like from noon to 4 p.m. on Thursday to take advantage of the 2 p.m. high.

Although the early morning blue fishermen tend to use Krocodile spoons, usually one and one half ounces, best results at the moment for afternoon anglers seem to come from the use of cut mackerel, not ribbon fish or mullet for some reason or another.

You don't have to zero in on any particular spot on the beach, although many surfcasters seem to prefer the stretch from just below the Holiday Inn off "A1A below the Jensen Causeway, down to the Martin County Park-N-Fish access area a mile or so below the Holiday.

Don't let that bluefishing frenzy overcome you! Keep only what you know you'll eat and let the rest go. It's best to bury them in the sand as you catch them, to keep them cool. They are soft-fleshed and tend to deteriorate rather quickly. You'll appreciate them more if you keep a cooler in the car so that they remain suitably chilled until filleted.

OFFSHORE FISHING has been hampered somewhat by wind and waves, but there are sails, dolphin and wahoo here and there. The king mackerel, for one reason or another, aren't feeding right now too much. There are some big schools of Spanish mackerel just off the St. Lucie Inlet hitting clarkspoons and diamond jigs. Bottom fishing on the reefs off the inlet is pretty good for snapper, grouper, sea bass and trigger fish. That reef just north of the inlet about 4-6 miles out is a good one.

Mickey Moudy, wife of Capt. Marlin Moudy of the party boat Lady Stuart (286-1860), after pointing out that their fishing's been good lately, added: "The inlet's (St. Lucie) becoming worse, Dick. She's shoaling shut from those recent heavy ground swells. They're widening the new jetty, but it isn't helping any yet. It may, after they dredge it starting Nov. 15 — otherwise it'll go shut soon. You really have to be cautious at low tide if there's a ground swell. Watch out around buoys 3 and 4, especially for shoaling. If they don't do that dredging, Dick, a lot of people who depend on that inlet for their living are really going to be hurting just when the tourist influx begins."

If you plan to use that St. Lucie Inlet, arrange your entering and leaving pattern so that you sail safely around low tide. You could be glad you did.

ALL OF THE BLUES aren't in the surf. There are some big ones schooling at the Cross Roads near Sailfish Point where the St. Lucie and Indian Rivers come together. The best bait there is cut mackerel, but one boater says he caught several jumbos fishing with live bait.

Before leaving the surf for the nonce, there are a few small to medium-sized snook there and little pockets of whiting and small pompano where the blues aren't tormenting them too much. Two good places for whiting are the Mud Hole just below the Oceana condo and the area just below the power plant known as Normandy Beach. The whiting go for small pieces of fresh or frozen shrimp, or even sand fleas. Pompano like sand fleas and have to be 9½ inches, please!

If you're new to whiting fishing, buy one of those clever little whiting-float rigs they sell at some area bait shops, like the Snook Nook for one. It keeps the bait up off the bottom away from marauding crabs.

THE INDIAN RIVER has passels and passels of mangrove snappers from the Cross Roads clear up to Little Mud Creek three miles above the power plant. There are big schools of mullet in both Little and Big Mud Creeks, being savaged by big tarpon, and under the mullet are schools of mangrove snappers. To fish for them, use a troll-rite hook so that your live shrimp will fall rapidly down to the snappers. Let them swallow it before setting the hook.

In addition to the snappers, there are flounder and channel bass to keep you entertained while you're working on the snappers.

Seatrout fishing is excellent from Herman's Bay up to Big Mud Creek and appears to be tops in the middle of the river around those little spoil islands. Your best bet for seatrout action would seem to be a T-Zo rig or a trout teaser, but live shrimp'll bust you a few too.

Not too many are bridge fishing, what with the great surf fishing that is available now, but those fishing the Roosevelt Bridge on U.S. 1 just above downtown Stuart are making good catches of big black drum, sheepshead, croakers and mangrove snappers. Clams and live shrimp are the best baits. Fish an incoming tide if you can, like from 2-5 p.m. on Thursday.

Burning of mortgage at North Stuart Baptist

Homecoming celebration at North Stuart Baptist Church will get under way on Saturday, Nov. 1 at 6:30 p.m. with a covered dish supper, music, fellowship and memories of early days of the church.

On the next day, Sunday, the Rev. Robert E. Lee, former pastor, will preach at both the 11 a.m. and the 7:30 p.m. worship services.

The morning service will also feature the burning of the mortgage, signifying the retirement of the church debt, and will honor Rev. Lee by conferring on him the title of pastor emeritus. Charter members and former members now living out of town will also be recognized.

Arnold Bauer, deacon emeritus and church benefactor, has been named honorary chairman of the homecoming observance, which marks the eighth anniversary of the church's founding.

The church was organized on Oct. 11, 1972, by several couples who recognized the need for a new Baptist church to serve the needs of north Stuart, south Port St. Lucie, and portions of Jensen Beach. The present modern sanctuary was completed and occupied on April 14, 1974.

The Rev. Lee served as the first and only pastor until his retirement on Sept. 1, 1979. The present pastor, Dr. R. Wayne Stacy, succeeded him on Feb. 10, 1980. The Rev. Walter B. Rogers has served as associate pastor and minister of youth and music since June 19, 1977. The church now has about 250 members.

Substantial funds have already been donated for a new and larger structure on the present site on North Federal Highway about two miles north of Roosevelt Bridge.

One-way street proposed

BY AILSA DEWING

A proposal to make one way streets of sections of South Street, Skyline Drive and Hilltop Street will be considered by Martin County commissioners at their Nov. 18 meeting.

When only four residents of the South Street area attended a public hearing tuesday on the proposal to restrict South Street to eastbound traffic, Commissioner Frank Wacha requested that the hearing be reconvened in two weeks.

"I do not feel today's hearing had proper coverage," Wacha said, "And I think it would be unfair to try to make a determination without hearing the recommendations."

The recommendations alluded to by Wacha included a traffic pattern submitted by County Engineer Ed Greenamyer that would route traffic east only on South Street between Skyline and Highland; north only on Skyline from South to Hilltop, and west only on Hilltop between Skyline and Highland.

The original proposal to make all of South Street one-way eastbound is not feasible, Wacha said unless the road could be widened from its present 18 feet to the standard width of 20 or 22 feet, and that would require an estimate on the cost involved.

The petition to limit South Street to one-way traffic originated with residents along the street who object to South Street being used as a shortcut by motorists bypassing the signal light at Savanna Road and commercial Street.

The four residents who spoke at yesterday's hearing related accounts of accidents and near-accidents due to speeding cars.

John Haskins of 1582 South St. told commissioners he had conducted his own traffic count during three one-hour periods whichshowed that between 11 am and noon 72 vehicles used the street, between 2:30 and 3:30 pm, 71 vehicles passed through, and from 4:30 to 5:30, 94 vehicles.

"That was 237 cars during 180 minutes or one car every 45 seconds," he said.

Another recommendation during yesterday's hearing would prohibit northbound cars on Skyline Drive from turning left into Commercial Street.

During the session Wacha asked Greenamyer if copies of the proposed traffic pattern could be supplied for distribution among residents to be affected.

It was also suggested that the pattern be tested for a three-month period during which time motorists might be discouraged form short-cutting on South Street.

The hearing will be continued at 3:30 pm. Nov. 18

In other business yesterday, commissioners approved installation of streetlights on Media Street intersections in South Jensen Beach and at all intersections in Leilani Heights.

Requested a report from Greenamyer concerning repair of the bulkhead on Jensen Beach Causeway that was damaged by Hurricane David.

Approved final plat for adding 10 single family lots at Sugar Hill.

Give blood Friday

Circle Friday, Nov. 7, on the calendar as a red letter day. It's the day the Blood mobile will be in Jensen Beach collecting donations to the Palm Beach Blood Bank.

This special community drive is being co-sponsored by the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce and its newest member, Hardee's.

The blood bank mobile unit will be parked in front of Hardee's from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. Business people and others with limited time won't have to wait in line, however, because appointments can be arranged through the Chamber office. Some people have received appointment cards in the mail. Those who didn't receive a card can still get one from Dennis Doyle, Chamber executive director.

And there's a bonus for blood donors from Hardee's. A free hamburg or cheeseburg will be given by Hardee's to everyone who makes a blood donation Friday during the mobile unit's visit.

Over $5 million is paid monthly in Martin County

Social Security benefits have been paid to the residents of Martin County at the rate of $5,652,000 per month since the 14.3 pct. increase received in July 1980, according to Billie S. Carter, Social Security manager in Ft. Pierce.

Monthly benefits were $4,108,730 in January 1979 and $4,945,023 in January 1980. Total county benefits for the year 1980 will exceed $63,582,000.

There are now 17,624 social security beneficiaries living in Martin County as compared to 16,506 one year earlier. Of these 17,624 beneficiaries, 11,923 are retired workers and 920 are disabled workers. Another 2,156 persons are receiving benefits as the wives or husbands of retired or disabled workers. Widows, widowers and dependent parents of deceased workers number 1,631.

In Martin County, 4,304 people under age 65 and 13,320 people age 65 and older are receiving monthly social security benefits. Of total beneficiaries, 7,647 are men, 8,963 are women and 994 are children.

SHAPING UP on Savanna Road is the new Jensen Beach fire statiol, expected to be in operation in about eight weeks. The station will house two trucks and include a community meeting room. Five volunteer firefighters live in the neighborhood, according to Fire Chief Joe Luciano, left, shown checking the blueprints with Gary Mosley of Mosley & Son Construction, and Frank Wachs, fire commissioner. The location of the new fire house also means that fire trucks won't be delayed at the railroad crossing while trying to get to the west side of Jensen Beach.

Fran Gum, Club pres taking pictures since 1920

BY ERNIE CURWEN

The Ocean Breeze Camera Club has been a big lure at the park for over 30 years, starting out first as a technical group learning to take better pictures. But now it is mostly an entertainment club putting on weekly slide shows for the enjoyment of the members and their guests. Tom Cook was one of the first presidents and is preparing a story on the start and growth of the club for future publication. Many of the old timers have served their time as president, recent ones: Dick Altmiller, K.C. Richmond, Ernie Curwen, Nina Zagelhofer and this year the club is fortunate in getting some more new blood, with Fran Gum of 3 11th a taking over.

Fran is a down easterner as they say, being born and growing up in Belfast, Me., where she went to school but, she had to go to the big town, Boston to get married and worked as a telegraph operator for the next 25 years. She married Jim in 1927 when he got out of the Navy to take a job as chemical operator in Searsport.

They have 3 boys and 3 girls all married to give them 14 grandchildren and 7 greats. They all live in USA, but one son who is working for Permutit Corp. of Lancaster, Pa., might have to go to South American to work on a 6 million dollar "Desalter" (makes fresh water from the sea).

Eastern Star work kept Fran on her toes for years as she held many important offices, past matron, past grand representative to Idaho, past worthy high priestess of White Shrine and past district deputy of the White Shrine. So, Fran knows organizing, which will help with her Camera Club presidential duties.

They retired in 1967 and took 3 trips to Alaska, before coming to Florida (gadings for Key West, couldn't find accommodations, so pulled into Big Pine Key and Jim like the deep sea fishing. They came back for 8 years until a relative of Myrt Huntington told them OBP was the greatest, so they have been coming back here each year since 1976.

Fran is interested in Genealogy as her ancestors (Pearson) came to Ipswich, Mass. in 1638. She is a prospective DAR and attends all the meetings and the meeting of the local Genealogy Society.

Besides that, Fran is studing Oil Painting at Indian River College, started the Leather Class last week, has a house full of pretty handicraft items, and says she is knitting something now to learn every stitch there is. Now, if there should be a little time left over, Fran likes to play '31' or 13 for fun, and says that she didn't like to play with the serious ones, who criticized every lapse or muscue.

However, by talking with Fran, it is very evident that she has a full schedule for the 1980-81 season already lined up. First meeting will be Thursday, Nov. 13, 7 p.m. in the club house with the showing of "The Four Seasons of Vermont". Then, each month through March, there will be 3 or 4 meetings a month, to wind up with the annual dinner.

Fran says to get the season off to a good start, she will call an Executive Board meeting to act on some suggestions and finalize the schedule. Executive Committee: Fran Gum, Freda Petterkin, Nina Zagelhofer, Dot Beck, Sharky, Garadie, Ed Pettit, Ernie Curwen and the poster makers. It has been suggested that once in a while a short workshop on some of the technical aspects of photography would be worth while. Maybe, some local professional expert could give a short talk and answer a lot of questions.

Fran's final reminder, folks with slide shows must get in touch with her soon to be included in the schedule, also folks with part shows or who have trouble with the narration, can be accommodated. And, let's made this a big Camera Club year, with lots of new members, remember it only costs $1.00 for as long as you live... live in the park. See, Freda Petterkin, secretary, at next meeting for joining and call Fran 334-3699 for slide show information.

Ocean Breeze

The 'season' is upon us with all its superb features, like bright sunny skies, balmy breezes and brief showers and all our friends and neighbors are at every turn in the road. Also, the TV weather reports are conserning, by reporting dreadful cold and rain all over the northland, so this wonderful climate can be all the more appreciated.

However, this rapid influx of winter residents (snow birds) does bring some problems, such as too many cars on the road and in the parking lots. It's irritating! But, we just have to take it easy, as it is better to wait a few seconds, than to cause an accident on the highway or aerotched fenfders in the parking lot. Also, in the park, go slow and watch out at every hedge, as there might be a frail old fellow lurking there, who not seeing or hearing as well as 50 years ago, is likely to dart out in front of you. Please watch it.

A few did return last week in spite of many waiting until after election, they were: Gene and Joe Eisenbarth, Jim and Madeline Ellsthorpe, Harold and Clara Flynn, Martin and Kay Miller, Wilkis Fingar, Frank and Georgina McDonagh, Morgan and Mary West, Randy and Mary Kitchin, Ruth and Adam Dorn, Irene Coates, Cecile Gastael, Percy and Ethel Jones, Gertrude Gartner, Evelyn Fatahan, Fred and Louise Kalb, Karl and Beanie Theilig, Laron and Antionette Hahn, and Martha Miller.

Those wonderful petunias that have been the talk of the town in the years gone by are truly missed, as they brightened the park entrance as nothing else could. Ralph Kramer, the park horticulturist says that as soon as there are some good healthy looking plants on the market, he is going to give it another try. So, we all wish Ralph, "Good luck!"

PARK EVENTS

GAME NIGHT with its number calling, has resumed its winter schedule, 7 p.m. in the club house every Monday and Wednesday nights.

DANCING will not start until a little later, probably first Saturday night dance, 8:30 p.m. Nov. 8 or 15, and dancing classes to start the following week. Watch Bulletin Boards.

SOME CLASSES are off and running. Ceramic every Mon. & Fri. 9 to 12 (see Belva Dean, 334-4085). Leather class every Thur. 1 to 4 p.m. (see Mary Strohm 334-2348). Other classes may start soon, watch for a program schedule, that will be issued by office.

GOLFERS had a good turnout for their first season, 10 a.m. Sat. Oct. 25, at the Holiday Golf Club as 10 members of the Ocean Breeze League teed off. It was mostly a get together 'round' with special events for prizes to start a little later. All OBP golfers are invited to join the fun, see Marie Bender of 8 NE 10th St. for details.

SHUFFLERS are really busy now, 6 or 8 courts morning and night, as they anxiously wait the start of the season, that will follow the Mon? Nov. 3 club meeting.

A few more names have been added to the team lists, ladies River Leagues: Tom and Dorothy Elliott; Pete and Evelyn Ellstein. Central League: Bill Finger; Ken Jensen; Ray Stewart, Buckaroos: C. L. Stevens; Pete [illegible]; Bill Finger; Ed Lasner.

Some of the shufflers tried out a new game that looked like a cross between bowling and shuffling. At least there was a rack of bowling pin shaped targets to hit in order to make a score. It's called 'Shuffle Score.' They either didn't have all the rules or were too skilled, as they didn't find it enough of a challenge.

ANY BOWLERS? A group is trying to arouse interest in starting a park bowling league. The list on bulletin board has these names: Bert Dandy; Alice Gague; Jet Gague; Elsie Bottles; Virginia Dryer. Looks like it will be a busy winter for OBPers!

CONCERT AND STREET DANCE, 7:00 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 9 at the shuffle courts, when John Layback, for the first time this season will set up his 'Hi Fi 'PA system and play all those favorites. It's a dare pleasant way to spend Sunday evening and catch up on the doings of your neighbors two streets away.

New T.G. & Y. for Stuart

J. M. Cox, Division Vice President of T. G. & Y. Stores Co., the Oklahoma based national chain of variety and general merchandise stores has announced plans for a new 60,000 square foot super store to open in the summer of 1981, to be located at the northeast corner of the junction of Seville Street and Colorado Avenue, Stuart.

At the same time the developer of the new Stuart Mall shopping center, Peter C. Smith, announced plans for a Winn—Dixie supermarket.

Cox stated that the new T. G. & Y. store is expected to employ about 55—60 local residents when it opens for business.

T. G. & Y. Stores Co. was founded in 1936 by R. E. Tomlinson, E. L. Gosselin and R. A. Young, who gave the initials of their last names to the name of the company. It has always had its national headquarters in Oklahoma City, during its growth to a major chain with over 900 stores coast—to—coast in 29 states.

Sales, having already passed the billion dollar mark annually, are expected to reach the two billion dollar mark in 1981. T. G. & Y. has an aggressive expansion program nationwide. Projections are that approximately 55 new family centers will be opened each year, stores averaging 40,000 square feet. T. G. & Y.'s program of converting its smaller stores into larger full-line family centers through remodeling and expansions continues with market opportunities.

T. G. & Y. stores are of three classes: one is the expanded variety store, primarily convenience merchandise ranging to about 15,000 square feet and carrying limited junior department store lines; secondly, the family center unit ranging from 20,000 to 30,000 square feet; thirdly, the larger family center-unit ranging from 40,000 to 80,000 square feet.

J. M. Newgent, President of the company, stated, "We have been aware of the outstanding market opportunities in Stuart for several years and have been endeavoring to bring this project to a successful consummation for the last year and a half. We feel like we know the people of Stuart and are endeavoring in every way possible to bring them a store that will have merchandise suited to their needs. We are grateful for the opportunity of serving them."

Art club names show winners

In their first show of the season, now on display at the Ft. Pierce Art Gallery, members of the Ft. Pierce Art Club met a standard of excellence for quality, originality and design in all media, in the opinion of the three judges.

Best of show was awarded Dorothe M. Chillcutt for her watercolor "Hillside-Todi, Italy."

For work painted in oil — first to Ann H. Esterline for "Artist"; second to Ruth T. Bowman for "Savanna Landscape"; third to Russell Hamm for "Dutch Lunch"; honorable mention to Jo Ellen Howard for "Laundry Bag."

Watercolor and Acrylic Category — first to Mabel Mayland for "Carolina Wren", second to Ann H. Esterline for "Portrait"; third to Al Termini for "Night Course"; honorable mention to Herb Neuberger for "Mountain Road."

Mixed Media Group — first to June Bowers for "Amber Waves"; second to Holly B. Davis for "Reverie"; third to Janie Smith for "Still Life"; honorable mention to Russell Hamm for "Visions of the Past."

There were not the required number of artists entered in each category of photography, sculpture and creative crafts to qualify for awards.

Among the highly-qualified judges of the show were: Mildred (Migs) Elliot, portraitist in oil and pastel, of Banyan Tree Studio in Stuart, recently arrived from the Washington, D.C., area, where her work is well-known and Barbara Hightower, artist in ink, watercolor and other media, who is painting and drawing teacher at Dan McCarty Middle School.

The show will continue for two weeks, ending Nov. 6 at the Ft. Pierce Art Gallery on N. Indian River Drive. Open daily 1 to 5 p.m. except Friday.

DON'T WAIT TO INVEST

QUESTION: Over the years I have acquired three small investment properties. However, with interest rates rising and falling like a roller coaster, I wonder whether it would be wise to wait for a year or two, until interest rates settle down, before acquiring another property?

ANSWER: Taking advantage of the current rapid growth in property values by investing now will far outweigh the savings from financing at lower interest rates which might be in effect at a later date.

If you need evidence that real estate values are booming and will continue to do so, just look at the gigantic influx of foreign capital into real estate investments in the United States. Obviously, the advisors who direct such vast sums have researched the market well, and have concluded that investment real estate values have no place to go but up.

Apartment values are rising rapidly because construction of rental apartment units has simply not kept up with steadily increasing demands for this form of housing. Because of this, the value of apartment investments should increase dramatically over the next few years.

The value of other types of real estate investments, such as office buildings, are also increasing dramatically. With new office space in major metropolitan areas renting for up to $20 to $25 a foot, and with other sections of the country ready to follow, it is obvious that existing office buildings make very attractive investment opportunities.

There is an old adage in real estate that goes, "You don't wait to invest in real estate. You invest in real estate and wait."

There is little doubt that procrastinating in expanding your investment portfolio at this time could be a very costly decision.

The Yoesting home is a Swiss chalet in Jensen

Story by Sally Latham
photos by Cathie Macaulay

HORSY ART—Glossy sheen of glass and enamel brightens the entry wall of the Herman Yoestings home. The framing with its rugged outline matches the Spanish mood of the entire decor.

There's not much unusual about a new house in town. There is, however, a bit of news when a home comes trucking into the area and parks itself on a vacant lot.

Unusual, such as that of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Yoesting on North Indian River Drive.

The Yoestings, builders by trade, discovered Jensen Beach while living in the Everglades. Looking over a map one day, they discovered the perfect topography. They decided that this was it.

Herman, in his building, is partial to the sturdy northern White Pine. He had the house drawn up to fit his need and liking, pre-cut and the two — Mr. and Mrs. Yoesting had the house loaded and brought to Jensen to build.

The home is a practical as well as beautiful. The walls have a Norwegian mood, with multiple blocks of wood forming the design. Inset wall lines despeak of durability of chalet quality. In fact, the whole inner atmosphere is reminiscent of Switzerland.

The old techniques are combined in several places with the new. The front chandelier is a giant crab shell, and one of the main living room paintings is the colorful enamal of a large fish.

And much of the furniture is tell-tale of the ethnic background, be-speaking the tastes as well as the cultural reflection of the pair.

It also bespeaks their practicality. The washer-dryer is located in the bathroom where all the daily chores can be taken care of at the same time.

One of the bedrooms is reserved for granddaughter Heather, who lives in Miami and is a frequent visitor here. Heather obviously grandpa's favorite. "She drew a blueprint of a dollhouse. I worked from it, and it was faultless."

Another hobby of the Yoestings is farming on their miniature acres. Mrs. Yoesting produced a healthy batch of cut beans fresh from the garden and showed off a strawberry bush that will any day now become dessert for the table.

Of all the hobbies, though, Yoestering's favorite is building fireplaces. The centerpiece in the living room is a magnificent Franklin stove, backgrounded by a flawless, reflective fireplace.

It is where all the neighbors come to pop corn and toast marshmallows, he said with open hospitality.

BUSY BUILDERS—Audrey and Herman Yoesting pose for camera outside house they imported. They brought the structure in from the north via truck and planted it at 1355 Myears Road.

WOOD INTEREST—The intrigue of natural wood design substitutes for the more stylized art. The master of the house enjoys his favorite relaxing spot.

THE MAIN ENTRYWAY to the Yoestings home is entry for both the main upstairs living and to the lower private apartment. The apartment is currently used as a rental unit.

USE OF LAND—Herman and Audrey Yoesting 'waste not want not,' when it comes to the use of their land. They've taken many a batch of fresh vegetables out of the ground and into the kitchen for the evening meal.

MODERN KITCHEN—One of Mrs. Yoesting's prides is her modern kitchen that makes cooking such a pleasure.

THE YOESTING VISITOR meets a warm welcome when they call on the Yoestings at their 1355 N. Myears Terrace. The trim little house has the appearance of a miniature little Swiss chalet.

THE HEART OF THE HOME—The centerfold and center of attention — and of heat these chilly nights — is the copious-size built the [illegible] vaklin stove that "really works." [illegible] chimney which backs the efficient [illegible]

Re: "The View from the Hill Top Window"

Greetings Dick:

Not always in agreement with some of your choice weekly dissertations, your latest one however, "Look at the Quality of Life" as viewed from your look-out window atop your Castle Hill, strikes me as a gem of descriptive rarity as you picture Jensen Beach be a place of beauty, uniqueness, which I must confess is my belief too.

Nestled along the broad Intracoastal Indian River, across its expanse the Easterly beautiful shore line of Hutchinson Island is a vista of delight to viewing, and the village charm of the Western Bank with the sloping back drop of the rolling terrain of Sky Lane Side is a topographical sight unmatched on the East Coast.

For what part fate may play in life, I'm most grateful for the seventeen years of refreshment we have enjoyed here.

May the years of expected growth maintain all of the beauty and charm of the past, as given the Mirror credit by some as a Classic Weekly to be Daily, be guided always from the look-out Window, embracing the enchantment, attractiveness that has brought renown to the area.

Good news always.

Law of secession denies election

The death of James Brooks, supervisor of elections in St. Lucie County, points to one major flaw in the law of the state. The people will have an elections supervisor who has not been elected by the poeple, and who will serve four years a full term before having to face the voters again.

It is the law, but it is a wrong law.

Brooks was running unopposed in the general election. He was a strong candidate, who had served long and well. His strength is noted in the fact that no Republican came forward to face him.

The appointment of Gertrude Walker, his top aide, to complete the term of Brooks was a good move by Governor Bob Graham. She was experienced and knew what to do to be certain that the election ran smoothly.

However, when the Democratic Committee picked Walker to serve the four-year term, it did what the people should be doing. By a vote of 30 to 18, the committee named a head of a most sensitive position. It was legal. But, it was wrong.

The people should have had the opportunity to vote for a supervisor of elections.

Dorothy Glisson, state supervisor, of elections, told The Mirror that if Brooks had died before September 15, there would have been time to hold a special election. But, after that time, the Democratic Committee is empowered to select the candidate, and running unopposed, that candidate wins the term in office.

We do not fault the committee's selection. We do fault the law that does not permit a choice under special circumstances such as an incumbent running unopposed dying just before an election.

An appointive four-year term, with the appointment made two months before that term starts, does not sit well with the democratic electoral process. The people should have the opportunity to vote at least in the next election.

Ballot was too long

Voters should not be subjected to too many choices on election day. It is not fair to the candidates, or the issues involved in the election process.

The ballot this year was too long, and voters were asked to do too much on too many subjects. There were 27 different choices to make, and 27 different decisions to make on the November ballot.

Those decisions ran the gamut from president of the United States to county appraiser, from state constitutional amendments to city charter amendments.

We believe that the ballot should be limited to voting on candidates alone, with such as constitutional amendments moved to another voting day.

The low turnout of voters in the second primary was defeating to the issues involved in several constitutional amendments that were on the October ballot.

The state should require that there be a separate election for non-candidate issues, an election which would permit the proponents and opponents an opportunity to campaign to inform the voters.

A bridge is needed

Heavy traffic on Hutchinson Island and roads leading to and from the island, is bringing more and more pressure upon the St. Lucie County Commission to act to get another bridge across the Indian River.

Unfortunately, without a proper response and encouragement from the Florida Department of Transportation, St. Lucie commissioners are powerless to move.

Being powerless, however, should not stop planning, or efforts to find a way to build that bridge. St. Lucie commissioners seem to be just sitting around shaking their heads, wringing their hands, and saying that nothing can be done.

Is there a leader up there in Ft. Pierce who can take charge of the situation and see what can be done? It is possible that someone might just find a solution to the problem of access if he searched long and hard for a solution.

An impact fee on island development is not an answer.

As time passes, more and more are recognizing that what affects traffic on the island is the people on the mainland going to the public beaches. Thus, impact is caused by all who use the island, not just those who live there.

Counties are slow in recognizing that if there is to be an impact fee, it should be a carefully designed instrument that would assess such fees across the board on all new construction that brings impact.

If the county doesn't take action soon, the mantle of responsibility will move the state, where anything could come from the political machines that thrive there.

Local impact should remain in local hands. The bridge across the Indian River is just one item in the impact issue. It could lead the way to a solution of many problems, including schools, water, sewage and roads.

THE MIRROR is a reflection of you. Hometown people in local events. Smiles on the faces of hometown children.

Chamber expands services

This Friday, we hope, the members of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce will be establishing their first blood bank. A drive will be held all day long in which the Chamber members will be donating blood to the Martin County Branch, Palm Beach County Blood Bank.

As the businessmen and their employees troop to Hardees, where the mobile blood bank vehicle will be operating, they will be helping themselves as they give.

The greatest number of businesses that are members of the Jensen Chamber have only two or three employees. They do not have the count required to establish a separate blood bank, nor the numbers to amass the number of pints of blood required for transfusion in the event of a terrible accident.

This is one service of the Chamber that will give its members a life-saving, no cost benefit. The members of the Chamber and their families will be eligible to draw from the blood bank whatever is needed without worrying about replacement cost.

Another service of the Chamber is now being set up by Executive Director Dennis Doyle. It involves a group insurance plan that will allow those businesses that are too small to have such group plans to belong, reducing their insurance cost.

It is a national service of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and should be accepted by all members.

The best part of the plan is that it can be bought from all local insurance agents, thus providing local business to local insurance agents.

This Thursday evening, the chamber members will be hosted to a social hour by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Evanrude, celebrating the reopening of beautiful Frances Langford's Outrigger Restaurant. From 5 to 7 p. the Chamber members will be feted in the lounge.

The Outrigger has always been a good Chamber booster.

On November 11, the Chamber will announce an exciting Christmas sales promotion, the first in several years, that will endeavor to bring all businessmen under a "Try Jensen Beach First" promotion for the holidays.

All materials for the promotion have been donated to the Chamber by Southeast Bank of Jensen, First National Bank and Trust of Stuart, Florida National Bank, First Federal of Martin County and Community Federal Savings and Loan.

Businessmen will be sporting flashy buttons and window posters to promote sales in the area shops.

In another service, the Chamber is updating the Jensen area map. The new map will take several months to prepare, and will be available from local businesses when delivered.

Competition is heating up as the Chamber prepares for the membership drive November 17 to 21. The battle of the sexes will feature the men against the women members.

Because of the many violations in the drive that was so successful two years ago, condemned arms because of "cheating" and "dirty tricks", there will be a sharply defined set of rules for this one.

And, since I was one of those who was accused of doing such dastardly things, and I am now president of the Chamber, I know just about all the tricks that can be pulled, and I'm not going to allow them to happen. We are borrowing the Stuart Chamber's set of rules.

The Chamber is shooting for 220 sustaining members (businesses) and at least 40 contributing members (individuals).

One thing that might be pointed out is that anyone can belong to the Chamber as a contributing member. Some businesses sign up their employees (at ten bucks a head), so that they receive all the Chamber information.

Residents who are interested in the development of their community can belong to the Chamber for ten bucks. They can get all the mailings and take part in the many social activities of the organization.

There are monthly morning forums with excellent speakers and the occasional social hours that bring all the businessmen and women together.

The Chamber directors over the past year have worked long and hard to build the Chamber and provide many more services. They accomplished their main goal — the right-of-way for bike paths on Indian River Drive, and added impetus to many community-wide projects.

It has been a good year, and a fun year, with businessmen working together.

When $1.50 equals $41.50

Something there is that doesn't love a wall and I happen to own two of them. There's a third one that thinks it is a wall and why shouldn't it? It is part wall.

What I'm talking about is three cheapy plastic picture frames that sold for 50 cents apiece each and weren't worth a penny more until I got hold of them. They are still worth 50 cents but the third is now roughly valued at $41.50.

The added value has nothing to do with inflation. It's all due to adhesion. Being among your mass-produced low-profit geegaw items, these particular frames don't have any hanger-uppers. They're supposed to cling to the wall with two-way tape. But two don't and one do.

I don't know about things that go bump in the night in other people's houses. At my house it's two picture frames hurtling themselves off the wall at irregular intervals.

When they were only worth 50 cents each I could have trashed them and cut my losses. Now it's too late. When something increases in value by more than one thousand percent it earns your respect.

Besides, the notion of them jumping off the walls serves as an audible reminder to quit next time while I'm ahead.

Actually it's not on a wall. But the third one was born to be hung.

As I discovered on a day before a moving day when I was packing up my chattels. I picked up two of the pictures from where they were hanging on the floor and took the other one down off the wall. More precisely, I took down the wall with the other one—about two inches of hole showed where plaster used to be.

Unfortunately, however, I had just sent the wall as an undetachable appurtenance to a staple dwelling place situated on or near...well, you know how it goes. The picture was not included in the selling price but I would have been time and money ahead to have thrown it in for free.

Somewhere I have read that plaster holes can be filled in and camouflaged with toothpaste. What I had facing me was a three-cube job. But, where can you buy dirty toothpaste?

There was nothing for it but to fill the hole, sand it and paint the bathroom—an initial investment of $12. You can't buy dirty paint either or else the walls would have matched the ceiling after they were painted. One more quart of semi-gloss at $8.

My next discovery had an added value of $30. You should not paint the ceiling while standing on plastic toilet seat lids. They crack.

Grabbing for the shower curtain rod to break a free fall into the bathtub because the rod was given way is less expensive if you only fasten the screws a little and happen to have some spackling compound on hand.

Luckily, I did. Left over from mending the hole in the wall. The way things were going I could have had a can of paint in my hand at the time I fell. But I didn't. Because I had run out of paint again. Not even enough left to disguise all those unpainted spots that show up after the paint has dried.

Early next morning the new owner of the bathroom were at the front door asking to pick up those boxes boy. I hadn't planned to show them the bathroom, in fact, I had planned not to show them the bathroom. But Mrs. New Owner insisted.

She wanted to be sure the wallpaper she'd picked out didn't clash with the bathroom fixtures.

The eleventh hour of the eleventh day,
Of the eleventh month had passed.
The "war to end all wars" had ceased;
The guns were silent, but thoughts were not,
For those who'd forever rest in peace.

Democracy has come a long way since,
But there's still the world to be shown.
Now, over sixty years have passed—who knows—
Can Democracy still hold its own?

It's an up-hill struggle,
Tribal Man's full of hope,
But Tribal ideals seem to fade,
Before the ambitions of those who look
In the autocratic shade.

VETERANS DAY★ NOV.11

Letter to the editor

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, Oct. 29, I witnessed a pick-up truck lose control, crash through a barrier and land up side-down in the creek on Rt. 707, directly across the street from the Auto Clinic in Stuart.

I would like to bring to the attention of the public of the heroic efforts of the employees of the Auto Clinic, the Jensen Beach Samaritans and the Rio Fire Department. Without the signature reactions, the employees of the Auto Clinic dove into the black, muddy water and frantically tried to rescue the driver trapped inside the truck. They brought tools and even bare over and tried to pry open the doors without success, at the same time trying to comfort the victim who was crying out and groaning. The Jensen Samaritans arrived within 34 minutes, the Rio Fire Dept. just seconds later. By this time there were no sounds coming from the submerged vehicle. Within seconds, the firemen had their "Jaws of Life" operating and were in the water and pried open the door. The rescue men then pulled out a lifeless man — no pulse — no respiration — and immediately started CPR, restoring a heartbeat and respiration, although unconscious.

If it were not for the efforts of these fine people and the "The Jaws of Life," this man would not be alive. We should be proud and feel extreme gratitude to these people for their alertness, intelligence and skill. We feel very fortunate for having such efficiency within our community. And thanks to the mechanics and workers of the Auto Clinic for their unhesitating efforts without regard to their personal safety.

Friends of Nancy Bird, a recently deceased resident of Jensen Beach, are establishing a memorial fund, in conjunction with Martin County Animal Rescue League, for the construction of a facility in Indiantown to be used for holding pens for stray or unwanted animals before transferring them to the center in Stuart. Designed to satisfy a crying need, the structure will be attached to the sheriff's office in Indiantown. A memorial plaque for Nancy Bird will be prominently displayed.

Tax-deductible contributions for the construction of this facility to benefit stray and unwanted animals may be sent to:

Nancy Bird, a Canadian by birth, had a great civic consciousness in this, her adopted home. In addition to her Red Cross work, backstage work at the Barn Theatre, phone duty for the muscular dystrophy telethon, and planning for the election to encourage people to vote, she also took courses to become a volunteer ambulance driver and a hurricane shelter captain. She also wrote to prisoners for the pen-pal club, the Friendship Circle.

But Nancy's abiding love was her devotion to animals. "Sir Winston Churchill," her Yorkshire Terrior, whose portrait she painted and displayed in her home, was her loyal companion for many years. Nancy's many friends cherish their memory of her overcoming, buoyant humor and staunch, independent spirit.

HOPE FOR HEALTH
Keys to Good Health Naturally

By
Dr. Jack L. Webb

Among the most common sources of aches and pains in the adult American is a condition called fibrositis-a more modern name for rheumatism type disorders. The term fibrositis is applied to a group of symptoms characterized by pain, stiffness, aching, soreness and tenderness in any area containing fibromuscular tissue, but those of the neck, back, shoulders, hips, pelvis, and thighs are especially affected.

Fibrositis is also a most frequent cause of aching and jabbing, neuralgic pain in the chest and abdominal wall, and is often mistaken for organic disease. In fact, as pointed out by Walter C. Alvarez, M.D., nationally known medical columnist many patients with fibrositis are needlessly frightened with a diagnosis of angina (heart pain), gallstones, or ulcer and may have an unnecessary operation.

While infection, or exposure to damp or cold, emotional disorders and fatigue may be secondary factors, trauma, in particular injury to the spine, is the most frequent primary cause of fibrositis. Injury may take place in the muscle tissue, or in the joints of the spine with subluxation, or displacement of the spinal vertebrae. When fibrositis develops patients usually become increasingly aware of pain and stiffness upon resuming activity after a period of rest. Where the soft tissue is primarily involved, the symptoms are usually localized to the area of injury.

Where the joints of the spine are involved, the symptoms may be localized or referred along the course of the spinal nerve to the chest or abdominal wall mimicking heart disease, gallstone pain, ulcers, abdominal or female disease.

The logical approach to the symptoms of fibrositis is through chiropractic science. Your doctor of chiropractic will, through examination, determine the underlying factors responsible for your pain. Once determinded, he will make necessary recommendations for the relief of your discomfort, and the correction of vertebral displacements and nerve irritation responsible for referred pain. Through chiropractic science your chances for complete recovery are much greater.

IRCC Itinerary

The biggest news this week at Indian River Community College is that the college credit course schedules for Spring Term, 1981, are now available, and beginning Thursday, Nov. 6, the IRCC counselors will be registering students for all Spring college credit classes.

For a complete listing of the credit classes being offered Spring Term, which begins Jan. 7, 1981, stop by the Guidance Division or the Public Information Office on the Main Campus, or visit your nearest branch campus. If it is not convenient for you to come by the college, simply call the IRCC Public Information Office, extension 408, and ask for a Spring schedule to be mailed to you.

The main thing to remember in registering for classes is that certain courses do fill up quickly, so the sooner that you register, the better chance you have of getting into the class sections and courses you want to take.

PHYSICAL ASSESSMENT FOR NURSES

Any registered nurse or Associate Degree Nursing student who wishes to enroll in the "Physical Assessment for Nurses" class to be offered on the Main Campus beginning Nov. 18, should do so at the IRCC Guidance Office by Nov. 17. The course, worth one college credit, will serve to familiarize nurses with the skills and techniques they need to perform a quick bedside physical assessment of the patient. The lecture series will be taught by Joan Varner, R.N., and will include discussion on the neurological, respiratory, cardiovascular, gastrointestinal, skeletal, and genitourinary aspects of physical assessment. Classes will meet each Tuesday from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. in Room J 222, and will run through Dec. 16. Those who successfully complete the course will be awarded an IRCC Certificate of Attendance. For additional information, call the IRCC Guidance Division, ext. 322.

NEW DIRECTIONS IN STUART

Another "New Directions" class is set to begin at the IRCC Stuart Site on Nov. 10. To meet from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Monday through Friday for two weeks, "New Directions" will focus on the special problems and opportunities facing people who want to make major changes in their lives. Topics such as values, decisions, interests, job search techniques, goals, and group support are emphasized; and confidence-building is an important objective of the class. If you would like to sign up for this non-credit course, call the Stuart Site, 283-6580. The cost of the course is $5.

SUPPORT THE ARTS!

Show your support for the arts, and have your car washed by the IRCC Art Club. Students will be washing cars at Mickey's Holiday Gulf Service on Okeechobee Road in Fort Pierce all day Saturday, Nov. 8. For only $1, you can have a nice clean car, and show your support for the artistic pursuits in our community.

DON'T FORGET

The formal concert to be given by the IRCC Concert Band and Choir on Nov. 10 at 8 p.m. in the McAlpin Fine Arts Center. Don't let the cost of the concert fool you -- it's FREE, yet it promises to be a delightful evening of musical entertainment.

The Money Management Seminar to be held Nov. 15 in the IRCC Martin Room from 8:30 a.m. until noon. The cost is only $1; for details, call the college, ext. 229.

You can call the IRCC Main Campus toll free from any of the four counties. In Indian River County, call 567-7132; in Martin County, call 287-2006; and in Okeechobee County, call 763-6327. The number to call in St. Lucie County is 464-2000.

Samaritans Calling

BY NELLIE D. COOK

The members of the Samaritans Auxiliary extend an invitation to all interested persons to attend their Tupperware Party. The party is being held in the Recreation Hall at Pinelake Village beginning at 1 p.m. November 7, Friday. Refreshments will be served by the committee. A percentage of the sales profits will go toward the Auxiliary Fund. Pinelake Village is on South Savanna Road, and lies between the Trinity United Methodist Church and Cumberland Farms Store.

Hope to see many of you there.

In spite of the heavy rain and wind on Tuesday Oct. 28, 38 turned out to the auxiliary meeting. A number of new members paid their annual membership fee of one dollar, and enjoyed the interesting talk given by Raymond LaFray, Samaritan of three years. Prior to retirement Ray had served as a high school principal for 30 years, then spent 7½ years in the Intensive Care Unit of a large hospital.

Ray was introduced by our President, Dot Michna. His subject, "A typical ambulance run."

Starting with a phone call to Civil Defense for an emergency rig to go to the scene of a sick person, civil defense calls the Samaritans by Plectron. The duty crew answers on the two way radio in the rig. They are en route to the scene.

At the scene, the crew again advises Civil Defense of their arrival. The patient is given a general survey for injuries or apparent illness. The vitals-pulse, respirations and blood pressure is taken, and the patient is prepared for transport by two of the attendants. The third gets history of the patient's former illnesses if any, itemizes their medications, and notes the doctor who gave the prescriptions.

In the ambulance with the patient, and on way to the hospital, again C.D. is notified, and time note. En route the driver is asked by E.M.T. to contact Med 7 (Emergency room at hospital). E.M.T. gives all the information to the Emergency Doctor and Nurse in charge. Time again is noted, and estimated time of our arrival at the hospital is given to C.D. and hospital.

Our patient is transferred from our stretcher to a cot in the emergency room, or may be assigned to a room by the doctor if illness requires this service.

Patient delivered to hospital, the crew re-makes the stretcher after the next patient, and returning To base, advises C.D. again Base, C.D. is called again and advised we are back in service. This is how Civil Defense knows where to locate any of the ambulances in Martin County when a need arises.

A word to all of you who do not attend the auxiliary meetings. You are not required to become a member to attend (we hope you do though) as that maybe you are missing out on learning some valuable information, and enjoying an evening of Good Fellowship. At the close of the meeting president Michna advised us that the last Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. will be Samaritans Auxiliary meetings.

A few more committee chairman volunteered at the Oct. 28 meeting. Membership chairman, Evelyn Sanford; program chairman, Irene Stephensen; Special events Co. Chairmen are Kathy Krauss and Glenda Tungate; Committee in charge of tupperware party, Estelle McIntyre and Myrt Penny. A committee is being organized by the auxiliary to clean the interior of the ambulances. Words cannot convey to you ladies how grateful we all are,to have you with us.

THANK YOU goes to the gentleman from Vista Pines who donated the Color T.V. to the Samaritans. Anyone reading this and knowing the Donors name, please call me at 334-5312.

The president and officers of the Auxiliary are planning a garage sale. No date set yet, but anyone having saleable articles no longer in use please call Pres. Michna 334-1118. Vice Pres. Irene Stephenson, 334-1940, or any Samaritan you know and we will pick your items up if you cannot deliver them to us.

Debate team needs help

A Martin County High School debate team has been organized for the first time in 15 years and in its first tournament MCHS senior Karen Thompson tied for best debater in the Novice Division in a Jacksonville contest.

The team is next scheduled to debate Nov. 22 in Coral Gables in the Joseph Robbie Tournament sponsored by the Miami Dolphins.

However, the team needs financial help from businesses and organizations and assistance from attorneys in preparing arguments as well as pointers on delivery.

MCHS does not offer a class in debating and the team is having to prepare itself during weekly practice sessions.

Anyone with help to offer in the way of coaching, transportation or financial assistance may contact Winifred Walton, Jama Holko or Xenobia Anderson at the high school, 287-0710.

THE CAMERA caught Frank Wolfe and John Menninger in a moment of serious talk.

The First Annual Evening for the ARTS was a gala occasion Saturday night with some 280 patrons of the arts on hand for the $100 a couple dinner-dance at Sandpiper Bay.

Sponsored by the Arts Foundation of Martin County as a fund-raiser for the planned Cultural Arts Center, the evening's program included a cocktail hour, buffet dinner and dancing, plus an art auction which added $4,000 to the night's proceeds.

Guests were also given a preview of the planned $4 million Cultural Arts Center which will include a 1500-seat auditorium and individual rooms and galleries for the visual, cultural, and performing arts.

The center will also house a permanent art gallery, a secured gallery for rare and valuable art displays and instructional rooms for various visual and performing arts.

The center will be built on land donated by Martin Downs.

Drawings of the building were unveiled by the consulting artchitect, L. Ed Hoon of the architectural firm of Fenton, Hoon & White.

Kaynote speaker of the dinner was Florida Secretary of State George Firestone who remarked that a nation's culture is a symbol of its civilization.

"A few years ago Florida budgeted a few thousand dollars for the arts," he said. "Florida now spend $1.5 million a year to support the arts."

There are more people going to cultural events than sports, according to Firestone. And a recent study conducted by the University of South Florida showed that for every one and a half cents spent on the arts, $1 is returned to the business people.

"The state of Florida will provide every assistance," Firestone said. "Let us know what we can do to help."

Firestone was introduced by Dorothy Nabutovsky, president of the Arts Foundation and general chairman of the event.

Some 33 art works donated to the Arts Foundation by area artists were auctioned off for more than $4,000.

Artists and galleries who contributed works for the auction were: Junie Bowers, Ruth Bowman, Margaret Bruyn, Alma Burke, Sharon Bunly, Mahlon Cline, Cobert Collins, Therese Cronin, Elzine Defenthaler, Cinny DeWitt, Migs Elliot, Gallery of Frames, Hobe Sound Galleries, Horizon Art Gallery, Jim Hutchinson, Jon Legere, Carrie Litt, Margaret Meissner, Jeanlue McClung, Midtown Gallaries, Jayne Petersen, Tom Prestopnik, Madeline Reheiser, Howard Schafer, Lynn Schreiber, Bea Scott, Carmen Simpkins, Florine Smith, Stained Glass by Jayne, Friday Stevens, Edgar Straeffer, and The Works.

A QUIET ASIDE was enjoyed by Irene Eggers of Port Salerno and Joan Foster of Jensen Beach during the social hour.

TIME OUT FOR DANCING is enjoyed by these couples following the buffet dinner and cocktail hour.

ALL SMILES are Margaret Hallberg of Jensen Beach and Louise Isaacs chatting sociably.

Lucy Prohaska is a busy AARP call girl chairman

BY ERNIE CURWEN

The local AARP chapter found that the members were not 'getting the message' (about the meetings and events) regardless of their mighty publicity efforts and there were some members that needed 'reassurance' checks, so they decided to organize a telephone committee to handle it. It didn't 'get off the ground' for a long time, until two things happened at about the same time. First, to put some ZIPP in the project, jokingly they were referred to as the 'CALL GIRLS'. Interest then developed in leaps and bounds with more girls than could be easily managed wanting 'in on the racket (?). Second, Lucy Prohaska, the Legislative Chairman agreed to switch jobs and take over the handling of the 'Call Girls'. Then, the project was 'off and running' as you'll learn later, but first let's find out about Lucy.

Lucy was born in Brooklyn, N.Y. a few years ago; went to school in Bayshore, L.I., and spent her adult life in Babylon. Married a direct descendant of Anto DeVorak, 'the' famous musician who composed "Humoresque".

During these 35 years, Lucy was a school teacher at Wyandach; grades 1 to 4; grades 5 to 8; and finally principal. But, this wasn't too satisfying, so she changed to social studies and finally to librarian, which she enjoyed most of all.

Winter vacations in the 50tees were spent in Rio, and they got their eye on the Skyline area, which was just wilderness at that time. But, as soon as it was opened up in 1959, they purchased a couple of lots. Her husband was a building contractor, so built one house and sold it and then built the one she is living in now, at 403 NE Skyline Dr. Lucy said this build and move was 'old hat' to her as they'd done it 9 times up north.

It was in 1960 that Lucy's husband had a heart attack and was told he'd live a couple of years if they moved to Florida. So, they did and stretched those two years to fourteen. Lucy stayed on, as this is now home and she has her younger sister Josephine Neurohn living with her, and helping with the many projects the she is interested in.

Lucy just can't be quiet, so from 1974 until 1978, she was a volunteer at the local Heart Association office, also during that time and right up to the present, Lucy is a volunteer at the Martin County Library in Stuart. (And, by-the-way, Lucy said they need more volunteers for this pleasant and interesting work, apply at library).

Then, along came AARP and Lucy was appointed legislative chairman and for 2-years had a conference with Dale Cassen, every Wednesday morning. This led to very close cooperation between legislation and AARP and many useful services were obtained for the seniors.

Next came the 'CALL GIRLS' and with Ethel Smith as CoChm. and Membership Chm. Al Tucker suppling name lists, they organized 25 girls into groups, each calling 25 members each month. They told their 'list' about up coming meetings, special events, found out if the member had any problems, suggestions or complaints. Then, if a case required it, would arrange for daily 'reassurance' calls. The girls had plenty to do, so the lists had to be reduced to 20 names (with more Call Girls).

It was interesting work and here are some of the things encountered. Most, like to 'chat' awhile; few say they don't want to be bothered; many like to feel 'remembered' and look forward to the call each month; wanted to meet their callers, face to face, so at each meeting the 'Call Girls' congregate in one spot, to get acquainted; wrong number listed once, it was a barroom, some interesting conversation was imagined; of the original girls, five remain. They are: Helen Lauchley; Agnes Berg; Catherine Arundel; Betty Taylor; Rose Hockberg. The time spent on these calls make a whopping big credit item for the quarterly report to National AARP.

Although Lucy has just recently had to resign because of health problem, she is very much interested in the project and wanted to make sure a request was made for more volunteers, for as the chapter grows so do the list of members. Those interested may call new chairman Lavern Meyer, Tel. 283-0214. It's a very rewarding task and lots of fun too.

Surprisingly, Lucy does have some spare time for hobbies. Dress Making ; swimming and traveling are some of them. So, we'll thank Lucy for a good job well done.

Arluck is entertainment director

BY ERNIE CURWEN

The Treasure Coast Senior Service (Arlene Fletcher, Director) has recreational programs five days a week at Jensen Beach, Hobe Sound, Stuart and White City under the direction of Elliot Arluck. He arranges: Musical Groups, and part himself on Bass or Guitar; Entertainers, and Elliot fills-in as 'Standup Comic'; Art Classes with Elliot instructing the portrait painting; Lectures and Talks on subjects of interest to the seniors; Movies and Slide Shows; Special Bands and Choral Groups; Holiday Parties; Gospel Singing and Sing-A-Longs; etc. Sounds like a big job, but Elliot has had 50 years preparation.

Elliot Arluck who now lives in Spanish Lakes was born and grew up in Brooklyn, N.Y. with three brothers, and it was older brother Maurie who enticed him to this area when he retired in 1975. Maurie came down a number of years earlier and was president of Port St. Lucie Chapter of AARP and is now MCCA coordinator for the Meals-on-Wheels program.

They grew up the hard way during the Great Depression, when it was next to impossible to find work. Elliot said, "Just to survive I played musical instruments for nickels and dimes." But, such work was scarce, so he had time to 'haunt' libraries, studing drama in all its aspects.

Soon came some 'breaks' and their musical group got summertime work on the so-called 'Borscht Circuit', playing at resort hotels in the Catskill Mountains. Elliot quickly learned all the tasks, musician, singer, comic, arranger, etc., as needed. Sometimes, or was it most times, the assigned quarters were horrible, attics, behind stage and one time a refurbished chicken coop. It wasn't too bad, but the chickens kept coming back and finally dispossessing the group.

That was learning time, leading up to the serious side of Elliot's career, when he was a working musican of Local 802, and writing plays for a living, getting married, raising a daughter, daughter getting married and having a son and daughter (grandchildren), But that's all in the future.

Along came the war and Elliot found himself in London, getting together a Musical Comedy for the Signal Corps, called "Things Are Different Here." There was a problem: a male chorus wouldn't be much appreciated by soldiers. So, Elliot through Signal Corps' association with telephone company, arranged for a group of phone operators. He had the task of selecting the best qualified. Elliot was a busy guy, as he was author, producer, director, and actor-musician as they played at the famous London Scala Theatre to audiences of 2000.

Then, next when William Bendix was bothered by 'buzz-bombs' and the musical had run its course, Elliot was offered the lead role in the movie "Yank in London," which was made in England, using all Elliot's talent and more. The movie was a hit and a wonderful experience for Elliot, so when he got back to the states, he was ready to try his hand with the New Yorkers.

A musical play "Meet Peter Grant" was produced for 'off Broadway' showing and Elliot was again up to his elbows, in writing and otherwise helping to get the show on the road. This was another venture that gave him plenty of experience and satisfaction.

However, at times there wasn't enough security for raising a happy family, so Elliot took 'a job selling hotel advertising. Again this was a good preparation for his entertainment director's job, as salesmen do run into many worthwhile stories and learn how to tell them interestingly. But, 15 years traveling and living on an expense account, finally came to an end, one day in North Carolina, when brother Maurie said, "Why don't you retire and come on down here to Port St. Lucie," and that's just what he did.

But, a do-nothing retirement wasn't for Elliot, so he put his name in at the local employment office, and before he could say 'standup comic' he was called for this entertainment director's position. Now, he is getting paid for what he likes to do best, and the local seniors are getting the results of his 50 years of experience . . and they like it.

The election is over, probably 50 percent of us were more or less pleased with the results and the rest wished it had been different, but to a man or gal, all were glad the 'thing' was over with. So, with that out of the way, our fictitious characters had some trivia to chew over.

Lady Alice was sputtering as her head bobbed in time with her shaking finger and it could be plainly seen that she was much upset about something. So, Edith drifts over to hear her tell Gladys, "and that's not all, I say it's a shame, and it spoils the whole thing."

"What's this all about," Edith asks, as Lady Alice runs out of words, "calm down and tell us about it."

"I won't calm down, but I will tell you what I was telling Gladys," Lady Alice retorts, and turning to face Edith, continues, "last night on TV they were playing Christmas carols; and when I went in that big dept. store, they were all trimmed up for Christmas. It's not right; and I don't like it, it spoils the whole holiday season for me. By Christmas day, I'm sick and tired of all the carols and trimmings all wilted." And, stamping her foot, "It's only mid-October, with Halloween, Armistice Day, and Thanksgiving, yet to come. Right after Thanksgiving is time enough."

Mildred, who has a good word for all, joined the group and had this explanation. "I suppose, with lagging economy, the merchants are doing everything to stimulate the sales," and with smile for Lady Alice, "I heard those carols too, and found it was only another sales effort to sell some records. Probably, so early so folks could order and get delivery by Christmas."

But, Lady Alice wasn't to be appeased, and grumbled, "I still don't like it, no matter what excuses they give. I'm going to tell the store managers and write to the TV stations and tell 'em."

"I couldn't agree more," piped Ralph the New England Yankee, "and here's something else to chew about. TV, said some of Steven Co. Textile plants had finally been unionized and . . . "

Limpy Pete, butted in with a whack of his cane, "Yep! now business will boom in Hong Kong and Korea and we'll have empty mills and breadlines the same as we had in the Merrimac Valley in the 20tees, when unions took over," and with a 'thump, thump' Pete glared at the group.

Ralph holds up his hand, "Slow down Pete, that may not be the case at all. Here's the way I see it. Unions are on the 'spot' and they've matured a lot since those days. Bet, they'll make every effort to show that business and labor can work together for the good of the whole community."

"Well, I sure hope you're right," Pete mumbles, as he limps away, giving a couple final gabs, saying, "time will tell, time will tell."

Some times there are cute little items submitted, and here's one. "Growing old gracefully is just a case of mind over matter. If you don't mind, it doesn't matter."

CHAPTER EVENTS

It's 55-ALIVE-MATURE driving class time, and instructor Leon LaRoche (334-0416) is planning a November class in the Harry Hoke room at the 1st Federal S&L Bldg. The value of these classes was brought out only too well last week, when your reporter had a close one.

While riding back from leaving his car for repairs, a big black rubbish truck backed right into the right side of the car, crushing the side in and pinning of Ernie flat out on the seat, until the truck pulled away. There were broken parts and glass chips all around, but personal damage seemed slight, however the van was a mess.

Now, here's the point. If the truck driver had learned his defensive driving (or 55-Alive-Mature driving), he'd never backed up without making sure that all was clear and would stay that way. That's one thing both courses stress. They tell how to use mirrors and turning head to make very sure. Maybe all big body truck drivers should be required to attend these defensive driving classes the same as some traffic law violators are required to, by court order.

Anyway, this near calamity, sure brought out the fact, that just to be in a car on the highways is very hazardous for seniors and everything possible must be done to make it safer. And, one of the best methods is take the 55-ALIVE-MATURE driving class, as it is especially designed for the seniors, who don't react, hear and see quite as well as they did 50 years ago. For information call Leon LaRoche, 334-0416.

Some snow birds don't have the publications forwarded, so from time to time items of special interest will be noted here.

We do enjoy poking fun at 'National,' and here's one to think about. On page 66 of Nov. Modern Maturity, there's an article on eyes, saying that you shouldn't buy those 'ready-to-wear' glasses as they could do more harm than good. Then, on page 67, there's an advertisement offering "ready-to-wear" glasses for $6.98. (Right hand doesn't know what the left is doing?).

Patricia Harris, Sec. Health & Human Services (HHS) says that the national health care bill went up only 12.5 percent in 1979 to a $212 billion total. Well, that's a step in the right direction, for just a few years ago health service costs were increasing at 19 percent when general inflation was only 8 percent. If just the threat of a Health Cost Containment bill could exert that much restraint on the health industry, there's a good chance that passage of a bill might not be required. But, be sure to write your Congressman, so as to keep the threat alive.

House of Refuge is 10-X worldwide symbol

HOUSE OF REFUGE was adopted as the scene on certificates awarded by the Treasure Coast Chapter of 10-X International and is now sent to amateur radio operators 'round the world who qualify as chapter members.

BY AILSA DEWING

The House of Refuge on Hutchinson Island is becoming familiar around the world, thanks to a group of area amateur radio operators who were charter members of the Treasure Coast Chapter of 10-X International.

As of now, 8½ x 11-inch colored reproductions of the landmark have been sent out to some 800 ham operations, 24 of them in foreign countries. But that figure goes up month-by-month as radio operators the world over qualify for the Treasure Coast Chapter certificates bearing the photo of the House of Refuge.

The man behind the worldwide distribution is Pete Hattendorf, a Jensen Beach radio operator who serves as certification manager for the locally-based 10-X chapter, one of 220 such chapters literally circling the globe.

10-X (pronounced Ten-Ten) is an international organization of amateur radio buffs who use the ten meter band to carry on their wireless communications, according to Hattendorf. The organization was founded in the early '60s in California to promote interest in the ten-meter band in order to keep it from being assigned for commercial instead of amateur use.

Since the beinning of amateur radio communications, operators have exchanged QSL's --postcards confirming radio operators' "shacks", serving as souvenirs of wireless chats with fellow operators in distant places. In time, it became the custom to use picture postcards of local scenes as QSL's instead of ordinary postcards.

With the organization of the 10-X chapters, a new kind of QSL has come into being, called a certificate. Each chapter sets its own qualifications for awarding its certificate but basically an operator earns a certificate after contacting a specified number of a chapter's members. Consequently, each chapter acquires certified members far and wide who, in turn, are contacted by other potential chapter members. The 800 radio operators who've earned the Treasure Coast certificate are considered to be members of the chapter.

When the Treasure Coast Chapter was organized in 1978, its charter members voted to use the House of Refuge as its emblem. Using a photograph taken by Laurence E. Nieland, the chapter's certificate is a colored reproduction measuring 8½ by 11 inches.

The walls of Pete Hattendorf's radio shack attest to the number of certificates he's earned, mostly during afternoon talks, he says, brightly colored certificates show scenes of New Zealand, Hawaii, Nicaragua, Alaska and Germany -- to name a few.

In the almost 50 years he's been on the air, Pete has acquired a bundle of colorful QSL's, as well. And since he had adopted the photo of the House of Refuge for his QSL postcard, numerous ham operators also display the local scene among their QSLs.

ECK FISHERMEN. George and Marie Witt of Tampa d their dog) said they were doing well on speckled perch (black crappies) drifting live minnows while fishing out of the Lake Marian Marina west of Kenansville. (Dick Lundin photo)

Specks are out there

BY DICK LUNDIN

THIS IS THE TIME of the year when speck (black crappie) fishermen begin to think of those delicious speckled perch getting ready to spawn in some of our deeper canals but mostly in such nearby lakes as Okeechobee, Kissimmee, Blue Cypress and Marian. The really wild action on specks comes in January, February and March, but you can catch them now too, and I did just that last Wednesday up at Lake Marian.

To get to Marian, drive up the turnpike to Yeehaw Junction. Take U.S. 441 north 14 miles to Kenansville. Turn left at the gas station on S523 and go about four miles to the Lake Marian Restaurant. Turn left and drive to the Lake Marian Marina straight ahead.

The marina proper is now being managed again by Jack and Dottie Conant after an absence of two and one-half years, but the overall setup is being involved in a change of ownership from Judge Platt to Pat McGary and Ed Dryer, who have been working hard and with considerable success to upgrade the image of the place.

There are 43 hookups in the camp grounds, unlimited space for campers or rec vehicles and self-contained vehicles, 250 boat slips, a gasoline pump, a well-stocked bait and tackle shop, and boats and motors for rent. The six motel rooms are clean and adequate for fishermen, including a stove and refrigerator. The launch ramp is usable but needs work. There are two fish cleaning stations.

FORTUNATELY for me, Dottie wasn't too busy to take me out in Jack's bass boat to show me where the best speck fishing is. We drifted before a spanking breeze southeasterly across the three-mile wide lake from the lone dead pine near Jordan's Slough nearly to Four Mile Point, picking up several nice specks on each pass. The popular bait now is a Hall's Fly, a grub-like little jig, with a wriggling Missouri minnow hooked through its eyes. We caught most of them on a yellow one but some on orange-bodied jigs as well.

It was a warm, cloudy day to start with, but around noon the temperature dropped and by 2 p.m. it was starting to rain a bit. Dottie is a fanatic fisherman and didn't want to leave while we were catching specks, but with a seven mile ride back to the marina facing us and the rain threat mounting, she yielded, albeit reluctantly, and we tore back in the face of gathering clouds and an increasing drizzle.

Back at the marina, we filleted our catch of 35 specks and discussed plans for another fishing trip on Marian around mid November.

There are some big bass at Marian and if you like to mix bass and speck fishing, this month should be a good one. You should be there at daylight for a go at the largemouths and then put in the rest of the day drifting for specks. If the weather's too calm, you'll have to troll slowly for specks. It isn't nearly so effective as drifting but you'll catch your share that way too.

The telephone number at the Lake Marian Marina is 436-1021 and you should be able to get some good advance information on the fishing from Pat, Ed, Dottie or Jack, depending on who's available.

Lake Marian is a waterfowl and wildfowl paradise, with only a few signs of habitation all around the nine-mile long, three-mile wide lake. It's truly one of Florida's natural beauty spots.

THE BOTTOM LINE. For many, the big question when you go fishing is "what did you catch." Here, guide Dottie Conant and Outdoor Editor Lundin hold up a basket with 35 nice specks caught drifting live minnows on Lake Marian while fishing out of the Lake Marian Marina near Kenansville. Florida hunting season starts Saturday, Nov. 9

BY DICK LUNDIN

THE GENERAL HUNTING SEASON in Florida starts this Saturday, Nov. 9, and the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission reminds hunters to be properly licensed and to follow the rules and regulations of the Commission.

"We encourage all hunters to be sure they are carrying the proper licenses and meet the various state and federal regulations required of hunters," Major Kenneth L. Stivers, director of the Office of Informational Services for the GFWFC, said.

He pointed out that outdoorsmen may purchase their hunting licenses at the office of county tax collectors or their registered subagents. All hunters, Stivers emphasized, must possess a hunting license except children under 15 and Florida residents 65 and older.

For residents, costs of the statewide hunting license (series K) are $11.50 and home county hunting (series I), $4.50. For non-resident licenses for statewide annual hunting (series L), the cost is $50.50 and statewide, 10-day continuous license (series M), $15.50.

Special licenses include aliens hunting, $50 and a guide license (series Y), $10 (required for guiding hunting parties). The license for hunting on licensed private hunting preserves (resident and non-resident) costs $5.50 (series H).

Various permits are available from the tax collector or subagents, including wildlife management area permits for all hunters between 15 and 65 (series MA) at $10. Underaged permits (14 and younger) cost $2.50 (series UP). Hunters 65 and older require only a senior citizen certificate which is issued without charge at the tax collector's office.

An archery permit or a muzzle-loader permit costs $5. A recreational permit is $2 and covers three days of use on specific state wildlife management areas for non-hunting purposes.

IF YOUVE QUESTIONS about the state's hunting regulations, there's a toll-free number in West Palm Beach (1-800-432-2046) to provide you with the answers.

The Nov. 8 date marks the opening of the deer season in all regions of the state (no open season in the Fla. Keys).

Also opening then is the turkey season, with gobblers only in Leon, Wakulla, Badsden and Jefferson counties in the Northwest Region. Either sex turkeys may be taken in the Northeast, Central, South and Everglades Regions (gobblers only in Alachua County). If crows are your bag, the season on crows opens statewide on Nov. 8 also.

Quail and squirrel season opens Nov. 8 in the Northwest, Northeast, Central, South and Everglades Regions (with no open season for fox squirrel in Lee, Hendry, Palm Beach, Monroe, Collier, Broward and Dade Counties). The second phase of the dove season begins statewide Nov. 8 with all day hunting (one-half hour before sunrise to sunset).

Wild hog season opens Nov. 8 in Palm Beach and Alachua Counties and portions of Collier, Dade and Monroe Counties. Bear season opens in Baker and Columbia Counties (bear taken must be checked and tagged at the Commission's Lake City Regional Office).

Also opening will be the snipe season, so get your sacks ready for any neophyte nimrods you plan to hoodwink a bit.

"HUNTERS ARE ENCOURAGED" to enroll in one of the regularly scheduled hunter education classes taught by the Commission. It is a course that teaches an outdoorsman how to best practice safe hunting and also includes an overview of conservation practices which help our wildlife flourish," Brantly said, and also reminds hunters that if they spot violators of state wildlife and fisheries laws to report such incidents immediately through the Wildlife Alert program of the Commission. Call that toll-free 1-800-432-2046 number in West Palm Beach and give them the scoop!

WITH CHRISTMAS COMING UP, it can be a problem to settle on a gift for that outdoorsman of yours. If you don't know for sure just what items of equipment might please, there's another tack you can take. It's a subscription to Florida Wildlife magazine.

This bimonthly publication of the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission is a delight to read. It's informative and entertaining. If you're interested in Florida's outdoors, reading Florida Wildlife is truly a "must."

A typical issue includes information on hunting, fishing, camping, nature and occasionally works of wildlife artists. A subscription is $5 annually. To subscribe, write to Florida Wildlife Magazine, 620 S. Meridian St., Tallahassee, Fla. 32301.

Octoberfest ugh success

November 1 and 2 were the dates of the Octoberfest Golf and Tennis ournament. Events started at 9 a.m. Saturday, and golf 9 a.m. Sunday, with the tennis getting under way at 1 p.m. Sunday (Over 100 golfers participated and over 40 tennis players. The format was Saturday 7:30 to 9 a.m. buffet breakfast. At 9:15 all the horses were off and running. Bob Erikson, golf pro, gave each team a horsey name, and the program looked like a racing form.

A few examples looked like this: Horse Number 1 CLYDE VAN DUSEN Players, Dewindt & Conn, Comments: Sure Thing - Hndcp. 11 (point quota) Gallent Fox - Tate & Anderson - Can't miss - handcp. 14. Number 20 Greek Money - Harper & Martin-Two Chances, Slim & None, Hdcp. 16. Number 5 BROKERS TIP, St Onge & Mendell - Comment: Beer a factor, Hcp. 15.

And so it went, with each team carrying their schedule sheet that directed them to the proper court and against the right opponents. Each team played six games. The final results in the men's div. were 1. Bill Tate & Fred Cowin, 2. Bud Jordon & Tom Thulow, 3. Dick Campbell & Jack Zentz, 4. Ritchie Prentice & Jack Thomas. Consolation winners were Stan Goodman & Fran Lunhas, (note, their total experience adds up to 148 years, their combined ages).

The ladies winners were: 1. Francine Mendell & Jean Wamnes, 2. Louise Tate & Bea Thomas, 3. Gwyn Henry & Phylis Cowin, 4. Margie Jordon & Sandy Thurlow. Consolation winners were Connie Falkenburg & Caroline Conn, who incidently just called to tell me how much fun she and everyone she talked to had. We have already put it down as an annual event. Dr. Dick Penick asked if we couldn't do it every month.

Sunday afternoon in the mixed doubles, there were two separate round robins, 20 people in each one, and the top 4 teams in each div. played off for the overall champion, plus the consolation finals. The teams were so evenly matched, that in the 5 play-offs, 3 went to sudden death. Mixed results were, 1. Bud Jordon & Louise Tate def. Ritchie Prentice & Bea Thomas, 2. Tom Thurlow & Gwyn Henry lost to Dana DeWindt & Caroline Conn, 3. Bill Tate & Holly Anderson def. Bill Pate & Sandy Thurlow, 4. Dick Campbell & Jean Schafer def. Scott Henderson & Margie Jordon. In the fiercely contested consolation, Stan Goodman and Hilde Pate def. in a tie-breaker, Frank Wolfe and Virginia Ray.

Prizes were awarded to all the winners and runners up, with over $1000 worth of merchandise being presented at the final cocktail party and awards ceremony Sunday night.

The 'Haig' Heritage

BY MIKE SANDS

(Editor's note: Walter C. Hagen (1892-1969) was America's most dominant figure in golf of the pre-modern era. His record of five PGA Championship victories (1921-24-25-26-27) still stands today. Appropriately, the first course completed at PGA National Golf Club was named in his honor. The following interview with Hagen, more than 30 years ago, provides unique insight into the man and his deeds.

It would be an extremely helpful, interesting, entertaining and informative happening if some five million average golfers could have sat in the presence of Walter Hagen and gotten his slant on the game of golf.

I am not referring here to the mechanics of the swing or the physical fundamentals which Hagen also had to a marked degree.

I am referring more to the human, mental and psychological twists which infest golf for the average golfer — from 85 to 125 — wherein the veteran Hagen was even more the master of them all.

"It is a funny antic to me," he said during an interview at the 1974 U.S. Open, "why so many merely average golfers get sore and blow up over some bad shots. I have won a few championships here and there, and yet I have always expected to miss five, six, or even seven shots during a round. Why? Because experience has taught me that I nearly always do. So, when I do make a bad shot I simply think to myself, 'That's one of the several that will come later.'

"If the average golfer," he continued, "would only take his error, his bad shot or his mistake as part of the round, forget about it, and concentrate only on the next shot, he might be surprised at the difference in his score.

Golf, after all, is about 60 or 70 per cent mental or emotional or psychological. And that goes for everyone who plays it — duffer or star.

"Another surprising thing," Hagen said, "is that so many smart people, so many able brains, in other lines — get to be so dumb in golf.

"Here's one of the commonest score killers," he came back.

"I was playing a short while ago with a well known businessman who had a fair swing — good enough to break 90 now and then. Yet he told me he had never broken 100 in his life. I wondered why — until I got the answer.

"He started out 5 4 5 4 not so bad. Then at the fifth hole he sliced his drive off the course in a rather bad spot back of a tree. Instead of accepting the penalty of one stroke for out of bounds and playing safely to the fairway, he rallied for a spoon and tried to play a shot right around the tree from a cuppy lie — with the odds 200 to 1 against reaching the green 200 yards away. He hit the tree as a starter and when he finally finished up he had a 9. He also had a set of nerves that had been wrecked and a mental balance that had been blown to pieces.

"Did you really think you could play that shot?" I asked him.

"I don't suppose I did," he replied "I just hoped it would come off. I admit it was dumb.

"This man had another 9 and two 8's on his card, which could easily have been 5's or 6's, and he finished with a 104.

"When you make a mistake in golf — it's made. You can't call it back. And everyone makes mistakes. The next move is to plan to make that mistake cost as little as possible — to play percentage. Just face the fact that you have probably lost your par — but one over par isn't so bad."

"Yet it was suggested you have been seen to take a lot of gambles."

"Sure," Hagen grinned, "but only when I had to — when the occasion forced the risk, and, after all, I can pull off a few shots that a fellow couldn't who had never broken 90 — or 100."

"The average golfer," Walter continued, "has a pretty fair swing. Watch his practice swings at a dandelion head or a cigar stump. Why doesn't he concentrate more on the right way to swing — and just figure the ball has to stop somewhere? Think only of swinging the right way — and let nature take its course. The course can't be any rougher than those over which 90 percent of the golfers play.

"Here are some of the suggestions from the mental side I would make:

"When you get to the first tee, try to be as relaxed as you can — swing as smoothly as you can; think in those terms — not where the ball is going — don't think ahead of the stroke.

"The most important shot in golf is the one you have to play next — never mind the one you've missed — we all miss 'em now and then.

"Don't let golf get on your nerves. Take the game as it comes."

Octopus shirts now being sold

If you and your friends like you turtle shirts and pelican shirts, you'll love the octopus shirts now available at the Environmental Studies Center in Jensen Beach.

The shirts, featuring an original octopus design by Joan Hutchenson, are the newest in the Indian River Series of hand-screened wildlife decorated t-shirts which are sole by the Center to supplement funds for its educational programs.

The shirts are perennially popular as holiday gifts and are accompanied by a descriptive message on the life and habitat of the creature pictured.

Prices range from $4 for youth sizes to $6 for ladies' sizes.

Proceeds from the shirt sales have gone toward purchasing pup tents for camping trips and a refractometer for taking salinity readings. Funds this year will be used to purchase a telescope for the Center.

Blustery winds haven't slowed that great bluefishing any

Dick Lundin
Outdoor Editor

THAT BIG BLOW didn't adversely affect area fishing but it did make it tough on fishermen, especially those braving the high winds and waves to fish the Hutchinson Island surf where anglers have been enjoying some of the best ~~sixty~~ season possibilities in years.

The schools of blues are still feeding on baitfish in the surf from the Martin County Park N-Fish season area below the Holiday Inn off A1A close up to the power plant. Anglers casting two to two-and-one-half ounce Krocodile spoons, or cut bait with six to eight ounces of lead, have been catching lots and lots of blues to five and six pounds this week.

Those aren't the only blues around because some good catches have been reported also from the Evans Crary (10 cent) Bridge and at the Cross Roads where the St. Lucie and Indian Rivers converge.

Probably the best action, apart from bluefishing, is on black drum. Although the Roosevelt Bridge on U.S. 1 above downtown Stuart is probably the hottest spot for drum to 10 and 15 lbs., they have been catching some drum at just about all of the area bridges. You can catch them on fresh or live shrimp, clams or fiddler crabs.

CAPT. PHIL SHERMAN, from the party boat Lady Stuart (286-1980), docking at the Sailfish Marina just east of Port Salerno off A1A below Stuart: "Fishing's been great the ones or twice we've been out lately. We had 30 grouper to 20-0 (20 lbs.) last Thursday. We've been doing pretty good on snapper, fishing on the inshore reefs just north of the St. Lucie Inlet, in about 60 ft. of water. Also, we have been bringing in some big triggerfish to stir and seven pounds. They're excellent eating and more fishermen should try them despite their tough skin. They could make shoes out of it, I bet. Our catches include some nice Lane and some mangrove snappers, but there don't seem to be any true reds around right now. When we can get out, the fishing's really good. I don't think the inlet's shoaling any worse. With the swells we've been having recently, it hasn't been so bad to get in and out. When they start the main dredging and cut through the reef at the bar cut, and with that new jetty, things will be all right. All we need is some deep water, like 16 to 18 ft."

MURIEL WEIDEMAN, from D&M Bait and Tackle at the south end of the Roosevelt Bridge: "Wednesday and Thursday nights the fishing at the Roosevelt was excellent for black drum and sheepshead. It was slow yesterday (Monday) but it has been good. We open now at 6 a.m. and close at 7 p.m., because of the time change. Some catches, Dick: Solomon Legg, a 7-0 flounder, cut shrimp; Gene Davis, 15 drum to 15-0, 6 gaffhopsail catfish (sailcats) and a big Atlantic croaker, 2 nights fishing, live shrimp; Ted Rase, a 12-0 drum on live shrimp."

FROM MANATEE BAIT AND TACKLE, J. D. Sachs: "River fishing's still good. Overall, fishing's picked up pretty good after this blow we've been having. There are plenty of blues at the Cross Roads going for live bunker, cut mullet, and (trolling) rag mops and Tony Accetta spoons with the yellow feather. Snook and snapper are still hitting live finger mullet at the new SL Inlet jetty. The big charter boats have been getting some kings this week off the Hutchinson Island condos in 55 ft. of water and also farther out in 85 ft. There are more sails around now, some wahoo, and a few dolphin to 15-0. There are a few pompano in the surf near Seminole Shores. Anglers using two to 2½ ounce Krocodile spoons have been catching lots of blues in the Hutchinson Island surf."

CHUCK SHEPHERD, from the Bait Box in Jensen: "There are blues in the surf but it's been almost too rough to fish there. It takes a lot of lead or a heavy spoon. Also, you need a stout rod and tackle heavy enough to withstand the added casting weight. Anybody's crazy to go offshore now. I think, though, that it'll get better this week. The weather's looking better."

FROM JENSEN BAIT AND TACKLE, Jon Varina: "Even throughout the blustery weather, some anglers fished the surf for bluefish. Trout fishing has really perked up a little bit, mostly on the grass flats. It should improve now that it's calmed down. Probably the area around the power plant is best for sea trout. The Indian River is plumb full of jack crevalles. They're catching some pompano around the power plant in the surf, and just a few whiting and an occasional snook in the Hutchinson Island surf. On our log, Dick: John and Betty Tackett, 8 blues to 5-0, cut mullet, surf; Jon Duschampa, a 7-0 snook, live shrimp, boating near the Evans Crary; Hank Ziegler and buddy Pete, 30 blues, cut ribbon fish, Evans Crary."

TOM STEWART, from the Snook Nook in Jensen: "Bluefishing has never been this good this early in the season in the past five years, but where are the Spanish mackerel? Even the commercial netters can't find them and we need some desperately for cut bait. There are plenty of blues in the surf but it takes about two ounces of lead to hold bottom with your cut bait, or at least a two-and one-half-ounce Krocodile spoon if you expect to cast it against the wind successfully. A few whiting and pompano are being caught in the surf, with the best action whenever the blues are feeding well off the beach. The Evans Crary Bridge and the Jensen Causeway have been good for small snook to 12-0. Live shrimp or a big 7/0 Mirrolure appear to be the best baits (lures) now. There are some big black drum at all of the area bridges, hitting mostly clams or fiddler crabs. Mangrove snappers are leaving now that the moon is going down again. There are a few sailcats and some flounder in the Indian River. It's best to fish the east bank near the power plant or at the mouths of the creeks. Elsewhere, the water's just too muddy to fish effectively."

The Nook's log: Jr. Dobson, 4 snook to 16-0, live shrimp, Evans Crary; Scott Gallivan, 2 snook to 6-0 west catwalk, Frank Wachs, from Hilltop; Lloyd Cook and Don Weber, 3 trout and 5 mangrove snapper, live shrimp, Herman's Bay; Charlie Arca, Jose Assi and Dave Walters, 7 trout to 2-0, T-Zo rig and trout touts; George White, a snook and a pompano, spinning jig, Jensen Causeway; Ed Wagner, 4 trout and a flounder, touts and T-Zo rig, mouth of Big Mud Creek just above the power plant; Bill Reichelt, 22 blues, cut mackerel, surf; Ray Timm, 5 blues, cut mackerel, Ocean condo; Bill Warren, John Lawton and Bernice Freitag, 8 blues to 6-8, 2¼ oz. Kroco, surf; Tony Battaglia, 15 blues, cut mackerel, Holiday Inn surf; Willie and Lee Catlett, 14 blues, cut mackerel, Oceana; Ed and Mildred Browne, 15 blues, same; Frank Nicholson and Carl Anderson, 17 blues, cut mackerel, surf.

ON THE FRESHWATER SIDE, Kay Chisholm from the Buckhead Ridge Marina on the north shore of Lake Okeechobee just west of the Kissimmee River Bridge on SR 78, had this to say about fishing: "A week or so ago, the fishing was just great but the wind's been whipping the lake and very few have been able to do any fishing for several days now. They were getting some nice bass to six to seven pounds on plastic worms from Tin House Cove on down. Also, specks were hitting good on jigs at Indian Prairie and some were even being caught on live minnows right here in the Rim Canal. Bluegills threaten, aren't doing anything any more, Dick. We should have some real good fishing again just as soon as things calm down here."

Sinners opens

With renovations completed, the back nine of the Sinners Course at Sandpiper Bay will be open for play Nov. 5 bringing 45 holes of golf which will be open for play at this resort community.

The back nine of the Saints was closed down shortly after the Florida Open in mid July of this year. Reports have it that nine new greens have been installed and a completely new automatic watering system has been instituted throughout the nine holes.

The 45 holes include 18 at each of the Saints and Sinners courses and the nine holes of the challenging Wilderness. In addition officials look for continuous activity on the Par 3 Nine holes which adjoins the motel complex.

t just got by the dangerous Jim rn and his Seattle Seahawks, 27-20.
In the Monday night game,
veland beat Chicago, 27-21.

LOOKING AHEAD to next weekend,
's how we see it:

Dallas to drub the Giants at N.Y.; awakened Steelers to edge the ts at Tampa Bay; Washington to e to the Bears in Chicago; San ncisco to surprise the Packers at en Bay; Atlanta to top the Cards at Louis; Cleveland to win a h scoring affair from the Colts in timore; Detroit to win a close one
m the Vikings at Minnesota; ffalo to get back on the winning ck against the Jets in Shea; cinnati to drop one to the tough iders out in the Bay area; Denver to ake a losing visit to San Diego; nsas City to come away empty at attle; Philadelphia to have more fun
Bourbon Street but to have plenty left to hand the Saints their 10th raight defeat; The Dolphins to go all out defensively against the Rams but lose another close one away from me.

In the Monday night game, a matchup made in Heaven, or less, the AFC East division-leading Patriots vade the Astrodome to take on the AFC Central division-leading Houston ilers. If anyone can hold Earl Campbell under 150 yards, the triots can do it, but the home field dvantage is the key here and I like e Oilers to take it all after a bruising battle between two fine teams.

THAT OAKLAND MESS was never more apparent than Sunday afternoon. Miami was making an eighth water haul out to the West Coast to play the Raiders, and the result was the same as always, a heart-breaking defeat. It may not have been so close as that 38-36 playoff loss out there in 1974 when Kenny Stabler, defensive end Vern Dan Harder dropped all over him, heaved that dying duck pass in the end zone where Clarence Davis caught it in the midst of three Dolphin defenders on their own one, but it was just another game the Dolphins should have won, but didn't.

Lady Luck, a necessary ally in all close encounters in the NFL, was definitely sitting on the Oakland side when quarterback Jim Plunkett, who had all kinds of problems against Miami's tough young secondary, tossed one over the middle at the goal line late in the second quarter, and Oakland leading, 9-3. It looked like Miami free safety Glenn Blackwood would intercept it but the target, wide receiver Bob Chandler, got a hand in the way and tipped the ball into the air. Somehow, he caught it before it hit the ground and fell into the end zone for the touchdown that eventually proved to be the difference.

THE DOLPHINS, whether Woodley or Strock was at the throttle, just couldn't generate a decent scoring drive.

Woodley got the field goal in the first half, a 36-yarder by Uwe von Schamann, but couldn't take it in after linebacker Earnest Rhone had intercepted Plunkett and returned the ball to the Raider 15. Two harmless line plays and an incomplete pass, all sent in from the bench, misfired before the field goal.

In his assignment, Woodley started from the Miami 25, 34, Raider 15, Miami 30, 20-and 22, and had only one good drive, late in the half. That one, moved the ball from the Miami 22 clear down to the Raider three-yard line, but time ran out and von Schamann missed a 21-yard field goal as the half ended.

There was a wild play just before the aborted field goal try. Woodley, trying to throw the ball out of bounds to stop the clock, sailed it right into the hands of Lester Hayes who intercepted it and raced 94 yards for a touchdown. Fortunately, the play was nullified when linebacker Ted Hendricks was offside and Miami got the chance at the field goal anyway.

IF THERE WAS A GOAT in the game for Miami — discounting the abysmal depths to which the offense sank all afternoon under both Woodley and Strock — it had to be between von Schamann's chip shot miss that changed all of Miami's second half strategy, and linebacker Rusty Chambers who seemingly "blew" the coverage on Raider tight end Raymond Chester in the first quarter when Plunkett hit him, wide open, for a 13-yard touchdown pass.

The second half Dolphin touchdown followed a fumble by Raider running back Derek Jensen at the Oakland 35. The Dolphins scored in four plays, Terry Robiskie for 7, and then for another 7 a pass from Strock to wide receiver Nat Moore in the Raider two-yard line, and Robiskie's powerful thrust through the left side for the score. That made it 16-10 early in the second half.

THE MOST DISAPPOINTING possession for Miami came shortly thereafter when linebacker Larry Gordon intercepted Plunkett and set Strock up at the Oakland 43 late in the third quarter. He and the Miami offense weren't equal to the task at hand, however. They ran Robiskie twice for seven yards and then threw incomplete to Moore, before punting.

The story of Miami's much-maligned offense all too often in 1989.

Miami never got close again. The Dolphins punted it away with three minutes left to play and the Raiders kept possession the rest of the way with Miami's playoff hopes dying away second by second.

There was one high note: Punter George Roberts had only one bad kick all day and his 71-yard punt out of the end zone late in the third quarter really took Miami out of a deep hole at its own three-yard line. George kicks with the best of them.

THE LOS ANGELES RAMS figure to take Sunday's game — but don't bet on it. I'd take Miami and the points if I were betting on it. This Miami team is cornered and could rise to heights against L.A.

Sandtrap

BY MIKE SANDY

A couple weeks ago we wrote in this corner that football fans in the north of Miami would stage a "silent" revolt against the Dolphins who are now "finless." The revolt had do with the decision and insistence of the Dolphins to invoke the 75 mile TV blackout of Dolphin home games by Station WTVX TV of Fort Pierce. We predicted a silent boycott of the games but never realized such a "revolting development" would materialize. We stated that people would not pay the shot to travel to Miami for a game they couldn't view on TV. What amazes your writer mostly is the announcement which came out of the Dolphin front office recently that there were 9,129 "No Shows" for the recent Dolphin Buffalo Bills game in the Orange Bowl. The No Shows are significant in that the tickets were paid for, costing from $ to 11 dollars each. This should very well tell a story to the Dolphin management. The latest which interests us is the feature published in the Miami Herald "Football Fans: Why are you staying away?" Our column of two weeks ago pointed out many avenues the football fans are now following after the persistent boycott. Management wants the answers. We can tell them to stop "biting the hands that have been feeding them and stop kicking ardent died in the-wool football fans in their teeth.

We have learned that Mike Shaffington, local dean of golf pros, is doing nicely after surgery. Bill Johns says he's fully recovered from the shocks of lightning. Phil Murchison, the young and talented golf pro out of Stuart has joined the staff at Sandpiper Bay. Arthur Sprague, former Illinois Senator, doing nicely at his Sandpiper Bay home after a long illness. Fynes Hall and Babe Valgelardi will be making Sandpiper their full time home now that he's fully retired from his business interests in Cleveland, Ohio.

Heard that Frank Mlinsk, a noted Syracuse attorney, will soon take over the Florida branch of his law firm which already includes a battery of nine attorneys. Story is that Frank, who makes his winter home here, will head the office in the new Centre building on Route 1. The Sandpiper Bay gals are urging Chuck Lehman to arrange another Pro Lady tournament which proved so popular here a couple weeks ago. Larry Rosene having a real time of handing lessons and handicaps for the "Over the Hill" crowd which does its thing every Saturday at the Saints course. Larry, we understand still calls on the former "Hombre" of the group Bert McDonnell for help. Heard they're having a run on toothpicks these days with many youngsters munching U. S. Washington, ex-of the Kansas City Royals. Also that George Brett will be consulting a famed "rear admiral" during the off season. Never did see what the TV ratings were when the World Series and Pro Football games overlapped recently.

Pro Ams have been cancelled for the season at Mariner Sands according to Head Pro Chuck Knebels who reported that the growth in membership roles plus the many northerners who have returned will be offered the starting time preferences. Knebels did issue an open "thank you" to all those pros and amateurs alike who participated during the summer and fall season.

Jim Remington has closed his Gloversville, N.Y. golf course and is back here and expects to be entertaining Hal Schumacher, once famed New York Giants pitching star, a native of Dolgeville, N.Y.

They tell us that Martin Memorial Hospital is back to normal again following the departure of Pasquale Danze, famed restaurateur of Jupiter who underwent minor surgery recently. Pasquale, who operates the "gourmet" eatery, had his room at Martin Memorial looking like a sign painter's emporium. While convalescing, Pasquale prevailed upon his wife Virginia to bring in slabs of plywood and paint brushes, utilizing his time to make up his "quaint" menus for the new restaurant which he will open on PGA Blvd. next week. The new spot will be called Giovanni's. With the new opening, we understand that Pasquale will forego his plans to play golf. His new set of clubs and elaborate golf attire will be put aside for another year and his tentative matches with Perry Como and Dean DeLuise will just have to wait.

And now we want to watch TV to see if lovely Phyllis George will act as a referee on the NFL Today. Much has been made of the one shot fight between Jimmy (The Greek) Snyder who threw one at Brent Musburger in a New York City bar last Sunday night. Must be that the Greek lacks a punch as Brent just shook off the punch with a smirk and a smile. Lady George was quoted that "every thing is okay now on the NFL Today." But we doubt it. We're sure that Musburger will long remember the night and the right and that there will surely be a show down. One of them has to go and we bet it won't be Musburger who gets slung fins with other on-hosts of the show, Irv Cross and the glamorous Lady George, and what about George Steinbrenner, N.Y. Yankee owner, who is now making matters uncomfortable for his manager Hausser and Reggie Jackson.

Could be best for all concerned if Gorgeous George would keep his comments confined to private meetings with his paid personnel and keep his remarks to the paid beer drinkers.

Jay Pyle has sizzling round

BY MIKE SANDY

The regular Sandpiper Pro Am event which is expected to attract the largest field of the current season will switch to the renovated Sinners course Friday, Nov. 7 with a shotgun start at 1:15 p.m., according to Head Pro Chuck Johnson.

With the field limited because of lack of pros in the area, Johnson pointed out that many northern pros who vacation in the area during the winter months are making their way southward and that the event can now accommodate the many amateurs who continue to find the test very attractive.

Last week, Jay Pyle, the young native of Stuart who currently serves as head honcho at Martin Downs Crane Creek facility, continues to show his hot hand by taking the lion's share of the pro purse when he carded a six under par 66 five shots better than his closest rivals — Bruce Harrison of Sandpiper and Phil Campoli, an assistant to Pyle, both scoring like 71's. Chuck Knobels of Mariner Sands and Matt Moore of No. Palm Beach rated next with 74's while Lee Agne, Kelly Childs, of Mid Rivers and Lou Tsiali of Vero Beach racked up 75 shots.

Matt Moore, a senior retired pro now making his home in Palm Beach led his three amateur partner into first place of the four man event with a two-baseball score of 20 under par 124. Simon pures on the top team included: Frank Voigtsadt, Charlie Walters and Bob Louis.

The quartet of Bruce Harrison, Vic Georgoff, Tony Franze and Harry Mingins finished second at 18-under 126 while Pyle and Campoli rated their teams in a deadlock at 17 under 127. Amateurs on the respective teams included Chiglis McNabb, John Rose, Dave Larsen, Gary Wirth, John Burmeister and John Knabb.

Stuart pro Jay Pyle, Sandpiper pro J. J. LaPlate rated their teams in the next peg off shot with 18 under tallies of 130 with support provided by amateurs Don Bergsand, Jack Hayes, John Link, Ken Snow, Orris Kirkby and Lenen Lunsford.

Sam Davis scores ace

Semi-retired golf professional Sam Davis now playing the game for fun after many years of teaching added another "orchid" to his bouquet of accomplishments on the golf course when he scored the ninth hole in one in his illustrious career. The ace was registered on the 169 yard par 3 tenth hole of the Sandpiper Saints course.

Now making his home at Fairway Point which adjoins the eighth hole of the Sinners course, Sam moved over several hundred yards to play a match on the Saints layout with Jimmy Starke, Dick Whiting and Roy Rutherford. Sam's ace was recorded with a beautifully executed seven iron shot which sent the ball greenward and after two bounces landed in the cup.

Men's golf scores

Earl Graham was flight A with a net score of 36 among participants in a Golf association competition Tuesday. Howdie Davidson was second with a 62.

In flight B Paul Adams was low with a 57. Howard Fairinger came in with a net of 58. Al McIntyre took flight C with a net of 56. George Baier had a 58.

Ed Beswick carded a net of 55 to take flight D. Hal Nowicki had a 58. Fairinger put his tee shot closest on the eighth hole; John Schwartz was closest on the 14th hole.

IN HER STUDIO, Dorothy Stafford expresses joy and vivacity as she discusses art and life. (Photo by Ailsa Dewing)

Stafford abstracts beauty from life

BY AILSA DEWING

Dorothy Stafford is an abstractionist. Whether she is painting, creating a collage, gardening or just being among people, she abstracts the beauty she beholds and delights in its radiating cheerfulness and vivacity.

During the coming month, visitors at the Elliott Gallery on Hutchinson Island will have the opportunity to view the warm and radiant world of Dorothy Stafford through a collection of her paintings to be exhibited there.

The paintings represent but a limited selection of her output over the past 35 years, however, and reflect but a single facet of her many forms of creativity.

Her garden and her home in Snug Harbor equally attest to her artistry. When the Staffords bought the Snug Harbor house it was a three-room cottage built on the river edge and surrounded by sand and scrub. Over the years they added a wing to the house and constructed the outbuilding that houses Dorothy's studio–the weekly gathering place of friends who enjoy painting together and where the Arts Associates of Martin County was first organized.

And Dorothy began creating her garden with its rambling paths and islands of verdant growth, adding artfully crafted cement sculpture of her own making.

"What I love to do is to create from nothing," Dorothy says, describing the assortment of cans and containers covered with chicken wire that form the skeletons of her statuary or painting to an outdoor wall hanging she constructed from pieces of an abandoned rowboat.

Her collages and textured paintings also reflect her use of the mundane to create beauty. An astute viewer at the exhibit will detect glass from a broken windshield, scraps of burlap, and artfully-arranged roof tiles among the elements she's used.

But Mrs. Stafford's art is far from simplistic. And while she seeks the viewer's appreciation, she does not expect her abstractions to be easily understood.

Understanding abstract art requires a certain amount of "education," she believes, and the artist must always stay ahead of the viewer.

"If too many people quickly understand and like it, I've stopped my forward movement," she says.

Her freedom to move forward comes, she says, from not having to sell her art to survive. But she views that freedom as a responsibility – the responsibility to pave the way and stay ahead of the "likes" of the viewer.

Yet she is more than willing to help the viewer toward that understanding by attaching titles to her works when they are on exhibit.

Mrs. Stafford is one of the few local artists yet to be invited to exhibit by the Martin County Historical Society which is sponsoring her month-long showing at the Elliott Gallery.

The exhibit will be previewed at a by-invitation-only reception and will be opened for public viewing Nov. 10.

DESIGNING POTTERY, especially pots to grow her orchids in, provides another medium for Dorothy Stafford's artistry.

LaRue Malone - art at library

A "one person" show at the Martin County Library during the month of November will feature paintings by LeRue Malone.

Mrs. Malone attended Pennsylvania State College and followed a career as a Color Stylist and Home Furnishing Consultant before becoming interested in painting twenty-two years ago. Her medium is oil and she depicts landscapes, seascapes, and some still life.

LaRue, her painting signature, has displayed in shows and regularly in galleries in the greater Miami area, as well as Asheville and western North Carolina. She has had a number of "one person" shows in both areas and was one of the original exhibitors in the now famous Coconut Grove Show.

Since moving to Stuart four years ago she has become an active member of the Martin County Art Associates.

It can be called the men versus the women, the staff versus the distaff, or just about anything one might call it. It is the 1981 Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce membership drive.

"No cheating will be allowed," said Chamber President Dick Campbell. "We will have rules this time."

Some of the rules, borrowed from the Stuart Chamber's last drive, were outlined by Campbell at the Chamber board of directors meeting Monday at the Chamber office.

"Members can be signed up in advance, but the cards for those members must be picked by the team signing them when card-picking time arrives on Monday morning," Campbell said.

He outlined that the drive for 1981 memberships would be held from Monday morning to Friday at noon. A point system will give the team of women versus men points for each dollar of membership collected, special points for renewals, more points for new members, and incentive points for getting memberships in early in the drive.

"The drive will definitely close at noon Friday. All memberships brought in after noon will not count in the drive score," Campbell said.

A word battle between Bill Keele, chairman of the men's team, and Marg Paris, co-chairperson with Barbara Torow of the women's team, developed over who was to get credit for the memberships obtained before the starting date.

The two were gaveled to order by President Campbell, who said that the memberships would have to be counted as the alternately selected cards were pulled in the Monday morning (8 a.m.) kickoff of the drive.

Campbell maintained neutrality for the drive. He announced that two $100 new memberships had been obtained by him and that he would give one to the women's team and one to the men's team. Any other new members obtained by the president would be given to the teams in order so that no favoritism is shown.

The Chamber is seeking 230 sustaining (business) members this year, and 60 contributing members (individuals). Business memberships are $65, with some larger businesses contributing more, and individuals are $10. Many businesses list their employees as contributing members, enabling them to receive Chamber materials through the year and attend the many Chamber functions.

Campbell announced that he will host a team rally for the women on November 15 and a rally for the men on November 15 to offer ideas and support in their efforts to win the contest.

Knight resigns as ZBA attorney

Attorney Jim Knight, who has been serving as council for both the Sewall's Point Town Board and its Zoning Board of Appeals, has resigned as ZBA attorney and will be succeeded by Doug Sands.

Because the Town Board is seeking a Circuit Court injunction against a variance granted by the ZBA, Knight said he cannot continue to represent both boards.

Announcement of Knight's resignation was announced at a Monday night session of the ZBA.

Appearing before the board were Mr. and Mrs. Gustaf Johnson who sought a three-foot variance on a side yard setback to accommodate a tree Johnson described as "probably 100 years old." The Johnsons' property is in the Rio Vista subdivision.

Johnson withdrew his request, indicating it would be easier to cut down the tree, after learning that his search of the tax assessment rolls to locate owners within a 300-foot radius was not valid.

The taxrolls have not been certified since January 1979, according to Knight, who said the only valid data would be that obtained through a search of the Circuit Court records where deeds are registered.

Johnson told ZBA members that he had been directed to go to the tax assessor's office for the information either by the town clerk or the town board. Three months had elapsed while he searched for the owners' names and contacted them about his intention to seek a variance, he said. No replies, favorable or unfavorable, were received by Johnson or the ZBA.

Following Johnson's decision to withdraw the request, Chairman John Rossiter recommended the ZBA set up guidelines for property owners seeking variances in the future that would be available to applicants at the town hall.

First lady of journalists Sally Latham died Tuesday

Sally Robinson Latham, editor emeritus of the Mirror Newspapers, died Tuesday at Martin Memorial Hospital of cancer.

She had been news editor of The Mirror until she was stricken two years ago.

Latham was born November 21, 1917 in Media, Pa, one of three children of Frank and Ruth Robinson. She attended schools in Wellsborough, Pa., and St. Petersburg, Fl.

Her newspaper career began with the Oak Ridger in Tennessee and the Chatanooga Post. She then worked for the Ft. Pierce News Tribune. She then joined Pompano Beach Town News, forerunner of the Sun-Sentinel, and the Sun-Sentinel before returning to the News Tribune in Ft. Pierce. From there she joined The Mirror.

Latham was active in the formation of the St. Lucie Community Theatre, and a member of the American Cancer Society, Ft. Pierce Art Gallery and League, National Press Women's Club, and the Police Benevolent Society. She was a member of All Saints Eppicopal Church.

She is survived by four children, William Wallace Latham, Frank C. Latham, Valerie Grant and Bruce Latham. Also her sisters, Jeanne Myers and Ruth-Ann Davis of St. Petersburg, and Peggy Champlin of Los Angeles.

A memorial service will be held at All Saints Episcopal Church at 2 p.m. Thursday. Donations can be made to the American Cancer Society, Jensen Beach Samaritans or All Saints Episcopal Church.

Arrangements are under the direction of Aycock Funeral Home, Jensen Beach.

Couple seeks zoning variance

They end up in court

BY AILSA DEWING

Chester and Elizabeth Smith are newcomers to Florida. Last July they sold their home in Connecticut and came here expecting to build a new home in the Archipelago Subdivision in Sewall's Point.

The lot they selected forms a small peninsula on the Indian River open to the water on three sides, and connected to the mainland by a narrow finger.

The Smiths retained Dave Deinard, an architect with the firm of Herrlin Dejnard Construction Co., to design their new home — one that would fit within the contours of their boot-shaped lot and also take full advantage of the breeze from the Indian River, they explain.

When the house plans were complete the Smiths faced a problem: the 17-foot wide kitchen would extend eight feet beyond the required setback limit of 25 feet allowing only 17 feet between the house and the waterline.

On July 14 the Smiths went before the Sewall's Point Zoning Board of Appeals to request a variance. The Smiths had the required documents to show they had petitioned their 14 neighbors within a 300-foot radius and that there were no unfavorable replies.

After deliberating, the zoning board voted 3-2 to grant the variance with Chairman John Rossiter and one board member, Gerald O'Brien casting the two dissenting votes. During the hearing O'Brien had three times moved to deny the variance, but his motion died for lack of a second.

On Oct. 23, a resolution approving the variance was legally recorded.

But last week a Martin County deputy sheriff served notice on the Smiths, who are meanwhile living in a rented house on Hutchinson Island, that they have been named co-defendants in a lawsuit filed by the Sewall's Point Town Board against its Zoning Board of Appeals.

It was the first notice they had, the Smiths say, that there was any opposition to the variance.

In August, however, ZBA members, O'Brien and Rossiter, had gone before the Town Board to ask that it seek an injunction against permitting the variance on the grounds that the ZBA had not acted within the law.

"No special exception was necessary," Rossiter says. "The had plenty of room on the lot to build the house as blueprinted without a variance."

The ZBA has to operate within the statutes laid down by the state and the town laws, according to Rossiter. "It's all spelled out to give equal protection under the law."

ZBA attorney, Jim Knight, says that although the circumstances of a town board seeking an injunction against a zoning board is unusual, it is the only recourse under the law. Appeals must be heard in Circuit Court, according to a town ordinance.

The town board cannot overturn a ZBA decision, he explains.

Ostensibly, the Smiths could have started building their home after the variance was granted but they delayed, they say, because O'Brien is also a member of the Archipelago Association which has the right to examine building plans although it cannot approve or disapprove plans.

But the Smiths hesitated about building a home in a neighborhood where they weren't welcome and they began looking at other property.

They maintain, however, that the dissension discouraged people from wanting to purchase the land, and that they were later persuaded that the neighbors did approve of their moving in.

"We're not against the zoning regulations," explains Chester Smith. "They're what attracted us (to Sewall's Point) because they are enforced."

In seeking an injunction from the court to deny the variance, the Town Board is asking for a rehearing of the proceedings.

The minutes of the original ZBA hearing are claimed to be inadequate because they were not tape recorded. A storm during the hearing disrupted the electricity and only handwritten notes are available.

A hearing date of Nov. 21 has been set in Circuit Court with Judge L. B. Vocelle assigned to the case.

Try Jensen First is Chamber Christmas bid

BY DICK CAMPBELL

Merchants of Jensen Beach gathered Tuesday morning to get special materials and hear promotional speeches outlining the "Try Jensen Beach First" program of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce.

At the monthly forum of the Chamber, held at Hoke Hall, First Federal of Martin County in Jensen Beach, the special material kits were handed out to the businessmen, and special tape productions of radio commercials were played.

The special materials include posters and window stickers that present the message of "Try Jensen Beach First." The entire program was sponsored by Southeast Bank of Jensen Beach, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Martin County, Florida National Bank, Community Federal Savings and Loan, and First National Bank and Trust of Stuart.

A Chamber Christmas tree dominated the scene as the merchants trooped into Hoke Hall. A tape recorder filled the room with holiday music, including the radio commercials that will be used.

Following the explanation of the materials that will be used for the campaign, merchants decided to meet next Monday to endeavor to plan some special events and set business hours for the season.

All agreed that all merchants in the community should be active in the promotion of "Try Jensen Beach First."

Jensen art festival expansion is sought

Planning took a step forward for a greatly expanded Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce Art Festival this week as Dr. Richard Q. Penick, chairman of the event, reported to the Chamber board of directors meeting Monday.

"We want to try to get everyone involved," Penick said.

He reported that the Chamber committee was working with the Stuart Chamber of Commerce to endeavor to coordinate a week of events, rather than the two day exhibit of paintings. Plans include the performing arts, with concerts and dance groups performing through the week.

Penick said that the festival would be held in the early part of March, keyed to an already planning blue grass festival at Florida Institute of Technology.

He added that all art forms would be eligible to enter the two-day art show, and it would not just be limited to paintings.

"We have a good festival already, with artists coming from as far away as Maine to show their work. There is no reason that we cannot expand the festival, and make it a real week of cultural events," he said.

Meetings with the Stuart Chamber were held last summer, following the Jensen art festival, and more are planned in the near future to coordinate activities.

Art show is November 14-15

A show by members of the Art Associates of Martin County will be Friday and Saturday, November 14-15, in Cedar Pointe Plaza. This will be the first of several art shows to be given by the Art Associates during the season.

The November meeting of the Art Associates will be held in the Community Room of the First Federal Savings and Loan of Martin County at Jensen Beach on Friday, Nov. 7, at 7:30 p.m., at which time members —may receive their space for the show at the Cedar Pointe Plaza.

Wacha out, Haynes in Veteran campaigner Frank A. Wacha will step down from his seat on the Martin County Commission as a result of last week's election.

Wacha, 57, Democrat incumbent candidate for the District One seat was defeated by Republican Alex Haynes, a resident of Hutchinson Island. Wacha was seeking his fifth term as commissioner.

When polls closed on election day, the tally showed a 157-vote lead for Haynes, 70, a retired engineer and executive with Ford Motor Co. The count was 12,416 for Haynes to 12,249 for Wacha.

Hope that 2,450 absentee ballots which remained to be counted would reverse the results dimmed for Wacha when the final count moved Haynes a total 509 votes ahead.

Wacha is non-committal about any future plans to seek office.

Cromwell is named to board

Guy N. Cromwell, administrator at Martin Memorial Hospital, has been elected as a member of the board of trustees for the Florida Hospital Association. He will serve a three year term.

Cromwell was installed November 6 at the 53rd annual meeting of the Florida Hospital Association, held at the Orlando Hyatt House.

The Florida Hospital Association, a statewide organization of all hospitals, was established in 1927 to promote the welfare of the people by stimulating the orderly development of hospitals and allied institutions. The association endeavors to maintain, and improve standards of hospital service and assist member hospitals in containing costs while assuring access to quality care.

Porcelains go on exhibit

An exhibit of porcelain tile pictures by local artist Jean Arlene Walsh can be seen this month at the Martin Avenue Branch of the Florida National Bank in Stuart. Walsh was formerly a designer for Irving Burgess, known for his bird and wildlife studies in porcelain.

Bowers' photos go on display

An exhibit of eight salon color photographs by June Bowers of Stuart is currently hanging in the Cedar Pointe Plaza branch of First Federal Savings and Loan of Fort Pierce under the auspices of the Art Associates of Martin County.

"A laser was used in making the color prints to correct the color short comings of dyes in color slides. As a result, the color photos are as much as possible the same as the images in the eye of the photographer when the photos were taken," Bowers said.

The exhibit will remain at the Cedar Pointe Plaza location through November.

JBE students observe Veterans Day

Students at Jensen Beach Elementary School began Veterans Day with an outdoor assembly on a patriotic theme.

Some introductory remarks were made by 5th grade student Christopher Rizzolo on the meaning of Veterans Day and Stephanie Hudnall, also a 5th grade pupil, introduced the program speaker, the Rev. Clark Thompson, pastor of Trinity United Methodist Church.

Following a short talk by the pastor on world peace, the pupils sang a medley of patriotic songs, accompanied by Miss Dolores Daniels, pianist.

Jensen Beach Garden Club plans bazaar

The Jensen Beach Garden club will meet Nov. 19, at 1 p.m. at the Jensen Beach Womans Club on Sugar Hill. The board meeting is at 11 a.m. and the work shop on arrangements, taught by Mrs. Randolph Kitchen, is from 12 to 12:30 p.m. Bring supplies. The speaker for the day will be Robert Witty, Agriculture Agent for our area. His topic "Herbs."

Mrs. W.A. Stephenson will have a work shop on Wednesday the 12th, for the Bazaar. It is on Dec. 4th at the Community center in Jensen Beach. Anyone having items they want to donate to the Bazaar, please bring to the meeting on the 19th or leave at Mrs. Stephensons home at 4344 N.E. Skyline Dr. Jensen Beach.

The Bazaar this year is to help restore the old Community Center, plant the triangle, and send two children to camp this coming summer.

Sewall's Point to enforce the speed limit

In a concentrated campaign to insure that the streets of Sewall's Point are "the safest in the world," Francis J. Matuszewski, chief of the town's police department, has announced that Sewall's Point police officers have been directed to step-up their crusade to apprehend and cite drivers who exceed the town's speed limits.

As a reminder to motorists, Matuszewski listed maximum speeds allowable in Sewall's Point: route A1A and most of north and south Sewall's Point roads are posted at 35 miles an hour, except at the extreme south end, just north of High Point, where speed is posted at 25.

Most of South River Road is posted at 20; most of North River Road is posted at 25; and, in accordance with state law, the maximum speed on all streets where no limits are posted is automatically 30.

William E. Barton III, Sewall's Point police commissioner, added that the soon-to-be-opened bike path on west side of North Sewall's Point is expected to attract an increased number of cyclists and pedestrians to the area.

"As part of the overall responsibility of Sewall's Point police for the protection of life and property throughout the town," Barton commented, "we intend to exert every possible effort to provide a safe and pleasant place for both residents and non-residents to ride bicycles, walk and run."

Norwegian Folk Art class offered

An introduction to Norwegian folk art is offered senior citizens in a new class to begin 9 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 25, at the Jensen Lanes under the sponsorship of the Jensen Beach Community Education Center.

"Rosemaling" or flower painting is a style of decorative painting that developed in rural areas of Norway in the late 18th century. This new class will be taught over a period of eight weeks by Audrey Gundersen Shine.

Mrs. Shine studied fine arts and crafts at Central Connecticut State College and Rosemaling at the Norwegian American Museum in Decorah, Iowa.

No painting experience is needed and individual instruction will be given in basic brush strokes and blending of oils to produce the stylized flowers and scrolls that identify this art form. Mrs. Shine taught the art for 20 years in New England before moving to Florida.

Prospective students unfamiliar with Rosemaling are invited to an open house at the Shine home, 2219 NE Hastie Way, Jensen Beach, from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16, where numerous examples of the finished product will be on display. The residence is located in Fisherman's Haven, just north of Langford Park.

Winning an election is a very exciting, but humbling experience. Exciting because victory is just that — a successful, exciting, culmination of the hard work of many individuals working toward a goal — humbling because of the realization of the expectations of those who have supported and voted for you, and the responsibility of living up to those expectations.

I am totally dedicated to carrying out those responsibilities. Thank you.

Chris Dunn is Mirror's IRCC reporter

Indian River Community College freshman Chris Dunn, of Sewall's Point, was recently elected to represent Martin County in the IRCC Campus Coalition Government.

As the 1980 Martin County representative, Chris will be responsible for keeping this area informed about student activities, events, and local students' accomplishments at IRCC through a monthly column in The Mirror.

A 1980 graduate of W. T. Woodson High School in Fairfax, Va., Chris moved to Jensen Beach with her family four months ago. While in high school, she was active on the drill team, track team, gymnastics, and in Keyettes.

Letter to the editor

To The Editor

We have elected a president!

But he can't do it all! He has to have the cooperation of every man, woman and child of us. Honest in the effort to do what is necessary to overcome the errors - and most cases intentional errors made deliberately after intensive debate - intentional errors of greedy men - men who are in a position to benefit, personally, in the action they advocate.

We believe that Ronald Reagan honestly believes he is able to get the cooperation of Congress to overcome the errors of decades of government. The congress itself has been profligate in its spending habits. Some of the leadership of Congress has been replaced in this election by men who can see the trend and hopefully will do their best to reverse Congressional habits.

It won't be easy.

I say, out loud, and insistently, "It won't be easy!"

If the new people newly elected this month have the intestinal fortitude to stand up to those who have created the terrible mess our government is in a lot can be accomplished. It will be an up-hill fight all the way.

Every officer and member of the vast Washington Bureaucracy will fight intensively, perhaps underhandedly, to keep their jobs.

There is such a vast back-log of precidence behind some organizations originally intended to help people like Food Stamps, but abuses and dishonesty have ruined the original intent.

The longist of Bureaus that have out-lived their usefulness have accomplished or flubbed their purpose, but still exist.

Ill advised Bureaus, brain-children of people who had a passing fancy to accomplish a noble purpose - but the brain-child never did accomplish the original intent, yet the useless bureau lives on.

I recommend that you read the article in NOv 1980 Readers Digest, page 88. Condensed from "A Time for Action" by William Simon former Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

HOW TO GE MORE DEPRECIATION

QUESTION: A while back you indicated that an investor may be able to get a larger depreciation deduction on income property by depreciating each component of a building separately. A friend of mine has been investing in real estate for years, and he says that you may only depreciate the components on a brand new building. This opinion seems to conflict with what you have suggested. Who is right?

ANSWER: Your friend would have been right had he made that statement a couple of years ago. However, the IRS is now willing to accept component depreciation on used buildings as long as you are able to carefully substantiate the allocation among components.

This can be done by retaining the services of a professional appraiser who will appraise the property and then allocate appropriate values to the various components, such as the roof, the heating system, the plumbing, the wiring, and the shell of the property.

Once the apraiser has submitted his figures, you may then assign various estimates of the useful life of each of the components. This method will usually allow you to take greater deductions for depreciation, particularly in the early years of ownership.

The extra time and effort involved in breaking a building into components for depreciation purposes is often well justified financially. Your tax advisor should be able to assist you with this project.

Let's discuss you investment program. Call me at 334-6747, or stop by:

COPY CAMERA DEMONSTRATION by Mirror General Manager Peg Meissner also got close attention fro the budding journalists.

NEWS REPORTING was explained by Cathie Macaulay when Scouts visited the editorial edpartment.

Thank you for letting us come to your Jensen Beach Mirror. And thank you for giving us those pens and for letting us have that picture you took. And thank you for helping us learn a lot more about News papers for our Den. We liked being at the Jensen Beach Mirror and thank you for letting us meet those nice ladies and for their kindness telling us what they were to do.

Love, Robert Emmons.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR signed "Love" isn't an everyday occurence, but neither is a visit from a Cub Scout den. The Mirror loves you too, Robert, and we were happy to oblige.

TYPESETTING his own name occupies Pat McNamara's attention as well as Todd Emmons's.

Cub Scouts visit The Mirror

Publishers and staff of The Cub Scout Gazette were recent vicitors at The Mirror's offices to learn how a weekly newspaper is put together.

The Gazette was a project of Den 3 of Cub Scout Pack 801 with the boys writing the articles for their one-time-only issue of eight pages.

With the help of their den leader Margaret Emmons as editor-in-chief, Cub Scouts Arthur Emmons, Ran Whittle, Page Whittle, Robert Emmons, Billy Weir and Pat McNamara compiled a weather report, a sports column, and Scouting news, and added some puzzles and advertisements for an all-round mimeographed first and last edition.

At The Mirror offices, the Scouts watched type being set and got to set their own names in type, too. They visited the editorial and advertising departments and learned how a newspaper is published.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

As of today, January 1, 1981, you can earn interest on your checking account. That's right, your checking account can earn interest just like your savings account has been doing for years. It's a revolution in banking.

You may very well be reading the above headline in January. Banking regulations are changing. One change, effective the first of the year, will be the introduction of checking accounts that pay interest. They will be called now accounts. N.O.W. for negotiable order of withdrawal.

The law presently prohibits banks in Florida from paying interest on checking accounts until January first. But First National can show you how to get similar benefits right now, with a First National PRE-NOW ACCOUNT.

We'll show you how to earn interest, right now, on funds normally idle in your checking account. We'll show you how to enjoy the convenience of checking and at the same time obtain the maximum earning power from your savings. We'll show you how to automatically transfer money from savings to checking. All right now . . . without going to the bank or making any phone calls.

We'll show you how to do all of this when you ask about First National's PRE-NOW ACCOUNT. But do it right now.

Gracious Living Wing opens at Elliott Museum

ACKNOWLEDGMENT of volunteers who gave thousands of hours of their time and tallents to create the wing is displayed by Janet Hutchinson.

Story and Photos by Ailsa Dewing

If you've ever wondered what a horsehair parlor suite looked like, how a formal dining room was furnished during the Roaring Twenties, or what sort of divan an Oriental opium den provided, the newly opened Gracious LIving Wing at the Elliott Museum is the pace to visit.

Although the recently refurbished wing does not officially open until Friday, visitors are already being welcomed to view the exhibits of scenes from the past, most of the antiques from the Harmon P. Elliott collection now in the care of the Martin County Historical Society.

The completed wing is the result of thousands of hours of volunteer work by Historical Society members, Director Janet Hutchinson points out.

Some 28 volunteers began getting ready for the opening a little more than two months ago doing all the needed carpentry, painting and sewing - including the period costumes worn by mannequins who people the scenes. Special mention for the costuming goes to Helena Waller and Jane Dickerson who repaired and renovated timeworn gowns and created new ones as needed.

Although much of the collecting was done by Harmon Elliott including the contents of a Winston-Salem museum - and has been in storage awaiting space to be set up, many items were donated by Martin County residents from their own collections.

Whatever area of memorabilia appeals to the historical buff, there are examples to be seen in the Gracious Living Wing.

The entrance to the wing is flanked by glass shelves displaying Royal Dalton china figurines collected by Dr. Walter H. Siehling. The oriental collection, which includes an opium den bed and smoking equipment, was the gift of Dr. Elvin H. Kilhefier.

Needlepoint enthusiasts will be awed by the designs created by Gordon Brewer and donated by George Wiens who also started the Historical Society's building fund.

Many Historical Society members will get their first glimpse of the finished wing Friday afternoon during a fund-raising cocktail party. And members and guests will enjoy their annual treat at the old-fashioned ice cream parlor which opens each year for the event.

And Anne Hutchinson, director of the Historical Society and its two museums, will be on hand in her bustled green gown, to offer background information and share her enthusiasm over the museum's most recent accomplishments.

THE SINGING MASTER didn't need spectacles to see this oversize print songbook, one of the many displays in the music room. Also shown is a Swiss clock and music box housed in an intricately carved chalet.

ATTIC COLLECTION includes old steamer trunks, a rocking horse and the "E for Effort" award of World War Two given to Harmon Elliott for the improved firing pin he designed for the Browning rifle.

AFTERNOON IN THE PARK includes an old-time photographer and the fashionable lady out for a stroll with a wicker baby carriage.

GRANDMOTHER'S TOYS and grandfather's too, fill the toyroom. Janet Hutchinson poses with a cast iron cooking stove and a miniature sewing machine that were popular with little girls early in the century.

ORIGINAL NEEDLEPOINT patterns created by Gordon Brewer were donated by George Wiens. The patterns grace 17 pieces of furniture as well as rugs and wall hangings, one a five-foot long tapestry-like scene. Shown is a collection of needlepoint sofa pillows.

We salute our veterans

Welcome intermission

Mourn me not when I am gone...
In the dawning, mourn me never.
Revel as I travel on
To the music of forever.
Hoist a toast, and lift a cheer...
Sing a song and dance a measure.
Know it well, while I've been here
I have relished every pleasure...
I have ushered morningin...
Lifted fog from off the sea...
Seen the moon through thick and thin...
Love the sun as it loved me...
Had affairs with wind and rain...
Waltzed along the summer breeze...
Known the surfeit after pain...
Taking solace from the trees...
I've stored bursting sacks of love
In the attic of my heart...
I've paid the tax of love,
Ruing not the bitter part.
Yes, my pets, forget the crying.
Rich my life, and gaily dressed.
When I leave you, I'll be dying
Just to get a little rest.

This poem was written two years ago, and held for use as Sally Latham's final column, at her request.

The challenge

Martin County will have an entirely new face on the governing body next week. There will be a new face from the north and south county area.

Alex Haynes, retired engineer, replaces 16-year veteran FrankWacha on the commission for the Jensen Beach area. In the south county area, Sherri King replaces Bud Bagwell as county commissioner.

The makeup of the commission is now in a state of flux, with no real idea of the direction it will take. The challenge is in the hands of the new commission.

Maggie Hurchalla and Tom Higgins seem to be the dominant forces on what is left of the old commission. Both have worked together and apart on issues in the past. John Holf is an unknown factor, having survived a strong challenge in seeking reelection.

The glittering generalities of the candidates in the election give way to the hard realities of dealing with a growing county. The "I promise" of the campaign gives way to deliveries expected by the voters.

Will Martin County gain the previous reputation of the years when investment capital refused any request for help? Will investors again look shocked when offered an opportunity in Martin County? This is the legacy of the past, experienced by persons interested in doing a reasonable job in the county for a reasonable return on their investment. We do not wish to see that in the future.

The people wait to see what direction this commission will take.

Commissioner Wacha

After sixteen years of service on the county commission, and many more years of community service, Frank Wacha has lost his District One commission seat.

Next Tuesday, as the new commission is seated, Wacha will step down from a lifetime of community service, going back to the 1940's.

He should not be allowed to step down without some words of his accomplishments, though much was made of them during the hard-fought election campaign.

The Mirror has been working for twenty years for the betterment of our communities. At no time have we found Wacha less enthusiastic about projects that benefit the good of the community than The Mirror.

Every request has been answered, even those that we know could not be solved. Wacha was in the thick of improving the facilities that make life more pleasant for the people of the diestrict. Perhaps, that was one of his faults...he took care of his district.

Wacha was in the forefront of the development of Langford Park, and the expansion of our lighting system. He was pioneering the water system for the north county area, and was instrumental in getting South Savanna Road completed. He got the tolls removed from the bridges, and masterminded the philosophy that if the people would donate the needed rights of way for roads and bike paths, the county would have more money for construction.

A fiscal conservative, Frank Wacha did a job that made Martin County a sound financial base for people and industry.

We will miss Frank Wacha on the commission. He leaves some mighty big shoes to fill.

Not really good, but something

Problems with the intersection of A-1-A and the Jensen Causeway Road on Hutchinson Island have brought a response from the Florida Department of Transportation. The response is not quite what was hoped for, but it is a response, and it is a partial solution to the problem.

The DOT offers that the limited right-of-way owned by Martin County on the eastbound causeway road does not permit left and right turn storage lanes, which would lessen the traffic backup on the road.

In addition, environmental concerns about the mangroves, Australian Pines and Florida Holly "make the widening of the road less practical.

Thus, the DOT has the suggestion that the westbound traffic from the beach area be closed off would at least alleviate the problem of facing traffic exiting from the beach park area to cross A-1-A and head west to Jensen Beach.

Such traffic would have to exit the park on the south end of the county park land and take its turn trying to get onto the causeway road.

The DOT has suggested that the county close the north exit from the park, or at least allow only traffic entering the partk to proceed.

It is not what we wanted. It is not an answer to the problem, which lies in traffic turning from the causeway road onto A-1-A in the face of heavy traffic on that road.

But, it is a solution to some of the traffic. And, with the DOT as slow as it is in solving problems, the Martin County Commission should jump at the chance to get a little bit of solution.

She called me 'Boss'

We kept her desk all cluttered up with newspapers, a few books, telephone directories and scraps of paper, but they were artificial stage props, and too neatly in disarray.

The chair, the typewriter, her nameplate under her picture on the wall, were all in place for these past few months.

Toward the end, Sally Latham would only be able to make it in to the office for an hour or so, her powerful mind losing the battle with a body that was slowly becoming too weak to handle the words that wanted to come out on paper.

I refused to assign someone to the desk, because if Sally was able to make it in, I wanted her to have her place in the center of the news room, in the center of the action.

I guess that everyone knew the end was near. We didn't get a column from Sally last week. It is the first time that Sally missed since she came to The Mirror.

No matter what, Sally had a column ready by Tuesday. Sometimes she would be too weak to type, and would dictate to her daughter for retyping. No matter how weak her body, her brilliant mind would be just as sharp and bright as she was before the illness.

Sally discovered she had cancer two years ago. She gave me her will, and a poem she had written, and asked me if she could work to the end. She was practical, matter-of-fact, and knew just what was happening and what she wanted to do.

She wanted to work.

She lived as she worked, in the midst of a mess. I would protest that I couldn't find anything on that desk, piled high with papers, used Kleenex, cigarette butts and candy wrappers. She would say, "Now, Boss, I know where everything is. I'll find it for you."

The words that came from her typewriter were of joy and hope. In a short time she was a legend in our midst. Over these past two years the hope and joy shown through her pain.

When the staff moved her to her cottage on the Indian River, she wrote:

"I'm hard put to list my roster of pixies. I know it's topped with my personal angel Peggy Meissner, chief leprechaun organizer . . . Peggy is a genius . . . she and her son Bill hopping in every direction.

"Rick Campbell was running boxes, while staffer Bob Fryer was van man deluxe. And no one can top Rose Washburn when it comes to an ice box job. She not only strippedthe refrig at the old apartment, she went out and replaced everything with new.

"From Boss Dick and Salli Campbell there were flutters of angel wings at The Mirror.

"From the moment I made the happy choice of moving to Jensen, I have found love. But I had no concept of to what extent it could exist, nor how profoundly it could manifest itself. Love is doing for others, and I only hope that I may get well and live long enough to show my undying thanks."

I cannot think of the end, but thank God it came swiftly. Sally would never be able to live without writing that beautiful prose. I can think of the years she gave us at The Mirror, and of the many, many events that are capsules of time, each a bright memory.

When Sally walked into a room, she made an entrance that could only be described as queenly. Her flowing gowns and gigantic earrings were a part of the regal show.

My memories are of the compassion, humor, and consuming love of life that Sally gave to all. Knowing her was knowing a great newspaperwoman.

One of our favorite gambits was my yelling through the wall each week, "Latham, have you got your column in?" She would say, "Don't worry, Boss. I'll make the Tuesday deadline."

Sally Latham died Tuesday morning at 3 a.m. She made her last deadline.

$900 for an ashtray

The column last week on the 50-cent picture frame that cost me $41.50 prompted a phone call from Betty Drinkard who was reminded of the ashtray she bought for $2.49 that parleyed into a $900 renovation.

It all began, says Betty, when she found a $5 ashtray on sale for $2.49 and just the right size to hide a large scar burned on a table.

When she put the ashtray in place, she noted the wall behind it had a dirty mark on it and she tried to sponge it off. But you know how that goes — an ever-widening circle of clean that only makes the rest of the wall look dirtier.

Betty decided to paint the wall. She found the paint to match — except it turned out to be semi-gloss. At that point her brother took over and had to apply two coats of flat to cover the shiny living room wall.

But then that wall didn't match the other three so they had to be painted, too.

Meanwhile, Betty made herself useful with a can of stain, hoping to cover the burn mark. Instead, she covered the beige rug when she tipped over the can of stain.

As the cash register bells faded away they were sounding out $902.49. Not what you'd call a bargain price for an ashtray.

Anybody else want to top these?

About every two weeks I drive back to the 'glades to check on things at the old mobile homestead. There's a lot of thinking time between Stuart and Port Mayaca since the scenery tends to repeat itself for 30 miles.

Anyway, I came to the conclusion driving back Sunday that anyone in Florida who's never lived or spent time around the south end of the big lake has missed a slice of Florida that's beyond compare.

First of all there are the 'glades people themselves. I look on the old-timers with awe. Their tales about hacking out a living back in the '20s and '30s can match any tales of the wild west of the 19th century.

Lake Harbor and Moore Haven were two-fisted settlements right up to World War Two. It was only in the '30s that Lake Harbor got electricity. And by then the dike was built and it wasn't a lake harbor any more.

And many's the frail, elderly lady who survived the hurricane of '28 hanging from the roof rafters and can recall funny anecdotes faster than the sad stories that abound, particularly in the months of hardship afterwards. Their pink velvet exteriors hide backbones of stainless steel.

In the 'glades, the expression "good ole boy" is a term of endearment, even if elsewhere it's derogatory.

When I pass the Port Mayaca cemeteries I wonder whether other passers-by wonder about such a small community having two cemeteries. Or do they know that there are no cemeteries between Clewiston and Port Mayaca because the muckiands are not hospitable to underground burial?

Belle Glade, for example, got rotten press on a network television program last fall that chose to air only part of the story about substandard housing — the part that was sensational. There are many folks in Belle Glade who'll tell you that that city's biggest problem is being in Palm Beach County. The problems of West Palm Beach and Lake Worth aren't quite the same as the problems of farm workers in South Bay and Belle Glade. Many of the humane services the western end of the county needs are based in WPB and transported to the 'glades by mobile units once a week.

Pahokee is a favorite city of mine — full of feisty, self-sustaining folks. For years, election day was old-home day with everybody spending the day on the lawn of the fire station where the city's only polling place is.

Last year the folks had to move off the lawn to comply with the state law on how far back the crowd must be. It only took Pahokee a month to find out that a city statute overrides the state law and by the next election day Pahokee had a new city law and everybody back hanging 'round the fire station.

In October, I guess it was, Clewiston and LaBelle were saddened by the death of longtime Hendry Sheriff Earl Dyess — allegedly stabbed to death by a teenager. The sheriff's son, a part-time deputy, was named to fill the unexpired term of his father. Meanwhile, another deputy filed as a write-in candidate. Last week, Hendry County voted in a new sheriff — the write-in candidate who'd served eight years as deputy, defeating both the late sheriff's son and the other candidate on the ballot.

At this time of year the 'glades comes to life. The sugar mills are grinding and the smoke of burning cane fields is all around. The corn is only knee-high but the lettuce and other short-term growing vegetables will soon be ready for harvesting. The avocadoes are coming to an end but the grapefruit and oranges are bursting yellow and orange. There's never a poor crop of mosquitoes.

And the bass are getting ready to evade, if possible, the fishermen who'll converge on the lake all next week for the annual bass tournament.

The good lord willing it'll be a good year for cane and crops and fishing. But come hell or high water — and sometimes hell is high water if you live around the lake — the sons and daughters of the 'glades pioneers will make it through and live to tell about it and even find a few laughs among the tears.

Praise be-- Oct's. over

Whew! I finally (knock wood) made it through October.

For other people, October is a fun month. Kids in school are just getting happy about their classes and classmates, most of all their teachers.

Color nuts gleefully swarm to the Smoky Mountains in Tennessee or the Carolinas to wallow in the glory of the leaves as they turn to fiery reds, tawny oranges or golden yellows.

Foresighted folk begin stalking the stores for Christmas presents, over counters already suggestively bedecked in Santas, candy canes and tinsel.

But for me, October has been a month to be dreaded. Everything rotten that ever happened to me happened in October.

I was too young to be aware of the date, but it must have been in October that, smart kid I was at age two, I rocked my playpen off the front porch and clipped a muscle in my left eye. It hasn't been able to do a thing by itself since.

Also as a little tyke, in October I was still standing on the Windsor bench in the dining room window, squawling my head off because sister Ruth Anne could go to school and I couldn't. By November my pensions had subsided and substituted for such pastimes as drawing pictures in crayon on the new wall paper in the living room and autographing all the books in our library. But October was awful.

In my teens, and freshly moved to St. Petersburg, it was in October that this lately-come northerner nearly fought the War Between the States across a history classroom, with a young blond Southern Gentleman name of Charles E. Lee. From point on, I was branded with the of Least Liked Student in the - I admit I have boo-boos on my face in lots of other gremlins have been totall in stalking my path the Like the August when Date of My Life and gone from Lake Ke home in New York, in Wellsboro, Pa. Then, the night came the rains. N but rain in bucke tubs. The downrus the erstwhile e arbored hills wash every gully betwee the home of Importa to say, I cursed the for weeks to come.

But back to October. inside me wasn't workin knew. So I took my well-known physician in

Shut my mouth

A few months back, after I'd trotted along behind bossman Dick Campbell when he gave a speech for the St. Lucie County Republican Club, I asked him for his notes which I'd been counting on to write the follow-up story on what he'd said.

After all, I'd been figuring, if you can't get that kind of an inside track from your own boss, where can you get it? So I hadn't registered a thing except in my frequently faulty memory bank.

"What notes?" he asked me.

Well, boss, I replied, if you didn't have notes, it must have been a speech you'd given before, because you did it so smoothly.

He assured me he hadn't the foggiest idea of what he talked about.

I bumbled glumly through my report, sure he was lying to teach me a lesson about note-taking. As my ex-son-in-law used to philosophize, "Don't even trust your own mother..."

I was still believing, my otherwise-kindly employer had deliberately botched me up until last week, when I found myself in much the same position—facing a crowd of women without a note to my name.

I had been weaseled into a situation by my dear friend Vera Abbott, who some weeks back asked me if I'd give a little talk on newspapering to her "group." Thinking she was talking about a little koffee-klatch club of maybe a half-dozen or so, I absent-mindedly said fine, and promptly forgot about it. After all, any friend of Vera's had to be a friend of mine.

It was only the day before I was due with my "little talk," that I began to panic. That was the first time I learned that the "group" was the formidable Gab'n'Eatas, the exclusive Port St. Lucie organization that limits its membership to 50, and that is such a force for community good.

All the years I worked as woman's editor for The News Tribune, I'd been talking about the GnAs in print, and was well aware of their status in the mushrooming PSL municipality. Wow, Sal, I says to me, you'd better get your head together for this one.

Trouble was, I was just recovering from the current bread of flu making the rounds, and one of its attributes was to stuff your head with an inferior grade of cotton batting. I had absolutely no mind left to work with. I was left alone, adrift with my panic.

Come the fateful morning, I snatched out a handful of newspapers of varying vintage out of my frayed stack of memorabilia and rushed off to meet my fate. As I approached the home of Wanda and Dick Lundin where the meeting was being held, my already-flu-tumbled tummy began doing a double quenas: I was about to be a Speaker — a doom worse than thumbscrews on the rack.

My mind went flipping back to that awful morning, in the 60's, when Shelley Cox, then program chairman

A helluva party

It was one hell of a party and I concluded long before Prince Charming whisked me off at the witching hour that Nick Medalis and I share the most marvelous collection of friends south of the North Pole.

I never in my life expected so many people to show up at Thursday's bash at the Hilltop House, hoisted by Nick, ...ise money for the Sally Latham

Then he was rushing about, organizing the next act, while either dear boss Dick Campbell or Dave Woodcock took a stint at the microphone. Lenny awoke the next morning, Hilde tells me, with a nasty case of laryngitis, but then, thank goodness for friends, was available for some re-hashing himself on Sunday.

By mid-day in the mid-glow of friends greeting friends the heckling began. The auction was going great when Dick Campbell was offered to perform. I'm proud to say that Dick's renditions of "Ace In The Hole" and "Little Nell" were unforgettable. Then, former boss, Marvin DeBolt, publisher of The News Tribune, and co-with Dick, trustees of the Sally Latham Fund, got into the spirit and the act and placed a similar bet that Mirror advertising manager Peg Meissner wouldn't carry a tune. Marvin cheerfully lost. The Sally Latham Fund won. It was that kind of day. Beautiful.

It is nice feeling, beautiful. And of course my friend Marg Paris once again decided Sally should be elegant for the occasion and the concoction of peach chiffon she came up with prompted the envious remark, "What a way to go."

Marg herself took the stage at one point during the festivities and

Pixies take over

Do you know that there are really fairies?

I do. I have proof. Over the weekend, when I was feeling extremely unfit, and totally incapable of lifting a finger to do a thing on my own, a whole team of pixies literally transferred all my worldly goods from one location to another, using backbreaking man-and-woman power to transport all my wealth of junk four miles up the drive to my new little pad.

The clan of pixies included the whole staff of the Mirror and heaven knows who else — I stopped counting as I saw faces young, not-so-young come and go, hoisting heavy boxes, suitcases, chairs, sofas, lamps and general junk. When it was all done, with hardly a finger lifted by me, the apartment I moved out of was spotless, and I am now left to find things, a task I'm always faced with under any circumstances. I can't find a safety pin if it's protruding from my big toe.

I'm hard put to start listing my roster of pixies. I know it's topped with my personal angel Peggy Meissner, chief leprechaun organizer. Without her, nothing would have been done—Peggy is a genius—she had her son Bill hopping in every direction, and his pretty little girl friend turned drayman right along with him.

Rick Campbell was running boxes, while staffer Bob Fryer was van man deluxe. And no one can top Rose Washburn, when it comes to an ice box job—She not only stripped the refrig at the old apartment, she went out and replaced everything with new.

From Boss Dick and Sally Campbell there were flutters of angel's wings, at the Mirror. From the moment I made the happy choice of moving to Jensen, I have found love. But I had no concept of to what extent it could exist, nor how profoundly it could manifest itself. Love is doing for others, and I only hope I may get well and live long enough to show my undying thanks.

The happiness over my departure from the Whistle-Stop Apartments had nothing to do with my gratitude with being there in the first place. When you're ousted and have no place to go, slam bang in the middle of the season, you do find yourself a trifle uncomfortable about it. The sleeping gets a little rough down on the beach. But I should have known I'd have no problem—not with Marg Paris on my side.

"Sally needs an apartment? We'll see about that," says Marg.

Next morning, Marg was out bright and early, paper in hand and knocking on doors. She hit a home run with her first contact—a little efficiency by the railroad tracks—a straight roll down the hill from The Mirror office.

I couldn't have found myself with a nicer landlord and lady—Joe and Dorothy Luciano. Joe, our amiable Chief of the Fire Department, had been my friend since my arrival in town, and Dorothy, equally nice, shares with me my love of antiquities (in fact my security was paid in antiques—ones I hated to part with, but now in the possession of one of the

AARP Notes

BY ERNIE CURWEN

There was a weary, played out bunch of seniors at their usual 'haunts' last week; fed-up with politics and the hostage release announcements, so they reverted back to the 'old standbies' of rampant inflation and soaring health costs, as main items of conversation. It went about like this, as a couple of new points were brought to bear.

BY ERNIE CURWEN
Tel. 334-0756

"I could hardly believe it," piped-up Salty Capt. Joe, who'd just returned from a cruise and wasn't abreast with latest discussions, "why it was just one day after election, mind you, one day; and the 'repubs' were hedging on balanced budget, saying they didn't mean 1980 or 81, but by end of the 4-year term. Sounds like the same old story, don't it?"

"You weren't around just before election, I guess," Lil' Imogene explains, "it was the talk of the town, that we didn't have much to choose from, but any change would be probably better than what we had. So, change we got . . . back to the same ol' thing!"

Mable had just parked her big gas guzzler, towering over Lil' Imogene's sub-min and got out with Mildred to join the group, when Gladys, said, "Not too long ago we were reading about Senator Stone's idea of having a mandatory balanced budget at 20 percent of the GNP (Gross National Product). I thought that idea had a lot of merit."

"Ya, Ya," and a thump-thump of Grumpy Pete's cane, gave him the attention he needed, to continue, "that idea disappeared awful quick and so did Senator Stone. The idea wasn't politically sound, that is it would tie the hands of elected officials and that they won't permit, at all. But, I still think it would be good business practice' to set a budget at a fixed percentage of total income. That's what they tell us to do, isn't it. They say '25 percent of income must be set aside for housing (as an example). Well, why not 20 percent of the GNP set aside to run the national government; and no more, what's wrong with that, and in case of "

Mildred who has a good word for all, interrupted, "Pete, even if it is the best of ideas, it has to have a good strong sponsor to get it off the ground. Maybe some of our senior, organizations could push it?"

Here's an idea," contributes Millie, the letter writer, "You know there is going to be a White House Conference on Aging, next November and they are accepting ideas for their agenda. Certainly controlling inflation is one of the most important subjects affecting the Older American on a fixed income. A letter I wrote to Senator Chiles on 1960 retirees had been referred to them, according to a letter I just received from Jerome R. Waldie, executive director of the conference at 330 Independence Ave., SW, Washington D.C. 20201. It looks as though, if we let them know our problems out here in the 'boon-docks,' they might look into them. Why don't you all write him," concludes Mildred, "at least he'll know what's bothering us."

The 'Vial-of-Life' project is picking up a head of steam with many volunteers and contributors stepping forth, but many, many more are needed as it is a huge undertaking. Pearl Wyse, AARP representative on the Red Cross AARP joint committee, says that they plan to put a vial of medical information for every person in Martin County in their refrigerator and a 'decal' saying so on a front window. So, those who can volunteer some time or funds please call Pearl Wyse 334-5806.

Don't forget your FREE Flu Shot if you are 65 or over, or over 55 with chronic illness. Every Friday, 1 to 4 p.m. at the old post office, E. 7th St., Stuart. The Martin County Health Dept. nurses are quick, courteous and painless, as your reporter knows from getting his last week.

CHAPTER EVENTS

Last Thursday, Nov. 6, was regular AARP picnic and get out the bulletin day, with the usual crowd assembling, blissfully unaware of the problems impending. First, Business Manager Al Tucker had a heart attack early in the morning and was in the intensive care unit; second Circulation Manager Mildred Capanna had a medical emergency with her husband, Fred, and couldn't deliver the addressing equipment; third, Ernie Curwen, handy fellow that fills-in when needed, was in the hospital for minor surgery. Well, all you members who received your bulletins, practically on time, know that they somehow 'coped.' President John Vance and Editor Boyd Smith got together at Mildred Capanna's the next morning and by the sweat of a few brows got the bulletins to the post office on time. They all deserve a big 'thanks' and we are glad to report that Al Tucker is on the road back to business (manager) as usual.

Now that I have my copy of the bulletin, I would like to call your attention to a very worth while item. The chapter does have a one source of information 'spot,' which isn't used as much as it should. Margret McCuen is anxious to help the chapter as much as she can, but because of disability, is confined to telephone work. Years ago, it was set up that she would be given all information on chapter doings, and in turn would be glad to pass on that information to others.

Some years it worked out pretty well, and others it was forgotten completely. It seems most of the members have someone they know or phone number they remember, and used that, generally get needed information, that in some cases might not be 'the latest.' So, it is urged that all members use Margret's service 546-5421 (not toll) to get the latest and correct info. (Still OK to call Ernie C. when other means fail.)

There is no need to comment on the weather this week, it speaks for itself, and says, "Perfect." Even so, some of the 'snow birds' remarked that they wished it would cool off a bit so they could get their home cleaned-up and straightened-out without frequent stops to 'mop-their-brows.'

Assisted by Peg Ray and Ginny Stratford

Seventy four persons attended the Pention Church Sunday with Rev. Chuck Thompson officiating. Robert Horton did the lay services and Dot Brink on the organ. It was a beautiful day; everyone is welcome to come at 9:45 a.m.

The bingo started Friday night, attracting 82 players to enjoy the fun. Chaired by Dick Nourse, assisted by Frank Powers. The personnel this year will be changed quite often to enable all who wish to help can. Sonny Gramstorff, Bill Henrichsen, Ross Burgess, Bob Black were the callers. Mr. & Mrs. Carl Jackson were the card clearance on the floor. Mildred Henrichsen took the coffee & cookies serving. Six surprise gifts were given through the night to happy winners. An oddity occurred, the first time to ever play bingo. Mrs Winnie Powers won a game; that is luck. The cover all game to end the night's playing. Martha Lewis won 1st, and Lois Hopkins was 2nd. More fun next Friday; do come

Sam and Nina Wooten chaired Holiday Out's first social hour of the season. To greet them when arriving were two colorful decorated tables laden with hors d'oeuvres. Some 75 persons enjoyed. Al Ray did as usual a grand job as master of ceremonies. With the entertainment furnished by Geo Bares and Harry Smith on the accordion & organ, with Al Ray assisting. Many of the older Holiday Out owners joined us in the singing and dancing. A list of credit can be given to the committee of art and Jennie Howatt, Steve & Edith Pounton & Ethel Caught.

Bowling for fun on Thursday at Jensen Lanes resulted in the family of Baxter as follows: high single & 3 game total for women was Rusty Baxter with 158,435, the same for Ken Baxter for men with 180,477.

So n So Club met on Thursday at the Recreation Hall with 15 attending. Ruth Arbo led the meeting with the help of Catty Ullmann. Millie Pisz and Catty Ullmann served delicious refreshments. Lena Black's sister in law was a guest and Lena gave the announcements.

The dance committee had a meeting on the Al Ray's patio on Monday, Nov 3. The first dance of the season will be held Nov. 20 with Fred Rodes orchestra. Tickets will go on sale Tuesday, Nov. 18 at the upper rec hall, 10 to 12 a.m.

Holiday Out's mixed bowling team that bowls on Wed nights, was good enough to win three points. They tied for first place in the standings.

Vince and Ginny Stratford took a few days vacation and visited Disney World. They were fortunate to be able to stay at Fort Wilderness. Vince's sister and brother in law Winnie and Frank Powers went with them. After three days they went on to Ocala National Forest, where they met Hal and Maureen Holmes.

Mr. & Mrs. Drysdale's new home at the Dolphin Bay apartments had artful sounds coming from it Sunday night. Cliff & Harriet Byers and Cecil & Beryle Roy added to the happy sounds.

Time to sign up for the first covered dish to be on Nov. 13 at the lower rec hall.

Bucky & Dottie Fryer had a Halloween celebration. Every one had to be masked.

Dottie & Jack Smith entertained Cliff & Harriet Byers, with a cocktail party. The Byer's friends all hated to see them leave for St. Louis, and will be looking forward to their return in January. Ethel & Bob Shilhorn made the Byers a farewell dinner and finished the evening with a game of bridge.

Jack Smiths went to their daughter Barbara's new restaurant and found their son-in-law, Gus, is quite a chef. Ask Dottie about the location.

We are sorry to see Vern May with a neck collar on, after a car accident on the causeway bridge. He was a passenger in a car driven by Bob Young and Sonny Gramstorff was a passenger in the front seat, neither were hurt. Vern was in the rear seat. They were hit in the rear, necessitating Vern to be taken to hospital emergency for treatment.

Peg and Al Ray enjoyed their oldest daughter for-the-weekend. Robin said the people sure don't look their age and can't wait until she retires if she can have a good time like the folks in H.Out. The Ray's other granddaughter Allyson came Saturday night with a friend & all enjoyed the social hour, followed with a game of dominoes.

HOPE FOR HEALTH
Keys to Good Health Naturally

By
Dr. Jack L. Webb

One of the most common questions people ask themselves is when do I really need to consult a doctor for my back ache?

The following check list represents a good guideline.

When the backache persists or worsens instead of getting better.

When you have more than one painful attack in a year.

When it doesn't improve with a day of rest.

When you have numbness or tingling in your arm or leg.

When your backaches increase in frequency or severity.

When you have other symptoms with your backache, such as urinary problems, swelling or fever.

When pain interferes with your sleeping.

When you are injured at work.

When you are involved in an automobile accident, or other accident.

50 attend Veterans Day observance

Three generations of Americans who've served this country in time of war and those who've served by waiting, assembled Tuesday morning to "honor those who made the ultimate sacrifice and the spirit of those who were willing to make it," in the words of the keynote speaker.

Some 150 attended the annual Veterans Day observance which was hosted this year by the Jensen Beach Veterans of World War I and its Auxiliary.

The indoor service, at which 15 veterans organizations were represented, was held at the Jensen Beach Women's Association clubhouse on Sugar Hill Road.

The address was given by Kenneth E. Taft, Martin County Veterans Service Officer, who commented, "we don't see many Vietnam vets here today," and compared the alienation felt by returning soldiers from Vietnam with those from World War I.

There were four million veterans, including 400,000 disabled men, who returned after the first war, he said. "And there was no Veterans Administration, GI Bill, bonus, rehabilitation, veterans' hospitals or even compensation for disabilities," he remarked.

They fought to organize the veterans board which became the VA, according to Taft, so that when the 16 million World War II veterans returned "selling apples on the street and marches on Washington were not repeated."

Calling on his listeners to keep faith with the veterans, Taft summed up his remarks by noting that if we are guilty of gross ingratitude to the veterans, we will have reached the low point in moral integrity."

Several World War One veterans attended including Thomas Rosser, 85, who sang, "My Buddy," and S. Plummer Elliott, who received a Diamond Jubilee Certificate from American Legion Post 126 Commander Tom Flannigan for more than 60 years as a Legion member.

Two veterans also honored for 60 years of Legion membership, Norman Ellis and John C. Staab, were unable to attend.

Also in the audience was George Haig, a World War One veteran who said he attended the organizational meeting of the Legion held in St. Louis, Mo.

Three selections were sung by the Martin County High School choral group under the direction of Ronald Corbin and the audience gave the singers a standing ovation for their performance of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Veterans organizations participating included the Jensen Beach Veterans and Auxiliary of World War I, the Jensen Beach and Stuart American Legion Posts and Auxiliaries, Veterans of Foreign Wars and their Auxiliaries from Jensen Beach, Stuart, Hobe Sound and Salerno, Disabled American Veterans and Auxiliary from Stuart and the Martin County Veterans Council.

MEMORIES OF THE GREAT WAR remain with George Haig, 88, who served in the medical corps. Haig best recalls the influenza epidemic of 1917 when 13,000 cases of 'flu broke out at Camp Upton, an embarkation point, and 900 soldiers died before they went to war. (Photo by Ailsa Dewing)

Martin O.R. will hold open house

In observance of Operating Room Nurse Day, to be noted nationally Friday, Nov. 14, the operating room nurses at Martin Memorial Hospital invite the public to an open house in the operating room on Saturday, Nov. 15.

A tour of the holding area, two operating rooms, and the recovery room, will be given. Instruments and some of the special equipment used for various types of surgery will be on display. Surgical attire will be worn by all registered nurses participating.

The purpose of the open house is to give the public an opportunity to become more aware of operating room procedure, and the nursing care given to the patient by the operating room nurse. It is hoped that the program will make it a little easier for anyone who is facing surgery in the near or distant future to know the nursing care procedure and what the O.R. is really like.

The program is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. All ages are welcome.

Linda Gottron, R.N., the president of the Treasure Coast Chapter of the Association of Operating Room Nurses is coordinating the program.

Area fishing's a paradise alongside Tidewater, Virginia

BY DICK LUNDIN

TIDEWATER VIRGINIA around Hampton and Newport News, Virginia, between the James and York Rivers and cradled above storied Hampton Roads where the Monitor and Merrimac fought their 1862 ironclad duel at the end of the age of wooden warships, offers little to compare with Treasure Coast fishing.

I had forgotten the lean pickings those who fish the waters of Tidewater Virginia really have, after 14 years away from them. There's water, water everywhere, to quote old Samuel, but it just isn't full of fish.

Last Sunday, while visiting in Hampton I took my grandson, Chris, 12, out fishing. He had a brand new rod and reel we had given him for Christmas and was itching to use it. So, after lunch, we drove west on Hampton's Mercury Boulevard to the James River Bridge and the Newport News fishing pier on the James.

The state had left the 3,000-foot long east span of the old James River Bridge in place and it is now a bridge fishing concession. For two dollars you can fish it for 24 hours.

Unfortunately, like most places for anglers in the area — the Engineer Pier at Fort Monroe, the pier at Grandview and the one at Buckroe — it's one thing to have a pier, it's another to find fish there.

Bottom fishermen in the area can look for small flounder, tautog, croakers, weakfish and Norfolk spot in the summer months, but after September the large spot and croakers are gone, and the flounder are scarce. By that time, for the balance of the winter, the main quarry is the rockfish (striped bass). The rockfish arrive in late November and can be taken there at the bridge all winter long, but that's some mighty cold fishing, believe you me. The best rockfish action seems to coincide with the coldest weather. Anglers will bring along heaters, hot coffee, and wear long underwear and parkas as they brave the wintry winds in search of big stripers lurking under the pier (bridge).

On Sunday I walked the length of the long pier several times to see how the others were doing. All I saw in the four hours that Chris fished there with bloodworms and cut bait were buckets with up to two dozen tiny 4- to 7-inch spot and two or three little tailor bluss no longer than 10 inches. One veteran said that on a high tide you might catch an occasional one to two-pound weakfish or three or four bluefish to perhaps two pounds.

That's fishing? Not Treasure Coast style. Great pouch dwarf those spot, and no self respecting Jensen Beach fisherman would keep bluss like they were bucketing on the pier at Newport News on Sunday.

They say the "grass is always greener on the other side," but it doesn't wash when you're comparing what we have down here against what they have up there. It's no contest. You never had it so good!

As I've said so often in the past 14 years, this is a wonderful place in which to live — and fish — and it took that trip to Tidewater Virginia to remind me just how good we have it down here.

SAILFISHERS should be reminded that the 27th Annual Light Tackle Sailfish Tournament of the Stuart Sailfish Club will take place from Wednesday, Dec. 10 through Sunday, Dec. 14, out of the Sailfish Marina at Port Salerno.

The deadline for entries is Dec. 2, so pick up a brochure and file your entry soon. For information and brochures, write the Stuart Sailfish Club, P.O. Box 2005, Stuart, Fla. 33494, or call Chairmen Jay A. Potsdam or Mike Matlack at 287-8556.

The minimum length of boat is 26 feet. The registration fee is $200 for the first angler plus $100 for each additional team member (includes cocktail party and one ticket per angler to the Awards Dinner).

Competition will be divided among the team and individual categories. Fishing will be over four days with Saturday allowed as a weather day.

According to Chairmen Potsdam and Matlack, the tournament attracts annually the most skilled anglers on the east coast, many of whom have fished it all 26 years — for the challenge of catching fish on 20-lb. tackle. Many compete using spinning tackle. Some participate using a charter boat.

Observers will be put on each boat in the competition to record sailfish catches and releases and tagging data for the special crew prize given for high tagger in the event.

FLORIDA'S NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGES offer limited hunting, according to Fred Stanberry, director of the Division of Wildlife for the GFWFC.

The refuges, Chassbowitzka, Loxahatchee and Merritt Island, will be open during the established waterfowl season, he said. In addition to permits issued by the federal refuges, persons must have the appropriate state hunting license and state and federal waterfowl stamps. Steel shot is required in the Chassahowitzka and Merritt Island refuges, he stressed.

In addition to these refuges, sportsmen can still take advantage of the muzzleloading firearms hunt on the St. Vincent National Wildlife Refuge. That hunt is slated for Dec. 12-14 with either sex, wild hog and bearded turkey legal game. An unlimited number of permits will be issued for the hunt with permits available either at the federal refuge headquarters or by mail. Applications will be accepted until Dec. 1.

For information on hunting St. Vincent or receiving an application, write the Federal Refuge Manager, P.O. Box 447, Appalachicola, Fla. 32320.

THE JENSEN SAVANNAS get their day in court when the Conservation and Recreation Lands Selection Committee chaired by Dr. Elton J. Gissendanner, executive director of the Department of Natural Resources, meets on Wednesday, Nov. 12. The committee is composed of six key administrators of concerned state agencies. It will determine the final version of the CARL project list for which 27 land purchase projects have been suggested, the Jensen Savannas near the bottom.

Once the project list is ready, it will be presented to the Governor and the Cabinet. As the Board of Directors of the Internal Improvement Trust Fund, they have the final decision on which lands will actually be purchased from the $31 million available.

However, the DNR points out, should any landowners not wish to sell their property, the state has no condemnation powers in this situation. The land purchase would simply be dropped and another parcel purchased instead. There are ample acres to choose from, according to the DNR. The 27 projects proposed by the committee are reportedly estimated to be worth more than twice the amount of money available to buy them.

THE NEW STATEWIDE comprehensive outdoor recreation plan proposed by the Division of Recreation and Parks, DNR, will be aired at four public meetings to be held Nov. 12-13 around the state (Miami and Tallahassee on Nov. 12, and Pensacola and Orlando on Nov. 13. The Orlando meeting will be at the Orlando Recreation Department, Room 102, 649 Livingston St., at 7 p.m. on Nov. 18).

The new outdoor recreation plan, Outdoor Recreation in Florida — 1981, supersedes its 1976 counterpart, according to James Pearce, chief of the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation and Local Assistance, Division of Recreation and Parks. "It represents the state's basic policy on outdoor recreation and is intended as a framework for guiding all levels of government and the private sector in providing outdoor recreation in Florida," Pearce said.

Surf whiting and Cross Roads blues save slow area fishing

BY DICK LUNDIN

WITH THE STRONG WINDS and shifting fronts, area fishing has taken a nosedive recently, but surf fishermen seeking bluefish can take solace from a plenitude of big whiting, and boaters trolling rag mops or using cut bait can catch lots of big blues from the Cross Roads to buoy "19" in the St. Lucie River.

Otherwise, it's been a little tough on anglers of late. You really have to work for what you get, and it might not be too much, either.

The Indian River is murky and dirty from the winds and you'll have a lot of trouble finding too many sea trout. This might be a good time to try one of those shiny gold Tony Accetta spoons with the yellow feather, in an attempt to advertise better what you're offering feeding trout. The grass flats are unproductive and the best bet for a little trout action would appear to be around the power plant.

Snook fishing is generally slow. A few are being taken in the surf by anglers flashing Krocodile spoons in quest of schooling blues that are streaking in and out of the surf on a hit or miss basis. Possibly the best spot for snooking would be the Evans Crary (10 cent) Bridge on East Ocean Boulevard east of downtown Stuart.

BOTTOM FISHERMEN haven't had it too great lately. The Roosevelt Bridge on U.S.-1, crossing the St. Lucie River above downtown Stuart, is a pretty good place for sheepshead, croakers, mangrove snappers, black drum and even an occasional spadefish. As a matter of fact, reportedly, there are some blues in the five pound class haunting the railroad bridge next to the Roosevelt. Another fairly good spot for bottom fishermen is the little Mosquito Bridge just east of the Frank Wacha Bridge on the Jensen Causeway.

Offshore, there are king and Spanish mackerel, dolphin, wahoo, bonito, barracuda and sailfish. The kings are in 55 to 60 ft. of water off the power plant and condos, and about four miles below the St. Lucie Inlet in the Kingfish Hole (60ft.). Two sails have been reported in 150 to 200 ft. of water off the condos and the St. Lucie Inlet. Bottom fishing out there has been good whenever the current has been kind enough to permit getting baits down where the fish are. Anglers trolling Clarkspoons with a one half ounce sinker and a black swivel up front are catching lots of Spanish mackerel in about 30 ft. of water both north and south of the St. Lucie Inlet. The biggest kings, to 30-0 (30 lbs.), are in that Kingfish Hole below the St. Lucie Inlet.

ON THE FRESHWATER SIDE, the speck season (black crappies) edges ever nearer each week. Although January-March are the prime months when the specks spawn and can be taken in shallow water, you can catch close to a limit (50) by drifting with live minnows in such lakes as Okeechobee, Blue Cypress, Kissimmee and Marian. A call to Jack Conant up at Lake Marian, about four miles west of Kenansville and U.S. 441 above Yeehaw Junction, elicited the information that "driftera" are catching good strings of big specks using live minnows and jigs like a Hall's Fly tipped with a live minnow.

From D-M bait and tackle at the south end of the Roosevelt Bridge, Muriel Weideman: "It was very good here over the weekend when they were hauling in lots of sheepshead, mangrove snappers, croakers, jack crevalles and some black drum. Dr. John Blackard used rag mops trolling for blues near the Cross Roads and had to stop when he got tired catching them. There are some big blues taking cut bait near the railroad bridge pilings next to the Roosevelt."

J.D. SACHS, from Manatee Bait and Tackle: "There's nothing too good to report this week, Dick. There are a few kings in 55-60 ft. off the condos and the power plant. There are some sails farther out in 150-200 ft. There are still a lot of blues at the Cross Roads and near Marker 19 in the St. Lucie. Some nice mangrove snappers are being caught live shrimp in the St. Lucie where the trees have fallen. The north shore is best. There are Spanish mackerel just north and south of the St. Lucie. They are running 4-5 lbs. and those trolling Clarkspoons with a one half oz. sinker up front are doing best. There are a few big smaller kings to 20 lbs. in the Kingfish Hole about four miles below the St. Lucie Inlet in that 60 ft. deep hole. Any kind of live bait will get them to skyrocket. Because they're hitting short, it takes two hooks or a trolling hook to make a hook-up. Bottom fishing offshore is good whenever the tide isn't running and you can get down. The mutton snapper are running smaller now. They're getting a few dolphin, bonito, wahoo and barracuda out there, scattered. George Tebry got wahoo of 37-0 and 42-0 while trolling a red and white feather with an extra hook on it and a ballyhoo, off the St. Inlet."

SOLID COMFORT. This veteran Virginia angler brought all the comforts of home with him, as well as plenty of fishing tackle and bait. He's hoping for a passing weakfish or bluefish as he fishes with cut Norfolk spot fro the 3,000-foot Newport News, Virginia Fishing pier in the James River. He said it was between seasons, that the big spot, croakers and most of the flounder had gone, with just very small spots, small blues and scattered weakfish around to interest anglers waiting for the annual winter run of rockfish (striped bass) expected to begin late in November. (Photo by Dick Lundin)

FROM THE LADY STUART, party boat (286-1880) going half days and Wednesday and Friday nights from the Sailfish Marina just east of Port Salerno and A1A below Stuart, Mickey Moody: "Fishing's been just great for us lately. Yesterday (Monday) we got into a big school of Toro snappers, caught a 10-0 wahoo, some big trigger fish, a few big mutton snappers and some small grouper. We've been catching a little bit of everything it seems, Dick. There was a barge sunk in the middle of the channel yesterday (Monday) and if they haven't gotten it out, it could really block things if it starts to blow."

CHUCK SHEPHERD, from the Bait Box in Jensen: "River fishing's been slow, except for a few big snook. One angler re ported today had three snook that weigh ed 42 lbs. and four earlier that weigh ed 70 lbs. Surf fishing's been up and down. The blues are good one day and gone the next. Our fishing log: Wood Haughie, 7 blues, cut mackerel. Normandy Beach just below the power plant, Henry Garris, 5 blues, cut mackerel. Evans Crary Bridge: Tom Moriarity, 2 grouper to 4-8, 4 mangrove snapper to 3-8; 3 drum to 6-0, live shrimp. Jensen Causeway Mosquito Bridge, Jim Breck, 3 snook to 6-8, live mullet. Fort Pierce South Jetty, Harold Morris and Jim Leary, 4 snook to 8-0, 6 trout to 4-8 and 3 mangrove snappers to 4-0, live mullet and panfish, fishing in the river near the power plant."

FROM JENSEN BAIT AND TACKLE, Joe Varno: "Trout are perking up a little bit but not much. They're getting some 4-5 lb. channel bass (redfish) at the Roosevelt on live shrimp. They are taking some snook on spoons in the surf. Blues are still good in the surf. The action dies out at about 9 a.m., but they start up again around 11 a.m., going for cut bait and spoons. There are some good blues around the Evans Crary. The grass flats were good for trout, channel bass and mangrove snappers a few days ago but now there are only some jack crevalles there. Drum are good at the bridges. Some trout are hitting near the power plant and farther north toward Fort Pierce."

TOM STEWART from the Snook Nook in Jensen: "Fishing is just so-so. We've had a lot of wind the past few days and the river's awfully dirty. You have to really hunt for those sea trout now. There are some really big whiting, to a pound and a half, in the surf now, but the blues are a hit and miss proposition, in and out unpredictably. If you have a boat, you'll find lots of blues in the St. Lucie River from buoy 19 on down to the Cross Roads. The best bait is either a blue or a green and yellow Tony Accetta rag mop, but you can catch them on regular cut bait as well. There's some fair snook fishing at the Evans Crary, just too many bait bag nose to 30-0. No question about it, Dick, the best fishing right now is for big whiting in the surf from Martin County Park N. Fish up to the power plant, or for those big blues down at the Cross Roads."

The Nook's log: Andy Jorgensen, 15 whiting, 12 blues and a pompano, cut shrimp and mackerel. Normandy Beach, Frances O'Sullivan, a 3-4 pompano, sand flea, surf. Bob and Betty Haynes, 20 whiting, cut shrimp surf. Morgan West, 23 whiting, cut shrimp, surf. Miles Jenkins, Andy Pedersen and Joe Munion, 63 blues to 7-8, cut mackerel and rag mops, from the Cross Roads to buoy 19. Mike Gushie, 8 blues to 6-8, cut mackerel, surf. Delores Smith, an 8-8 trout, live pinfish. Jeanne Causeway, Jon Deschamps and Ken Astor, 6 channel bass, 5 trout and 3 sheepshead, live shrimp, Indian River. Dan and Sandy Fought, Roger and Carol Morgan, 4 kings to 18-0 on ballyhoo with a bubbler up front. Chuck Defazio, 3 kings to 11-0 and 4 7-0 Spanish mackerel, ballyhoo, trolling off the St. Inlet. Chuck Engelman, 8 Spanish mackerel, 3 dolphin to 20-0 and 3 kings to 18-0 on ballyhoo with a bubbler, 98 ft. due east of the St. Inlet.

Star sailing regatta is Nov. 22-23

The 11th Sandpiper Bay Star Regatta sponsored by General Development Corporation is scheduled on November 22 and 23 at the Sandpiper Bay Resort.

More than 80 Star class sailboats are expected to enter the event which is one of four events in the Florida championship of Star class sailing. The other three are the Hyatt Cup sailed in Sarasota, and the Ryder Cup and Bacardi Cup, both in Miami.

Carlos de Cardenas of Miami, twice a World Star champion and Olympic gold medalist, will again head the race committee and serve as judge, according to Sandpiper Bay Fleet Captain Harry Walker.

"We are expecting entries from throughout the eastern half of the United States and several foreign countries such as Nassau and Venezuela," Walker said.

The Sandpiper championship will be decided in a series of six races, the best five to count, over triangular and windward-leeward courses on the St. Lucie River in front of the resort.

Races are scheduled at 11 a.m. on Saturday with the second, third and fourth races immediately following. the final races will start at 10 a.m. on Sunday and will be sailed back-to-back. The boat with the lowest cumulative point score is the winner.

Sailors planning to enter the Sandpiper Bay Star Regatta should contact Hudson Miller, committee chairman, P.O. Box 3032, Fort Pierce, Fla. 33450 or Harry Walker, P.O. Box 3204, Vero Beach, Fla. 32960.

Larry Rinker in Texas Vegas event

BY MIKE SANDY

Larry Rinker, who missed by one shot to be among tour qualifiers for 1981 is one of 32 professionals competing in the new Texas Dolly tournament being played this week in Las Vegas, Nev. Top prize for the winner is a guaranteed $50,000. The tourney is played on a strictly match play basis.

This is the event which we wrote about three weeks ago. The tourney is labeled as the World Match Play Golf Championship and is being played at the Dunes Golf course. Each of the 32 entrants put up $5,000 and while the event was believed to attract a limit of 256 contestants, the field was closed at 32 when many of the top name pros failed to enter. The field includes many of the young lions who participate in mini tour events and many with whom Rinker has competed.

Founder of the novel tournament Texas Dolly Brunson believes his plan for a world championship match play test will reach the million proportions once the first event is staged this week. Reputed as the World Poker King Texas Dolly figures he now has the type tournament a real open championship for everybody.

Stuart's Lauri Rinker to appear on Real People Show

BY MIKE SANDY

Lauri Rinker, a product of the Stuart school system, who learned her basic golf at Martin County Golf Club and the Sandpiper Bay Sunset and Sunset's courses, continues to receive stellar plaudits and recognition. Reports have it that she has been invited to appear on the Real People TV Show sometime in late December of this year. The show ranks sixth in nationwide appeal and is a telecast story Wednesday night at 8 p.m. on NBC, emanating from California.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Rinker received several phone calls from Skip Stephenson, one of the show's principals, seeking permission from Lauri's parents to have Lauri on a future show. Stephenson indicated they would arrange for Lauri's plane trip to the coast shortly following completion of her term exams at the University of Florida, where she is completing her sophomore year. The invitation came about when Real People found Lauri listed in the Nov. 3 Sport Illustrated's Faces in the Crowd feature.

Lauri, who turned 19 last September, will bring added recognition to Stuart, long known as the Sailfish Capital of the World. It could well be hailed as the Home Town of Lauri Rinker. She was honored for winning the US Girl's Junior Amateur Championship in Wichita, Kan. in addition to her appearance in Illustrated. Lauri Rinker will be awarded a trophy by the magazine's editors.

Faces in the Crowd is reported to be a recognition of outstanding competitors in the sports world. Lauri, however, joins many notables who appeared in the Faces in the Crowd feature and who later became major sports figures. They included Nancy Lopez, Jack Nicklaus, Arthur Ashe, Tracy Austin and David Thompson. In addition, six "faces" went on to take Sportswoman or Sportsman of the year awards. They were: Chris Evert, Jerry Lucas, Rafer Johnson, Steve Cauthen, Nicklaus and Terry Bradshaw.

Serving as captain of the highly ranked Lady Gators Women's Golf team for the U. of Florida, Lauri will lead her Gators in the Lady Gator Invitational Intercollegiate Golf tournament this weekend when the 15 leading women's golf teams will vie in a field studded with the best women collegiate golfers in the nation.

Following her second place finish in the recent Nancy Lopez U. of Tulsa tournament last month, Lauri Rinker has set her sights on taking the Lady Gator title for her school. She will have strong silent support from her parents. Lyle is the asst Pres who will be attending the meetings in Colorado.

Beardsley and Wirth in Pro-Am spotlite

Terry Beardsley, who just arrived in the area from Milwaukee, and amateur Gary Wirth of Stuart shared individual honors in the Sandpiper Bay Pro Am action Friday when Beardsley posted a smoking six under par 66 and Gary Wirth carded a hole-in-one on the Simmer's seventh hole. However, despite their stellar scoring neither could put their respective teams in the top two pro Am listings.

With a total of 20 teams in competition, Iowa pro Jim Tuller led his three amateur partners to a Two Best Ball tally of 24 under par 120. Serving as an assistant at Eastpoint, Tuller inspired his three amateur partner to a near record score. His mates included Wayne Malmquist, Jay Cohen and Bill Kerwin.

Chuck Koebels, Mariner Sands head pro paced his team to sole possession of second place with a 21 under par 123 with these simon pures contributing the second place finish: Vic Georgeff, Doc Bacon and Ray Lanseford.

Amateurs Wirth, Frank Volgstadt and Dutch King teamed with Vero Beach Pro Lou Thalk for a third place finish of 19 under 125. Sandpiper pro Bruce Harrision inspired his amateurs Al Becker, Al and Carl Chiarizzio to fourth place with 128.

Six teams finished in a deadlock for the next pay'off slot and included Pros Beardsley, Jay Pyle, Rob Crane, Nevin Sutcliffe, Phil Campoli and Dave Turner. Amateurs on these clubs included Bill Conklin, Armand Maltradesardi, John Link, Barry Allison, Will Wrie, Stan Parker, George Garabedian, Jack Hugh, Jay Moore, Jack Early, Harry Mingins, Mac Upper, Jim Stark, Jerry Gould, Carl Lutz, Doc Kendall, Ace Parker and Dave Larsen.

In the pro rankings, Bruce Harrison and Jim Tuller shareded second spot behind Beardsley with late 71's, followed by Dan Gower and Nevin Sutcliffe with 72's; Phil Campoli, 73, and tied at 74 were Sandy Scharlau and Lee Agne.

The next Pro Am at Sandpiper Bay will be held Friday Nov. 21 and interested participants are urged to sign up early to insure a starting berth.

Beach run set Nov. 15

The Martin County Runners will have a Fun Run at the Stuart Beach on Nov. 15 at 8 a.m. There will be a 2 mile and a 5 mile run. Anyone who wishes to join us after the run for breakfast at one of our local eateries is cordially welcome.

A picture is worth a thousand words. You'll find them in THE MIRROR.

Rich, 'Athlete of the Week'

Martin County High's running back Steve Rich rushed himself into being "Athlete of the Week" when he rushed for 108 yards in Friday's winning effort over Palm Beach Gardens.

A senior in his second year of varsity football, Rich is described as "a very dedicated and hardworking player," by MCHS Coach Gary Jones.

"It was a great individual effort on Steve's part," Jones said, "and one of the most outstanding running back efforts in any MCHS game."

Rich now qualifies for "Athlete of the Month" competition sponsored by Ft. Pierce Jai-Alai, and a crack at the "Athlete of the Year" award which offers a $500 scholarship.

Sandtrap

BY MIKE SANDY

Ladyluck (mostly bad) had a hand in Sandpiper Bay championship action this week when two of the contestants were forced to default their matches due to physical setbacks. Tom Chapman who was to have met Tom Bonne was rushed to Martin Memorial Hospital on election day for emergency treatments and extensive check. He was discharged Saturday under treatment but will not be able to play golf for a couple weeks. Also confined to Martin Memorial is Mary Waldhilig who underwent surgery and is on the "improve" after the extrication of gall stones which we understand looked like golf balls.

The Fore County Women's Golf Association comprised of 144 golfers in Palm Beach, Martin, St. Lucie and Indian River counties played their annual championship matches in a two-day settu at both Sandpiper Bay courses with two new champions being crowned.

Jean Lutz of J.D.M. in No. Palm Beach took the low gross champion ship with a 36-hole tally of 158, edging out runnerup Alice Cassady, also of JDM, by four shots. In a match of cards, low net honors went to Bea Hadsell of Vero Beach scoring a 142 together with Jean Metzger of Lake Worth and Marty Shellhouse of Eastpointe C.C.

The Fore group is limited to only those golfers who maintain a handicap of 18 or less with one day matches played once a month culminated by the annual two-day championship held at the Sandpiper courses. Billi Goodman, who serves as secretary of the group, founded the association in 1978 and includes most of the best women amateur golfers along the Treasure Coast.

Clubs affiliated with the Fore group are Belle Glade C.C.; Dodger Pines, Vero Beach, Eastpointe C.C., No. Palm Beach, Indian Hills, Fort Pierce; Indian Pines, Vero; JDM C.C., No. Palm Beach; John's Island, Vero; Jonathan's Landing C.C., No. Palm Beach; Lake Worth C.C.; Martin County C.C., Stuart; Maysees Lake C.C.; Mid Rivers C.C., Stuart; Ramar C.C., Vero; Sandpiper C.C., Port St. Lucie; Tequesta C.C.; Turtle Creek C.C., Vista Royale, Vero; Stuart Yacht and C.C.; Frenchman's Creek; No. Palm Beach C.C.; West Palm Beach C.C.; Martin County, Stuart.

Officers of the league are Helen Barnum, JDM; Ruth Pifer, Jonathan's Landing, Billi Goodman and Ginny Ellsworth, Sandpiper Bay. The Fore ladies will play their next event Dec. 12 at Frenchman's Creek in a regular one day test.

Other individual awards in weekend play went to La Cassady for the longest drive while these gals shared low putting honors: Ruth Pfier, Evie Dolon of Stuart and Ul h Crandall. Clo ie to the pin al ots were shared by Aggie Smith, Mid Rivers; Aline Cassady, Jean the Ts ddoors, Jean Cect, Peg Allen, Ricmar; Etta DeStefano, Mid Rivers; Carole Lowell, John's Island; Ruth Crandall, Lake Worth, and Isabel Eaton, Indian Hills.

See where CBS TV has chopped six golf tournaments including the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic from its 1982 schedule. In addition CBS is dropping the San Diego Open, The Phoenix Open, the Atlanta Golf Classic, the Memphis Open and the Hartford Open. It was also announced that CBS will not televise the 1981 J.C. Penny mixed team championship.

Jack Cooney, chairman of the Inverrary, indicated that the Gleason will be telecast after he signs an agreement with an unidentified sponsor. Van Gordon Sauter, president of CBS sports said the decision to reduce the CBS schedule from 18 events to 12 is due partly to the ratings which have been sagging of late. Just how much the purses on the tour will suffer because of the cutbacks is uncertain. Every three years the networks bid a certain amount of money for TV rights and the money is put into pool much like the networks work with the NFL. The PGA tour covers a percentage of each tournament purse, with events that are televised getting a larger share.

Would like to see the American League owners accept the offer of Edward DeBartolo to purchase the Chicago White Sox. Should the sale go through, powers to be in the Martin County and St. Lucie area could start making strong overtures to the DeBartolo interests to open a spring training facility here. What could be nicer for the DeBartolos since they will be building one of the largest shopping malls along the Treasure Coast on the border of both counties.

They tell us that the "talking chip" used in but a handful of appliances and the new Datsun automobiles is about to burst forth in a profusion of voices. Speech synthesis, the process by which chips are taught to talk, is ushering in a new era in which a veritable babel of tongues will be heard issuing from a host of products. We heard the voice in the 1981 Datsun tell us we left our lights on and be sure to shut the door.

We hope to see the golf cart manufacturers follow suit with messages of "Are you parked too close to the green?" "Do you have the right club for the shot?" "You're traveling too fast" and other such questions which can eventually speed up play and keep our courses playable.

Pro-Am moves

The popular Pro Am events which have been staged in the area every week will move to the Martin Downs Crane Creek golf course Friday with entries being accepted at the Creek clubhouse and either of the Saints or Sinner's courses at Sandpiper Bay.

Jim Pyle, host pro at the Creek is looking for a large field as many of the northern pros have already made their way south for the winter months. It was also pointed out by Pyle that many of the top amateurs in the area who have been denied a place in the popular event due to the lack of pros, will now be able to compete. Pros and amateurs alike have been looking forward to another "go" at Crane Creeks which has been dubbed as one of the most difficult courses in company.

Pyle indicated he would participate and attempt to start another string of victories which was stopped by Friday's play at the Sandpiper home course. Pyle entered last Friday's event with three straight top pro awards in the weekly Pro Am heading the pro list with consecutive wins at Mariner Sands and a pair at Sandpiper Bay.

Junior tourney is named for Dvorak

An ardent and enthusiastic golfer for many years, William F. Dvorak was denied a dream of seeing his son Chris Dvorak become one of the world's outstanding tour players when he was called by his Maker on Sept. 5th this year.

Bill, as he was called by his friends and many of the youths he helped in life, will be remembered by the World of Junior Golf with an International Tournament of Champions to be held at Sandpiper Bay Dec. 27 to 30. The event is named in his honor and memory. Entries for this outstanding Junior tournament will include players 18 years of age and under.

Among the junior greats scheduled to participate in the tournament are Chris Dvorak of Port St. Lucie, a nine year old champion and Tommy Hearn of Fort Pierce. Chris was crowned National Junior Champion in the nine and under age group at the Ohio Classic among the numerous titles he has earned since taking up the game at the age of two. Hearn is also a National Junior champion and a former Ohio Classic in the 12 yr. old division and was named a Gold Magazine All-American National Junior Golf All American.

James Baker, director of the World of Junior Golf in Piantsburg, N.C. recognized the great work and devotion of William Dvorak and the youth of the country and decided that his memory should be perpetuated by a tourna ment for the young folks with whom he worked so closely. Entries for the tournament are being accepted at the Sandpiper Bay Sunset's course.

The event will surely bring together the leading junior golfers in the country and should afford residents of the area the opportunity of watching these future greats in action.

Trinity family supper planned

Trinity United Methodist Church will have the first family fellowship supper of the Fall-Winter season Wednesday night, Nov. 12 at 6:30. This will be a covered dish supper and you are requested to bring your own place setting in addition to your covered dish. Beverages will be provided.
At 7:30 p.m. following the supper, OPUS 81 Showcase Ensemble from Martin County High School will perform in concert for those in attendance. This fine chorus of 26 young people is directed by Mr. Ronald Carlson.

Covered dish for Unitarians

The Indian River Unitarian Universalist Fellowship will hold a covered dish dinner at 1 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 16 in the community room of the Park Terrace, 601 Ave. B, Fort Pierce. Juanita Sams, Ruth Weinstock and Alberta Gaskell are in charge of arrangements.
The fellowship recently heard Eliot Thomas of Hutchinson Island speak on "Religion and Politics." Thomas pointed out that the democratic principles of independent thought and belief were threatened by the reactionary group calling itself the "Moral Majority," whose leaders denounced any deviation from their declared position. He said that religious organizations like the Unitarian Universalist, with critigsis of informed judgment and reason, cannot with impunity remain silent at such distortion of justice, and must combat it firmly, holding the "Moral Majority" responsible for published untruths and misleading statements.
Several members who visited The Mountain during the summer or early fall reported to the fellowship on Sunday, Nov. 9. Following the account of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dauer, Robert Morrison told of a seminar called "Discovery II" he attended when he and Mrs. Morrison spent a week at the center. Dan Pichulo, of Stuart, vice-president, made a brief stop there during his vacation.
Located in scenic North Carolina, The Mountain is the site of a conference center constructed by the Southeast region of the American UU Association, on land acquired during the past year.

Pent-up Dolphin buries Rams

BY DICK LUNDIN

MIAMI'S DOLPHINS may have waited overlong to put it all together, insofar as their 1980 playoff hopes are concerned, but put it together they did last Sunday in Anaheim, California where they literally destroyed the powerful Rams of the NFC West, 35-14 in an impressive display of pent-up fury.

Being 10-point underdogs didn't faze the Dolphins, either offensively or defensively, as they turned the mighty NFC Rams everyway but loose.

From the ashes of a dismal 4-5 season, that had seen them near zero offensively with no running game and only an average passing attack, Phoenix-like, this Miami team arose and was both an irresistible force and an immovable object Sunday afternoon. The high-scoring Rams were the victims of the unexpected turnabout.

The Dolphin defense shut down quarterback Vince Ferragamo's heralded passing attack, especially his downfield strikes, limiting him to 19 completions in 42 attempts while picking off four of his throws. Strong safety Don Bessillieu intercepted Ferragamo twice, cornerback Gerald Small once and linebacker Ernie Rhone once. It brought to 18 the number of 1980 interceptions for Miami's young but ever-improving secondary. In the deep secondary, cornerback Don McNeal, Small and Bessillieu have four apiece, and free safety Glenn Blackwood has two.

ROOKIE DAVID WOODLEY shone brightest among a galaxy of Dolphin stars that included running backs Tony Nathan and Delvin Williams, the entire offensive line, linebacker A.J. Duhe, and the entire defensive cast.

Coach Don Shula had announced after the Oakland heart-breaker that he would go with the same offensive and defensive alignments, but that Woodley would be his quarterback. He pointed out that the Dolphins sorely needed Woodley's mobility, and the former LSU star didn't disappoint anyone against the Rams.

Woodley's nimble feet neutralized the feared pass rush of the Rams and enabled him to complete 17 of 28 attempts (without a single interception) for 161 yards and three touchdowns (six yards to wide receiver Nat Moore, 31 to Nathan and two to tight end Bruce Hardy). He scored twice on runs of six and 10 yards and overall picked up 61 yards in nine carries against what had been a rugged Los Angeles defense. B.W. (before Woodley).

If Woodley's performance, improving every week now, wasn't enough to upset the Rams, the complete resurgence of the much maligned offensive line was even more so.

ONE KEY may have been Coach Shula's decision to start Nathan at running back ahead of Williams who hadn't been running with much authority or determination either in 1979 or 1980. Nathan had a fine day, catching seven passes for 71 yards and rushing for 57 yards in eight tries, an overall day of 128 yards. Williams, his pride apparently stung at last, however, ran like the Williams of 1978 in gaining 151 yards in just 12 carries, Miami's first individual 100-yard game of the season.

Miami went into the game with a miserable team rushing average of only 91 yards per game, but its offensive line blew out the Rams all afternoon long, as the Dolphins carved out 280 yards rushing and ran 73 plays to 61 for the demoralized Rams. Highlighting the performance of the offensive line was the big hole opened for Williams on a second quarter draw play that gained 65 yards, clear down to the Los Angeles four-yard line to set up Miami's second touchdown.

IT'S BEEN A LONG TIME since the Dolphins have beaten a winning team on the road (Buffalo, which was 8-6 in 1975 and San Diego, 9-7 in 1976), but this year they've done it twice, once miraculously up in Atlanta where they stunned the Falcons with last quarter heroics, and now this blow-out of the 6-3 Rams who are now 6-4 and a game behind those same Falcons.

Winning this one behind Woodley should bode well for the remainder of the season, whether or not the Dolphins manage to eke out a playoff berth.

Before looking into that still remote possibility, let's recap the scoring in Sunday's fracas.

Woodley led three first half drives of 75, 69 and 82 yards, with the touchdowns by Nathan (31-yard pass), Woodley (6-yard run) and Moore (6-yard pass). The lone first half score by L.A. came about when a George Roberts punt was blocked at the Miami 6 and fallen on in the end zone by Jewerl Thomas. It was a startling 21-7 at the half.

Those long, ball-control drives apparently appealed to the born-again Dolphins who staged two more in the second half. The first covered 73 and the second 80 yards. Woodley's 10-yard run got the first and his 2-yard pass to Hardy the second. Down 28-7 in the fourth quarter, the desperate Rams got on the board for the second and last time when Ferragamo hit Victor Hicks for a 31-yard touchdown.

THE PLAYOFF PICTURE looks like this in the AFC: New England and Buffalo are tied for the lead in the AFC East, with 7-3 records, Miami and Baltimore are 5-5, and the N.Y. Jets are 2-8. In the AFC Central, Cleveland and Houston are also deadlocked at 7-3, Pittsburgh is 6-4 and Cincinnati is 3-7. Out in the AFC West, Oakland is on top at 7-3, San Diego is 6-4, Denver and Kansas City are 5-5 and Seattle trails with 4-6.

Because there can be only five playoff contestants in the AFC it's easy to see that with seven teams having won six or seven games, those with 5-5 records face long odds in their battle for survival.

With only six games remaiing, however, the Dolphins could still confound the experts by finishing either 10-6 or even 11-5, but to do so would have to knock off the Pittsburgh Steelers (Nov. 30) and Baltimore Colts (Dec. 14) away from home, and turn back the San Francisco 49ers (Nov. 16), San Diego Chargers (Nov. 20), New England Patriots (Dec. 8) and New York Jets (Dec. 20) at home in the Orange Bowl.

Off the L.A. game, they should be favored in all four of the home games but will probably rate as one to three point underdogs against Baltimore and Pittsburgh.

Don't sell Coach Shula short! Remember 1970 when Miami won its last six games to make the playoffs for the first time! The odds are against it, but that was an awesome display Sunday.

From here, it looks now like Miami could wind up the season either 9-7 or 10-6. It's doubtful whether 10-6 would do it.

LAST WEEK in the NFL, the Giants upset Dallas, 38-35; the Steelers curbed Tampa Bay, 24-21; Chicago routed Washington, 35-21; Green Bay handled San Francisco, 23-16; Atlanta came from behind to tame St. Louis in overtime, 33-27; Cleveland held off Baltimore to win a close one, 28-27; Minnesota drubbed slumping Detroit, 34-0; Buffalo held off the troublesome Jets, 31-24; Denver downed San Diego, 20-13; Kansas City edged Seattle, 31-30; Miami stunned Los Angeles, 35-14; Philadelphia handed winless New Orleans a 34-21 shellacking.

In the Monday night game, the Houston Oilers defeated the New England Patriots in a wild one, 38-34.

THIS WEEK'S SLATE OF GAMES looks like this from here: (home teams listed first:

Detroit to be walloped by Baltimore; Cincinnati to lose to Buffalo; Pittsburgh to turn back Cleveland; Washington to bow to Philadelphia; the Giants to surprise Green Bay; Atlanta to whip New Orleans; New England to be edged by Los Angeles; Dallas to turn back St. Louis; Minnesota to repel Tampa Bay; Denver to be upset by the Jets; Chicago to lose to Houston; San Diego to hold off Kansas City; Miami to stop San Francisco.

In the Monday night game, it looks like Seattle will lose still another one at the Kingdome, this one to Oakland.

The kickoff Sunday in the Orange Bowl is at 4 p.m.

South Street residents say

One way is no way

BY AILSA DEWING

More arrests for speeding, not one-way streets is the answer to Jensen Beachs South Street traffic problems in the opinions of both residents and Martin County Commissioners.

A public hearing Tuesday afternoon on a proposed one-way street traffic pattern designed by County Engineer Ed Greenamyer got thumbs down from a group of residents who attended the hearing. The engineer drafted the plan in response to complaints about the volume and speed of traffic from South Street area residents.

But the residents of South Street, Highland Avenue, Skyline Drive, and Hilltop Aveilue who were at the hearing were totally opposed to any of their streets being made one-way. In addition, they presented a petition signed by 33 residents also opposed.

What they do want, the residents indicated, is more arrests for speeding on South Street. On a motion by Commissioner Thomas Higgins, the board will request the sheriff's department to increase its patrol in the area.

Although residents were unified in their opposition, they presented a variety of arguments and proposals.

Greenamyer's proposal would have formed a grid of mixed one-way streets within the South-Skyline-Highland-Hilltop block.

"It would be a race track," Eleanor and Ed Sprague charged " and a bottleneck when trains go through." Mrs. Sprague contended that the reason South Street is narrow is that residents allow their lawns to grow beyond the road edge and then move their mailboxes out to the edge.

Miriam Farrell proposed stop signs at every corner but was opposed by Commission Chairman Maggy Hurchalla who said that stop signs used to control speed create more accidents at intersections because speeders ignore the signs as well as the speed limit if there are no police in sight.

Gene Lucas, urged commissioners not to "SPREAD THE CONFUSION TO THE SIDE STREETS. Let them have their peace and quiet," he said. He called for South Street to be a one-way westbound street.

Bob Rush proposed no left turns be allowed off Commercial into Skyline. "They get up speed racing down the hill," he argued.

Neil Prince recommended controlling turns off Savanna Road and Commercial Street during peak rush hours.

Nobody at the hearing favored the one-way street system.

Commissioners did approve a recommendation from Greenamyer to install street lights at the ends of the east bridge span on the Jensen Beach Causeway.

He said he would contact Florida Power and Light Co. as soon as possible to begin the installation.

Firehouse is smoky issue

AILSA DEWING

Ground has not yet been broken for the fire station on Hutchinson Island, but it's already a hot topic.

The station, which is being built and partially financed by developers of Indian River Plantation, first came up for discussion at a recent Sewall's Point Town Board meeting after councilmen were approached by District 2 Fire Chief Ed Smith with a proposition.

The town has a contract with District 2 on which it pays $2,000 a year for firefighting services from the Stuart-based volunteer firefighters. Chief Smith wants to purchase a $3500 fire attack pumper truck — a small vehicle used by the state's Department of Forestry — which Smith explains can help contain a fire until the larger apparatus arrives.

Smith has asked Sewall's Point to pay $1,000 towards the truck's purchase and build a garage for it on waterfront property across the street from the town hall. One estimate places the cost of the engine house at $10,000.

The chief said his department would maintain the truck and he knows of "six or seven men in Sewall's Point interested in being trained to run it including one experienced firefighter." The truck can be operated by two men, the chief said.

Mayor Edward Gluckler voiced his support of the proposal, saying, he thinks the city would be getting a bargain.

But opposition was voiced by Councilman Dana deWindt, who said he is against putting up a temporary facility when there is going to be "an outstanding facility" on Hutchinson Island, "only a little over a mile away."

DeWindt believes that if there are men in Sewall's Point willing to be volunteer firefighters, they can as well volunteer for the Hutchinson Island department.

But the island firehouse will lie within District 1 after it is owned by the county and is going to come under the jurisdiction of the Rio and Jensen Beach departments. Sewall's Point would have to negotiate a contract with the district, with which it was contracted until five or six years ago.

Jensen Beach Fire Chief Joe Luciano says he would be opposed to another contract with the town because seven of the eight vehicles in his department were purchased by Jensen Beach. Only one vehicle was supplied by the county. And the contract was not renewed when it expired because the Jensen Beach area has grown too large for the department to serve other areas, he said.

Whether, in fact, the Hutchinson Island station will be totally volunteer is questionable, Rio Fire Chief Bill Bass points out. The fire truck to be located there, known as a snorkel, will be a 75-100 foot telescopic hydraulic ladder truck and requires two experienced men to handle it.

"It's too much to handle with just every other week training," Bass said, because of the complexity of the equipment.

In making his proposal to Sewall's Point, Chief Smith said the bridges being raised do not hamper fire trucks because he phones the bridge tender when a fire call comes in so that the bridge will not be raised.

Chief Luciano said that there is an exception to Smith's statement because the commercial barges can't be stopped as they approach a bridge and they are given the right of way.

The two District 1 chiefs also have reservations about the 20-story condominiums being built on Hutchinson Island three miles north of the county line.

Fire calls on 911 will not be routed through the Rio-Jensen Beach departments because St. Lucie County calls go to Ft. Pierce and not Stuart, where Martin County 911 calls are received.

"But fire district boundary lines are invisible as far as I'm concerned when buildings are on fire and lives are at stake," Luciano said, indicating the JB department would not refuse to answer a call.

Both chiefs, however, said they were "happy it's not our headache," referring to the new condominiums.

They agree that there are enough problems on Hutchinson Island now with buildings which lack pipestand systems so that hoses must be carried to the location of the blaze and then connected to the pumper truck. A pipestand provides water for connecting inch and a half fire hoses.

In the 20-story buildings the fires will have to be fought from the inside with firefighters going to whatever floors the fire is on, if they can get up to them.

With the present ladder truck, the departments can only reach the second floor "and that's by backing right up to the building which we can't often do," Luciano said.

Although the new ladder truck will cost an estimated $250,000, it's not a luxury item, Luciano said.

Luciano and Gass said they would likewise respond to a fire in District 2, meaning Sewall's Point specifically, if called, but agreed that what Sewall's Point needs is to establish its own fire department.

Lawsuit dropped, permit issued

A lawsuit brought by the Sewall's Point Town Board against its Board of Adjustments has been dropped and a compromise reached with the couple granted the zoning variance which led to the legal action being initiated.

Meeting in special session Tuesday night, the town board agreed to issue Mr. and Mrs. Chester Smith a permit to build a home in the Archipelago subdivision after the Smiths agreed to some alterations in the original design of the house.

The special session was called after hours of conciliatory discussion which included the Smiths, Mayor Edward H. Gluckler and Town Attorney James Knight.

The agreement, approved by the town board, calls for the Smith's house to be located two feet further inland from the shoreline and two feet to be lopped off the width of the attached garage. The Smith's original plans located a portion of the building 17 feet from the shore instead of the required 25-foot setback.

In a related action, the town board also voted to drop its suit for an injunction to rescind the variance granted in July by the board of adjustments. The town board took action against the adjustments board at the request of two dissenting adjustment board members, Chairman John Rossiter and Gerald O'Brien, who argued that the variance granted the Smiths was unnecessary and therefore illegal.

A Catch-22 situation developed at last week's regular town board session when the Smiths demanded they be given their building permit and Mrs. Smith charged that the law required the town to issue the permit 15 days after requirements were met.

When the town's attorney, Jim Knight, asked where she had found that law she replied, "It states it on the town's building permit requirements form."

The board, however, took no action on the Smith's request at that time.

The complaint, which names the Smiths along with members of the town's board of adjustments as defendants, was scheduled for a hearing Friday before Circuit Court Judge L. B. Vocelle.

Mirror Editor Dick Campbell was nominated to serve a second term as president of the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce this week. Jayne Petersen, of Stained Glass by Jayne, was nominated to serve as vice president.

The committee nominated William Keele as secretary and Art Hansen as treasurer for the 1981 year.

Directors nominated to serve included two-year directors Art Roberts of A. Goode Florist, Bob Gorman of Mac's Bike Shop and Peg Meissner of The Mirror.

One year directors included Marg Paris of Paris Inn Shopp, Richard Zurich of Cass Rio Boats, Fred Meeker of Tara Trailers, Barbara Torow of Action First Realty, Ron Mitchell of Jensen Beach Bank, Charles Otto of Jensen Beach Discount Patio and Gene Greenwood.

Officers will be elected at the annual meeting on November 21.

In other action, the Chamber directors accepted the offer of Fred Nettare, owner of WRIT, to wire the Chamber office so that Christmas music could be played over loudspeakers for the holidays. Nettare also offered to prepare a tape-recorded presentation on Jensen Beach for tourists who seek information. The tape would be played in the Chamber office.

Samaritans Calling

BY NELLIE D. COOK

BY NELLIE D. COOK

We of the Samaritans are sorry to tell you we have lost two very valuable men since the last meeting.

First our president, George Krauss. Owing to a significant promotion in his profession as a civil engineer at the atomic plant with added responsibilities involved, George resigned as president. We rejoice in his success and good fortune, but will miss his hearty laugh and guiding hand when things get rough.

Best of luck to you and your family, George, and we are happy to know you have stayed on as a Samaritan Member. Samaritan George.

Bob Nydam, one of our competent and experienced drivers for the past five years, also resigned. You, too, will be sadly missed, Bob, but we understand. You, too, have a heavy load of work. Our best to you, Marion and boys. Don't forget to drop around and say "Hi."

We are most fortunate to have Barbara Stevens, our vice president, who has stepped up to the presidency until our election of officers for the coming year. Barbara is competent and well- informed in the work as president, we are pleased to say.

A note from the current E.M.T. class who are taking their training at North County Tech. Their class is now engaged in the clinical phase of their course, and are attending St. Mary's Hospital in West Palm Beach. State exams will be held February 16, 1981. Good luck to you students. We know you will make us proud of you and will be real Good Samaritans.

I heard the nicest report about the teams of three ladies who clean the interiors of our vehicles each Saturday. They are to be commended on their super cleaning job.

Hope you girls are putting your names in the text book hanging inside the cage door. The only way we have of thanking you personally is by signing your names for us each week. I understand there is more than one team involved. Thank you so very much, ladies.

It was the pleasure of the Florida Association of Emergency Technicians to have as their speaker at the Nov. 6 meeting, State Patrol Officer Beard. In addition to giving a very informative talk on the law as it affects ambulance crews, he showed us a very fine movie, filmed in California, portraying a couple of teenagers, and all the problems they had, beginning with one mistake driving their vehicle. This was not an ambulance, but a private vehicle, but we all agreed if all new drivers could see the film, there would be so much lower accident risk on our highways.

The next F.A.M.T. meeting will be held Monday, Dec. 1, at the Samaritans building. This will be our annual meeting and our new slate of officers will be chosen at that time. 7:30 p.m.

HOPE FOR HEALTH

Keys to Good Health Naturally

By Dr. Jack L. Webb

One of the most common questions people ask themselves is when do I really need to consult a doctor for my back ache?

The following check list represents a good guideline:

When the backache persists or worsens instead of getting better.

When you have more than one painful attack in a year.

When it doesn't improve with a day of rest.

When you have numbness or tingling in your arm or leg.

When your backaches increase in frequency or severity.

When you have other symptoms with your backache, such as urinary problems, swelling or fever.

When pain interferes with your sleeping.

When you are injured at work.

When you are involved in an automobile accident, or other accident.

Vial of Life is for everyone

BY AILSA DEWING

What's the Vial of Life? Ask Bertha Anderson of Sewall's Point.

One recent Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Anderson lay on her living room davenport watching a Dolphins game. She was home alone. Suddenly she felt as though she'd been hit in the chest with a sledge hammer. The pain was so intense, she says she rolled off onto the floor. Somehow she managed to get to the phone, dial 911 and give her name. Then she passed out.

Mrs. Anderson didn't have a history of heart trouble. But she is under treatment for emphysema, asthma, chronic bronchitis and arthritis.

With the assistance of Sgt. Louis Savini of the Sewall's Point Police Department who was monitoring the 911 call, the Jensen Area Samaritans were directed to Mrs. Anderson's home.

As the medics were transporting Mrs. Anderson to the ambulance, Sgt. Savini saw a Vial of Life medical information form lying on a table and he took it to the emergency room personnel at Martin Memorial Hospital.

Although Mrs. Anderson hadn't finished completing the Vial of Life form, the information she had filled in told hospital personnel what medication she was taking, what ailments she was being treated for, and that she had no known allergies.

"They were able to give me something for the pain and to begin treatment immediately," Mrs. Anderson relates, adding that a massive coronary is "a very painful thing, I found out.

"I really feel the Vial of Life saved my life."

Bertha Anderson obtained her Vail of Life at a pharmacy but a Red Cross volunteer program being co-sponsored by the American Association of Retired Persons is preparing to make the Vial of Life available to all Martin County residents.

The Vial of Life consists of four integral parts: a paper which contains such vital information as the resident's name (each family member in a home has an individual form), medical conditions and medication being taken, allergies, references for the family physician, clergyman, next-of-kin, and other pertinent information; a vial, such as those containing pills or capsules, with a red-and-white "Vial of Life" label; and two "Vial of Life" decals.

When the form is completed it is folded and placed in the vail.

The vial is placed inside the refrigerator and one decal is affixed to the refrigerator door; the other is placed on a front window to alert emergency personnel that a "Vial of Life" is on the premises.

Although the Red Cross program was originated primarily for persons living alone and physically handicapped people, Martin County's program will be aimed at reaching all families.

The form for the county also includes a parental waiver so that in an emergency first aid can be given a child when the parents can't be reached immediately.

A massive volunteer effort is being organized by Pearl Wyse Health Committee Chairman of the AARP and Margaret G. Evans, manager of the Martin County Chapter, American Red Cross.

After recruiting numerous volunteers and soliciting donations to provide the materials, the two women are setting up training classes that begin Wednesday. During 40 two-hour single sessions, volunteers will be trained in filling out the forms and then begin a door-to-door campaign urging county residents to participate.

In the initial phase, only 6,000 of the county's 65,000 residents will be reached because funds for supplies are needed and donations must be solicited to provide them.

In Jensen Beach and Rio, as well as on Hutchinson Island, there is also a shortage of volunteers, Wyse said.

Anyone wishing to volunteer time or funding, or assist in any way, may call 287-2002 or 334-5806.

VITAL SIGN in the Vial of Life program is displayed on a front door or window to alert emergency medics of its existence. Pearl Wyse, chairman of the American Association of Retired Persons health committee looks on while Martin Chapter American Red Cross Manager Margaret Evans demonstrates the placement.

TAPED IN PLACE the Vial of Life is out of the way but right up front when taped to the shelf as Margaret Evans is shown doing.

The Chamber drive

With two teams working hard, the Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce is seeking a record number of memberships and a record budget this year. The ladies are facing off the men in a drive that has taken a circus atmosphere.

Bill Keele, head of Dolphin Motel, is chairman of the men's team, and Barbara Torow, head of Action First Realty, is the chairman of the women's team. Monday, the two teams met at the Chamber office to divide up the memberships to be renewed.

The excitement is being spread among all the members as the workers try to get as many members as possible before noon today (Wednesday), and to finish up their new and renewal membership cards before the noon Friday deadline in the contest.

Friday night, at the annual meeting of the Chamber, the winners will be announced, and officers and directors of the next year will be elected.

The Chamber is one of the most important organizations in the community. Being unincorporated, the Jensen Chamber serves as an ad hoc government to the county commission, making suggestions for improvements in service and helping the county better serve the communities of Jensen Beach, Hutchinson Island and Rio.

We wish both teams success. The real winners in the membership drive will be the people of our area. A stronger Chamber of Commerce will mean a stronger Jensen Beach area.

Animal abuse

A large number of complaints in St. Lucie County have led to several citations of citizens for animal abuse. This must shock the minds of people who believe that animals should be loved, not abused.

It should also shock some of those who tire of their pets and let them roam free, dropping them off in a distant neighborhood or at the humane society animal shelter.

The laws for enforcement of animal cruelty experiences are on the books. They should be used. Also, public education would help those who have less feeling for animals than the majority of people.

Some time and effort should be spent by the St. Lucie County Commission seeking some answers to a growing problem.

They fight for sight

One of the most pleasurable days of the year is "White Cane Day," sponsored by the local Lions Clubs.

We have seen the Lion members in shopping centers, at banks and post offices, collecting for their favorite project, funds to save sight and benefit the blind.

It is a good feeling to know that so many care. It is also a good feeling to help the Lions promote their special day. We have been doing it, just as they have, for 19 years.

We salute the Lions. They do good work.

Bafalis hits IRS power

By CONGRESSMAN SKIP BAFALIS

According to Section Eight of the U.S. Constitution, "The Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises ..."

Unfortunately, however, the Internal Revenue Service doesn't see things that way. In fact, the IRS now apparently feels it can ignore the Congress and make tax policy on its own.

That seems to be the lesson in the latest IRS directives regarding use of the home as an office for a second income and rental of property to a close relative.

If you own rental property and rent it to a close relative, you should no longer be entitled to the normal deductions involved in owning rental property, says the IRS, apparently because the agency feels Americans cannot be trusted to determine what a "fair market" rental might be when a relative is involved.

The same holds true if you're going to be away from your home for six months or a year and decide to rent it to a relative, rather than entrust it to a stranger.

But the IRS' distrust of the taxpayers doesn't end there.

If you have a second job — and all too many Americans are forced to because of the high cost of living brought on by Congress' reckless spending policies — the IRS says you shouldn't be able to deduct any of the legitimate business expenses; the use of a small portion of your home as an office.

To reach that conclusion, the IRS had to fly in the face of a tax court decision which says such deductions can be claimed if that home office is a person's principle place of business for that business.

So, when members of Congress informed the IRS they felt the agency was going far beyond what the legislation intended, the IRS decided to ignore that message.

To bring the IRS back where it belongs, I have introduced legislation to tell the agency specifically just what it can and cannot do in these instances.

However, it is imperative the Congress to reassert itself, to take back from myriad rule-making agencies, departments, bureaus and administrations the power to control people's lives.

When unelected bureaucrats propose a rule or regulation which flies in the face of responsibility or prove unpopular, there is no where for the people to go to get redress. They can't vote out of office the bureaucrat who promulgated the rule, because the bureaucrat isn't answerable to anyone. And that certainly wasn't the intention of the founding fathers when they created this Republic.

They called for a representative form of government, one in which the people send men and women to Washington to work in their behalf — but who can be thrown out of office if they fail in that mission.

However, just as Congress has abandoned its responsibility for developing sound fiscal policy, so have it abandoned its duties as the chief rule-making agency.

And it abandoned both duties for the same reason — it's easier than making the tough decisions required to balance the budget than to develop a sane national policy.

Hopefully, however, with the changes due to take effect in January, the Congress will reassert itself and take back the authority it has delegated wilynily to the federal bureaucracy.

Dick Campbell

A ditch isn't safe harbor

The St. Lucie estuary is one of the most beautiful in the world. Combined with the Indian River, the waters offer boaters and fishermen just about everything that can be imagined in bay and river, canal and creek.

There is salt water in the ocean, with brackish water in varying degrees moving upstream to the fresh waters from the middle of the state.

There is every kind of fish, and every kind of boating available, and every portion of the estuary is a different kind of beauty, wondrous to behold.

Perhaps that is why I became so concerned with the issue of a bridge over the C-24 canal.

Along with all that beauty, nature has provided the boater with some of the best protection against a hurricane that anyone would imagine.

It would take nature to provide that, for nature offers people and animals with all the protection they need to survive in a world designed by nature for their survival.

Proponents of the bridge want to get to lands that need access to be developed. Opponents of the bridge do not want their property values to be challenged by a bridge in their midst, nor do they want the rural atmosphere of their homes to be endangered by more people moving into that area south of the canal.

But, one of the arguments used by the opponents was that C-24 offered "safe harbor" to boats in a hurricane.

That is a dangerous and reckless thing to say, and it is my hope to dispel any thought that the ditch they call C-24 is anything more than it is, a ditch.

C-24 is about a mile long from the floodgates dam to the outlet to the North Fork of the St. Lucie River. It is about as straight as a ditch can be, has medium-high banks and the South Florida Water Management District lands that border its banks are as devoid of trees as they can be.

Any boat wanting safe anchor would have to anchor to both sides of the ditch. That would block any other boats from coming or going.

If a hurricane would move its winds to the east or west, the boats in the ditch would tumble together like so much cordwood, rolling down to the river or up to the dam.

It just isn't safe harbor. It isn't safe for anything.

In Hurricane David, Capt. Pete Robinson and I took the Fran E and my Salli up the North Fork, seeking a place to hide from the oncoming hurricane winds. We found a secluded canal in the mangroves and tied our boats off with lines and anchors.

Mangroves move with the wind. They do not break off like trees do, and can't be uprooted like trees. Anchors wrapped around the base of mangroves will hold.

We left our two boats tied up there until the next afternoon. Pete's tuna tower had lost some canvas, but that was all the damage due to the rocking motion of the mangroves. I had tied an extra line to the railing, and the rail pulled out of its socket from the pressure of the wind, but that was all the damage I had.

If the 48-foot Fran E and the 34-foot Salli had been in that ditch, our topsides would probably be blown off even if the anchors had held.

I checked it out with some of the boaters, asking what safety would be in the C-24. Capt. Pete said, "I certainly wouldn't go up there," and Herman Reitz, head of Stuart Marine, couldn't see why anyone would want to go there with the miles and miles of mangrove-lined banks of the North and South Forks of the St. Lucie. Jim McFarland, of the OMC test center, agreed with the danger of being in the ditch in a hurricane.

The publicity attendant to the protests of building a bridge across C-24 might just make some people think that C-24 would be safe harbor in hurricane, or subconsciously think of C-24 in time of a future hurricane.

That would be a very dangerous thing for any boater, and I hope that all will heed a warning. For "safe harbor," the C-24 is a dangerous ditch, and should be avoided.

A world to forget

Reporters aren't supposed to get emotional, you know. The old ones are supposed to have seen it all and built up scar tissue on their soft spots that can't be penetrated. They'd yawn at a hanging, fall asleep in a riot and practice blowing their bubble gum at a three-alarm fire in an orphanage, they'll tell you.

And lord knows I've been plodding my weary way through the sod for many a day and watched enough ocen gored to have developed some degree of sang froid.

So how come it's been a week of goosebumps and lumpy throat — low-grade melancholia with a touch of the vacant stare and damp eyes?

I can only attribute it to a severe case of nostalgia, remembrance of things past that persisted in holding my attention all week.

It all began with a tour of the Historical Society's Gracious Living Wing which, if you're over 50, is a walk backward into places you've been before filled with objects you knew in other times where people long-gone walked and talked.

But an hour of that isn't enough to bring anyone out in a bad rash (there's enough to delight you to keep it from being depressing). Unless you should go, within the next few days, to a Veterans Day memorial service.

Now anybody should have built up an immunity to coming unglued over flag-waving and patriotic songs by the age of 30, right? Well, let's say my resistance was low or I'm getting more susceptible as I get older. Maybe murder and mayhem I can watch but I can't stand too close a look at the first half of the 1900's. Continued exposure can be hazardous to my happy-go-luckiness.

But the truth is that the generation before mine — the one that came in with or just around the turn of the century was going to get an unfair share of hard times. Living was gracious in the sense that it was slower paced, more humdrum and less sophisticated, with time and heart to appreciate simpler things. But it was full of drudgery, too. For women, washing and ironing alone took two days of a week. A man's workweek was a minimal 48 hours, when he could get it. Make do and do without were a way of life — planned obsolescence and credit cards hadn't arrived. In fact, "Thou shalt not buy on credit," was the 11th commandment until it was rescinded in the 1930s.

Nearly every family in those years had one relative who was tubercular; scarlet fever was a springtime killer and polio, the plague of summer.

World War One was followed by a worldwide depression and many had just gotten up off their knees when the Great Depression hit. Then as those hard times began to soften, World War Two arrived to take the sons of World War One veterans. The sweethearts who waited for the return of the doughboys were the sorrowing mothers of World War Two and the Korean War, and the heartsick grandmothers of Vietnam warriors.

There were 150 people, more or less, who attended the Veterans Day services conducted by veterans' groups Tuesday at the Jensen Beach Woman's Club. Remembering the veterans just doesn't bring out the crowds like it used to.

The ranks of the first generation are dwindling and we of the second generation seem to have shelved much of our sentiment. We were the children bystanders during the bleak years, the New Deal would trade us our future self-reliance for security.

"Waste not and want not" haven't been the watchwords of the second half of the century. You don't create jobs with that kind of attitude. And the nuclear age has robbed all succeeding generations of complacency. Like a toboggan ride in the dark, it's exhilarating but there's a feeling it can all go over the cliff any moment.

I guess that's what brought on this chronic case of dolor. Some of us are at an awkward age. We're young enough to remember a world that trusted, worked, and hoped for the best and we're old enough to know it won't be back again.

To end on a happier note, let's talk about operations. The Saturday Open House at Martin Memorial Hospital, put on by the Operating Room nurses was very interesting and informative. The gals lectured like pros and fielded all kinds of questions.

But did you know they have music to operate by? Music is piped into surgery nowadays and there's a choice of classical, popular, country western — even hard rock.

When I go for my operation, I plan to ask the surgeon's musical preference. If he says, "hard rock" I think I'll ask for a second opinion. I realize I wouldn't have to listen to it, it's just that I'd rather be cut up to Chopin than Alice Cooper.

The world will be a little sadder place without Sally Latham. She was something of an anomaly as a writer: erudite yet entertaining, informative yet captivating in her special style. She was truly one of a kind as a feature writer, tops in her field. I only knew her professionally, as the editorial staffs of The News Tribune in Fort Pierce and The Mirror in Jensen Beach, but never saw her really flustered or irritated with the world around her. She was always gracious, composed, smiling, someone to admire. And the most remarkable facet of her character and personality was that neither changed appreciably during the long months she fought so resolutely for her continued existance. Many of us don't leave our footprints in the sands of time but Sally did and she will be missed, but never forgotten.

HOUSING FOR SINGLES

QUESTION: I am considering purchasing a 20-unit apartment building. It is located in an area which appears to cater to professional singles. I have confidence in my ability to keep the property rented currently, and I feel it might make sense to eventually convert the property to condominiums. I am wondering how current trends relating to singles purchasing homes will affect my future conversion plans.

ANSWER: The number of singles purchasing their own homes and condominiums has gone up dramatically in recent years. A study conducted by the National Association of Realtors indicates that in 1975 singles bought one out of every 12 homes sold. The Association predicts that this figure will jump to one in 10 by the end of 1981.

The study also indicates that, as a group, single men and women and unmarried couples accounted for somewhere between 10 percent and 20 percent of all homes purchased in 1979.

This trend is expected to continue because:

(1) Social attitudes are changing. The proportion of 25- to 34-year-old women who remain single increased from 28 percent in 1960 to 43 percent in 1976.

(2) More women are moving into better paying jobs, which allows them to purchase homes in their own names.

(3) Credit has become more available for single women because of the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, which forbids sex discrimination in granting home and condominium purchase loans.

It sounds like this trend lends itself nicely to your anticipated purchase and conversion plans.

Martin OR Open House draws crowd

BY AILSA DEWING

More than 125 people were admitted to surgery at Martin Memorial Hospital Saturday afternoon – not as patients but as guests of the Operating Room Nurses.

It was an Open House conducted by OR nurses of the Treasure Coast Chapter in observance of Operating Room Nurses Day.

The purpose, according to Linda Gottron, chapter president, was to allay fears people have about operating rooms and to display some of the new techniques and equipment available to surgery personnel.

Visitors toured the surgery department in groups of ten while OR nurses and technicians revealed mysteries and dispelled old wives' tales.

For example, if, despite an inventory of sponges and absorbent pads taken before and after an operation, one inadvertently gets left inside the patient, it will show up during post-op X-ray. There are needles that dissolve also.

The tour, which took about 30 minutes, began with one of the hospital's eight operating rooms where nurses described the procedures involved and equipment used, including an explanation of all the surgical scalpels.

In the osteopathic or bone-setting room, nurses displayed the various metal and plastic pins used to keep fractures aligned and a television X-ray maching that provides instant re-play.

From there, visitors were taken to the recovery room to learn the procedures and equipment used to aid the post-operative patient.

Martin Memorial has a staff of 40 surgeons who perform some 500 operations a month. As yet, open-heart surgery and organ transplants are not done at the local hospital.

A surgical team will usually consist of the surgeon, an assistant surgeon, a registered nurse, the anesthetist, and a certified surgical technician.

Twenty OR nurses and technicians served as guides Saturday and acclaimed the Open House a success. "People were interested, they asked a lot of questions, and we had quite a few children," said Nurse Gottron.

Boaters plan Christmas parade

The Marine Industries Association of Martin County, in cooperation with local yacht clubs, the Power Squadron and the Coast Guard Auxiliary, is planning a Christmas Boat Parade on Saturday, Dec. 20 at 7 p.m.

Illuminated and decorated boats will form in the North Fork of the St. Lucie River in Stuart and proceed in a southerly direction from the area of red marker 4 to Frazier Creek, then circle along the east bank of the St. Lucie northerly past the Roosevelt Bridge back to the starting point. Security and direction will be provided by the Marine Patrol, Sheriff Department, and the Coast Guard Auziliary.

Those individuals wishing to participate in the Boat Parade should register with Orlando Carbia in Stuart at 283-2100. There will be a meeting in December just prior to the Parade for all participants.

Two trophies will be presented by the Marine Industries Association; one will be a continuing trophy to the organization with the greatest number of participants (this will be presented permanently to the organization winning three years in a row); the other will be presented to the individual boat judged most attractive and apropriate.

Evinrude marine school is open

The Ralph S. Evinrude School of Marine Technology is now in operation at Florida Institute of Technology, located in Jensen Beach.

The role of the school is to provide the skilled, professionally trained mechanics necessary to maintain, analyze faults, repair and overhaul the complex outboard motor of today.

The course of study was developed in cooperation with the training staffs of leading outboard manufacturers and dealerships. The eleven week, 440 hour Outboard Mechanics Program is equipped with professional instructors, audio-visual teaching aids, over 60 motors, all major makes (4-200 HP), test and overhaul fixtures and test tanks. Students have ranged from 18 to 60 years of age. Maximum class size is 24. Upon successful completion of the course and tests, an OMC Factory Certificate is awarded.

Additional courses in the planning stages are I-O and Diesel.

The new facility and air conditioned classrooms are located on the Intracoastal Waterway.

New classes start on January 22 and June 22, 1981.

Webb returns from seminar

Dr. Jack L. Webb of Webb Chiropractic Clinic, P.A., returned this week from an intensive four-day postgraduate seminar in Miami. The doctor participated in various study sessions devoted to recent developments, new technical procedures and practices in the chiropractic profession. His staff attended advanced courses for the assistants.

Dr. Webb was one of over 3,300 to participate in the advanced seminar which was conducted by the Parker Chiropractic Research Foundation in Fort Worth, Texas. This was the 250th such gathering sponsored by PCRF.

Dr. Webb continues to attend the PCRF Seminars held throughout the country in an effort to continually update, reinforce, and stay in touch with the advanced procedures of the chiropractic profession. He is a graduate of Lincoln College in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Foundation starts annual fund drive

The Indian River Community College Foundation, Inc., the non-profit organization working to provide scholarship funds and other services and programs to the students at Indian River Community College, recently began their Fifth Annual Fund Drive.

A total of $20,108.27 has already been received although the fund drive did not officially start until November 1st. The drive will continue through June 30, 1981.

Broken down by the four county service district of the college, the fund drive has received $8,175.00 from Indian River County; $4,981.27 from Martin County; $2,232.00 from St. Lucie County; and $4,740.00 from areas outside of the college's four county service district.

Since its inception in 1965, the Indian River Community College Foundation, Inc. — originally named the Indian River Area Endowment Corporation — has awarded over $60,000.00 in scholarship monies to fifty seven deserving students.

Officers and directors of the foundation represent a diverse sampling of professional occupations from our four-county area. The current officers of the Indian River Community College Foundation are: Standish L. Crews of Indian River County, president; Samuel A. Black of Indian River County, first vice president; Ira M. Mealpin, Jr., of St. Lucie County, second vice president; Mrs. Juanita D. Geary of Stuart, secretary; and Ben L. Bevan, Sr., of St. Lucie County, treasurer. Dr. Kathy Kirry Wochkley, director of development at Indian River Community College, is the executive secretary.

There are eleven additional directors to the Indian River Community College Foundation. Representing St. Lucie County are Edwin Colean, Dr. Herrman A. Heise, president of Indian River Community College, Charles S. Mikey; and Mrs. Ida C. Morgan. From Martin County, the directors are Mrs. T. R. Chambers and Guy N. Cromwell. Okeechobee County directors are Ben A. Dixon and William L. Lendry. Representing Indian River County are John M. Luther, Vincent J. Montuoro, and John R. Wyatt. The president of the Indian River Community College Alumni Association also serves on the board.

One of the outstanding programs of the Indian River Community College Foundation, Inc., is the President's Club. Membership in this club is composed of alumni and friends of the college who contribute $1,000.00 or more each year to the foundation. Those donations may be restricted to scholarships, buildings, or other academic programs at the college at the time the gift is made.

Through the President's Club, current income is provided to the foundation enabling it to allocate financial resources where the need is greatest. Gifts to the Indian River Community College Foundation are tax deductible.

In previous years, the foundation, through its annual fund drive, has raised the necessary funds to provide a student union building on the main campus in Fort Pierce.

Its most recent project — "Indian River Cuisine" — was completed last year and will provide additional scholarship funds for students graduating from Indian River Community College and transferring to four year universities. "Indian River Cuisine" is a cookbook representing the college's four county service district. It is composed of over 500 pages with 1,190 recipes presented in 18 different food sections.

For further information on the Indian River Community College Foundation, its programs, or contributions to the foundation, contact the development office at Indian River Community College at 464-2000 in St. Lucie County, 567-7132 in Indian River County, 287-2006 in Martin County, and 763-6527 in Okeechobee County.

MR. & MRS. JOSEPH FORSBERG

Forsbergs to celebrate 60th anniversary

Friends and neighbors of Margaret and Joseph Forsberg will honor the 60th anniversary of the Rio couple's marriage Wednesday, Nov. 19, at an afternoon coffee hour.

Although not exactly schoolday sweethearts, the Forsbergs did attend school together at PS 8 in Beford Park in the Bronx.

After that, both were in military service during World War One -- Mrs. Forsberg with the women's branch of the US Marine Corps, the Marinets, and Joseph with the 51st Pioneer Infantry, which saw service in the American Expeditionary Forces and the Army of Occupation in Germany.

The Forsbergs were married Nov. 19 in New York City and for 50 years made their home in Oceanside, N.Y. Their daughter, Audrey, still resides on Long Island. Son, Robert, lives in Minneapolis.

Margaret and Joseph are well-known as charter members of the Martin County Senior Activities Club and the Rio Civic Club. Joseph also plays violin with a five-piece senior citizens orchestra but arthritis in her hands has curtailed Margaret's piano playing.

The Forsbergs first began coming here for the winter in 1963. In 1968 they purchased property on Olive Street in Rio and moved into their new mobile home year-round, after Joseph retired from his advertising job with the American Bankers Association.

Avid travelers, the Forsbergs have given up their annual motor trips because of the cost of gasoline but this year they made a trip to Hawaii. Born in Norway, Joseph also made a trip home for the first time 75 years after leaving for the U.S.

Grandparents of four, the Forsbergs also have a great grandson.

Asked what the secret is to a long and happy marriage, Joseph Forsberg says, "Compatibility."

"It wasn't all smooth sailing but we had a good home life and we kept active. You have to give and take and be a little understanding," he said.

The seniors coming down from the north like to tell about all the services they have up there for the seniors and wonder why we don't have them here. Those things don't 'just happen' some one has to make a mighty effort to get them started. Really, we have not done too badly in just a very few years. There is the MCCA, courtesy bus, meals-on-wheels, etc.; the TCSS Congregate Meals and Recreation Programs; the SAC card parties and socials; AARP blood pressure checks, free flu shots and swim classes; and many others that are listed in this column, from time to time, like the following.

Diabetes screening, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wed. Nov. 19; Blood Pressure screening, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Thur. Dec. 4; Glaucoma screening, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wed. Jan. 21. All these at Medicine Shoppe, 729 Colorado Ave., Stuart (info. 287-0601).

Then, for seniors 65 yrs and over (5b and over with chronic illness) there are FREE flu shots, every Fri. 1 to 4 p.m. at the Martin County Health Dept. (old Post Office) E. 7th St., Stuart.

Also, Free Blood Pressure screening, Thur. Nov. 20, at 12:30 p.m. (just before, AARP meeting) at the First Presbyterian Church, North River Shores.

Finally, let's not forget the Log Cabin Senior Center that has been under way since July 1979. It's 'a-coming,' well at least the log walls and chimney are still standing. So, the seniors of this area do have a lot going for them and the more 'workers' the more services can be obtained.

When seniors were asked, "What's the good news this week?", none could come up with a single item. But, here's one, maybe a bit far-fetched. Wall Street had one of its greatest weeks, ever. So, those seniors with a few stocks should have a little something to smile about.

The Lame Duck Session was chewed over with seniors finding Congress eager to cut taxes but reluctant to cut expenses, so inflation goes unchecked?

Then, the seniors talked 'foreign cars,' along these lines. When Detroit makes better cars, they'll sell like 'hot cakes.' But, when they have to sell service insurance at $3-400, so folks can afford to get them fixed, that's not a step in the right direction. It seems our philosophy now is to correct every problem with the expenditure of more money, it's never find out what is wrong and correct it. Hence another inflation push.

Also, along the same line, they noted that Japan has given up on the idea of establishing car assembly plants in USA, saying that they prefer Tiawan, because of the better quality workers. That's not good, unions could obtain better member job security by working with management to produce the best cars in the world. They did it once, they can do it again.

There has been a lot of interest lately in 'Lifecare Communities' and a recent senior publication from North Hampton, Mass. had feature story on them, that brought out the following.

They sure sound good, but are costly, so check very carefully to be sure you will get what you expect. Such things as: how many meals are supplied; how complete is the maintenance; health care grows more important each year, so find out if there are resident doctors and nurses, complete enough housekeeping service; and how are all the other 'amenities of life' handled. There is a lot to consider, ask someone now living there.

CHAPTER EVENTS

The AARP ExCom-Board meeting was held, Thur. Nov. 13 at the Roochman site of the Indian River College on South Federal Hwy. John Vance, president, called the meeting to order at 1:30 p.m. and found he had a quorum in spite of the awful attrition of chapter officials: Director, Wendy Maris died in Sept.; President 'Chic' Macintrye, killed in car accident in Sept.; Director, Bob Maurer had to go into nursing home in Oct.; Director Al Tucker, in hospital recovering from heart attack; Director Mildred Cignana needed to take care of her husband Fred, who is undergoing medical treatments; and Director, Ernie Curwen was still recovering from minor surgery. John said he hoped that was the end.

The routine business of approving bills for payment and the reading of millutes and treasury report were quickly handled, so the committee chairmen could make their more detailed reports.

Ruth Wodruff, program chairman said that she had arranged for a speaker at the regular meeting, Thur. Nov. 20. She has obtained, Doctor Harry Phipps, from the staff of the Martin Memorial Hospital, who will speak on 'Emergency Room' and 'Ambulance' service. As, that is something that many of us may be confronted with, it should be very interesting to learn more about it.

Pearl Wyse, Co-Chairman (with Red Cross member) of the Vial-of-Life program, pointed out that months ago the chapter members with great enthusiasm, voted to participate in the program. But, now when the need for volunteers and donations is great, they don't seem to be much interested. This points-up, what was mentioned way back there in paragraph one, "The seniors can obtain many services, but someone has to make a mighty effort and the more workers the more the services obtainable."

So, all AARPers who can spare the time, get in touch with Pearl at 334-5806, so she can tell you about the volunteer training classes that start Wed. Nov. 19, in the Red Cross Bldg., 2 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Ocean Breeze Park will be handled by: Margret Weeks, 25 Cocoa St.; George Dean, 4 Broad St.; and Marion Ivers, 6th St. Ext. If the other Mobile Home Parks and Condos will send in the names of their representatives they will be published here, all the folks will know who to get in touch with for information.

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY

Wed. Nov. 19: Senior Activities Club, 1 p.m. at Stuart Recreation Center for Cards, Crafts and Refreshments, Swimming, 1:45 - 2:45 p.m. at the Community pool, Martin County High School. Also, Diabetes screening and Vial of Life instructions (see above).

Thur. Nov. 20: Regular AARP meeting, 1:30 p.m. 1st Presbyterian Church (Blood pressure checks at 12:30).

Fri. Nov. 21: Free Flu Shots, 1-4 p.m. Martin County Health Dept. Old Post Office Bldg., E. 7th St., Stuart. Also, Swimming, 1:45-2:45 p.m.

Some returning 'snow birds' mentioned that they found it too hot and dry around here, hence the week of cooler weather and a few showers; we aim to please? Not so, up there in the northlands, as 'returnees' report such things as: had to scrape ice off windshield the morning; we left; thermometer never got above 40 for 3 days in a row. So, when you see the big blue van rambling around, loaded with: Nat Chase; Doris Lehning; Ida Waser, Beulah Mertz; Belva Dean, Marry Mumsey and Dorothy Huggins, you'll know what they are up to.

PARK EVENTS

Saturday night dances got off to a happy start last Saturday at 8:30 p.m in the clubhouse. There was a good crowd, who checked-out the resurfaced floors and found it OK for all types of dancing; ballroom, square, pattern; folk, and mixer. Hobby Class with Instructor Mary Ann Blanchard is going strong, Tues. and Thur. 9 to 12 a.m. in the clubhouse, working on: Knitting; Needlepoint; Macrame; Crocheting; tinsle painting; beadwork; novelty craft, etc. Mary Ann says there are 20 students so far, but room for many more; sign up she says, and make something for your granddaughter's Christmas present.

Pickings are a little slim on area fishing front now

BY DICK LUNDIN

AT WEATHER TURBULENCE

n't helped area fishing any and those fishermen with dogged perseverance and those blessed with ridiculous oh luck are catching very y fish right now.

isn't even possible to pinpoint a hot spots because the fishing's ty up and down all over.

surf has whiting and pompano day and some blues the next. The es are out around the second bar you really have to cast way out if expect to land your cut bait where blues are feeding. You might catch nael bass, redfish or two in the ff, but don't count on it.

Possibly the best and most sistent spot for blues is around rter 19 in the St. Lucie River where ters trolling rag mops have been ing extremely well almost every y. Anglers fishing cut bait are portedly catching a few blues from Ernest Lyons Bridge over the ian River on East Ocean Boulevard st of downtown Stuart. That's the 25 bridge to many.

The deep holes in the Indian River ve been producing snapper anglers for boaters using whole fresh live shrimp. Those snappers like r shrimp with the heads on.

The black drum have just about nished and sheepshead, too, are rce.

Spotted seatrout prefer a clear river d haven't been too comfortable with condition of the Indian River tely. Small catches are being made. e at the mouth of Big Mud Creek h live shrimp. One boater reported ching weakfish in the river, but n't unusual for now.

FFSHORE, the current has been most too strong for any effective ttom fishing. There are sails out round 300 feet and dolphin even rther out. Spanish mackerel are ming for Clarkspoons and small drone poons just off the beach near the St ucie Inlet, and kings are being taken some extent at the Kingfish Hole low the inlet (live mullet) and on ve bait near the sea buoy in 35-40 ft. a tle northeast of the inlet. The ones at the Kingfish Hole are smokers but the ley kings are much smaller.

FROM THE MISS FORT PIERCE party boat going full days from the ort Pierce Marina (464-4828) Rita asano: "Fishing's picking up. Dech ve're getting good gray grouper to 5-6 (35 lbs); some nice vermillion snappers, sea bass and trigger fish. I have a good recipe for triggers. This is. After you fillet your trigger fish, cut it in half so you have pieces ¼ inch thick. Put a piece of boiled ham on top of the fillet and add two small pieces of Swiss cheese ¼ inch thick and an inch square. Add some mushrooms and spinach or any other dark green lettuce leaf. Top this with another slice of trigger fish. Put some lemon juice and margarine, a little garlic powder and paprika on top. Bake it for 20 minutes to a half hour at around 350 degrees. When the cheese melts, it's done. I tasted it in the Bahamas, and it's positively delicious, Dick. Be sure to try it soon!"

Tell me how you like it.

J. D. SACHS, from Manatee Bait and Tackle: "There are some sails way out in 300 feet and dolphin farther out in 600 ft. of water. There are a few wahoo around. The tide is running too hard for any good bottom fishing. Spanish mackerel are schooled in 30 ft. off the Holiday Inn. Bill Cross got 30 in two hours on Clarkspoons. There are big smoker kings taking live mullet down at the Kingfish Hole, and a few small ones in 35-40 ft. near the sea buoy off the St. Lucie Inlet. I don't know where the blues have gone now. We are all getting ready for the sailfish tournament Dec. 10-14. It's slow. The fish are few and far between. You just have to get lucky."

FROM THE BUCKHEAD RIDGE MARINA on the north shore of Lake Okeechobee just west of the Kissimmee River Bridge on SR 78, manager Frank Dobson: "It's been pretty windy over here and the bass fishing out in the lake has been slow because of it. They have been catching some bass here in the Rim Canal on purple plastic worms. In Government Cut, on the north side, they're catching some specks (black crappies) on live minnows drifting but the speck season hasn't really started here yet, Dick."

EARL GASTNER, Jensen Savannas guide: "Lots of nice bluegills (bream) and specks are being caught on little jigs late in the evening, but only a few bass. We'll have to get together and do some bass fishing early next month."

FROM D & M BAIT AND TACKLE, Muriel Weideman reporting from the south end of the Roosevelt Bridge on U.S. 1: "Fishing is terrible on the Roosevelt, just a few snook at night, but not too many. The drum and sheepshead seem to be long gone. This is no time to fish the Roosevelt, Dick. I'M sorry. I don't have any better news for you this week."

CHUCK SHEPHERD from the Bait Box in Jensen: "Fishing's not too bad. There are reportedly some weakfish in the river. Blues are scarce now but there are plenty of whiting in the surf. Earlier, there were blues at the Evans Crary (10 cent) Bridge. Gaynor Parris had 23 blues in two days trolling rag mops near Marker 19. Steve Vernon, 130 lbs. of Spanish mackerel, Clarkspoons and small drones about a mile off the St. Lucie Inlet. Walter Kulpak, 18 blues, cut mackerel and ribbon fish, Evans Crary."

FROM JENSEN BAIT AND TACKLE, Joe Varise: "Blues are not too great but seem best at the Evans Crary, near the St. Lucie Inlet and up the St. Lucie River. Whiting are good in the surf. Very few snook are being caught now. Snook fishing is best at the Fort Pierce jetties. Bass fishing's picking up in the Jensen Savannas. Trout fishing has been slow. The Indian River is pretty dirty. There are plenty of jack crevalles, mangrove snappers and some channel bass in the river. There are a few big croakers in the surf."

RON ELLIS, from the Snook Nook in Jensen: "The blues are scarce but the long cast out to the second bar seems to get some. Early morning fishing with cut bait is best. There are a few channel bass in the surf. The Ernest Lyons Bridge has some blues. There are a few pompano in the surf. Whiting are off and on in the surf depending on where the blues are. Rag mops are good trolling for blues around Marker 19. There are a few small snook around, mostly small and under five pounds."

The Nook's log: "Charles Wetaan, 23 whiting, cut shrimp, surf. Bob and Betty Haines, 20 whiting, same; Romeo and Pauline Garavalia, averaging 12 blues daily trolling rag mops in the St. Lucie near Marker 19. Ralph Golightly, Bill Fremsey and Bruce Fields, 26 blues, Crossroads. Lou Jensen, 12 blues, Krocs, Crossroads. Pete Peterson, 5 blues and a 50-6 tarpon, surf. Krocs. Art Miller, 13 blues and a grouper, cut mackerel. Ernest Lyons, John Bowman, 4 blues to 6-0, cut mackerel, surf. Tony Loggo, 2 snook to 9-0, red tailed hawk feathered jigs, Jensen Causeway. Jon Deschamps, 4 trout and 3 channel bass live shrimps. Herman's Bay. Mike Schneer, 6 trout, live shrimp, mouth of Big Mud Creek. John Crawford and Bob Duncan, 16 mangrove snappers, live shrimp.

Don't use drug-tipped arrows on wildlife

Florida's wildlife officers will be watching closely this bow-hunting season for persons attempting to take wildlife with a drug-tipped arrow.

Lt. Col. Brantley Goodson, director of the Division of Law Enforcement for the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, points out that drug-tipped arrows are "definitely illegal."

"A$150 cash reward will be paid from the Wildlife Alert program to a concerned citizen who recently took the time to report a hunter in the central part of the state who was charged with hunting with a drug-tipped arrow," Goodson said.

The Wildlife Alert program rewards persons who report violations of wildlife and fisheries laws in Florida when their assistance leads to an arrest. Reward funds are contributed by concerned citizens. The program is administered through a 13-person volunteer committee. Persons reporting violations or suspicious activities remain anonymous and are not required to testify in any court proceedings.

Goodson noted that persons illegally taking wildlife with a drug-tipped arrow usually have a strong tranquilizing chemical behind the head of the arrow. The drug acts to overdose and kill wildlife, even if the animal is merely grazed by an arrow.

SWAMP BUGGIES operating in the Big Cypress Wildlife Management Area must be registered with the National Park Service, beginning Dec. 31, according to the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Vehicles are weighed, photographed and inspected by Park Service personnel and a Park decal given to the vehicle in order for it to be registered.

Vehicles can be registered either at the Oasis Ranger Station on the Tamiami Trail or during two special inspection days scheduled by the Park Service and the Coalition of Concerned Citizens for the Big Cypress. The first of these inspections will be on Nov. 22 from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m. at Jack Gove's Gasolene Station on the Loop Road. The second will be on Nov. 23 at Jimmy Patton's, east of the Oasis Station on the Trail, the same hours.

For further information, call the Park Service at (813) 695-4111 or Coalition President Ruth Wallace at 345-0080.

FLORIDA'S NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGES will be open to hunters on a limited basis this season, according to Fred Stanberry, director of the Division of Wildlife for the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

"Three of these refuges will be open for waterfowl hunting this season," Stanberry said.

The refuges, Chassahowitzka, Lochatchee and Merritt Island, will be open during the established waterfowl season, he said, pointing out that in addition to permits issued by the federal refuges, persons must also have the appropriate state hunting license and state and federal waterfowl stamps. Steel shot is required in both the Chassahowitzka and Merritt Island refuges.

IF YOU HAVE AN EMPTY FREEZER, and want to fill it with largemouth bass and various freshwater panfish, look no further than Conservation Area 11A in Palm Beach County where the lowering of water levels by the South Florida Water Management District has caused the Commission to lift regular bag limits.

Tennis

BY TOM WALKENBURG
Director of Tennis, Indian River Plantation

The rain Saturday morning washed out the men's round robin, leaving 44 men looking for something else to do. It cleared up around 10:30 and several tournaments went on as practice. The event had to be postponed until next Saturday morning, 9 a.m.

Sunday the weather did an about face for the mixed doubles exhibition. The temperature rose to the 90's on a clear sunny day. All the players enjoyed profusely. Donna Roup and Christian Abadie def. Ann Flint and Tom Falkenburg 7-5, 6-4.

No. 1 at Trinity and comes from a tennis family. Donna's brother Dick Stockton is the touring pro for Sawgrass, and Donna is presently the Club Pro at Twin Oaks T.C. one of the Tri County league clubs.

When not conflicting with other events at the club, there will be a tennis exhibition on the pro court by the Porch every Sunday afternoon.

Florida's duck hunting season starts Nov. 26

FLORIDA DUCK HUNTERS may begin hunting migratory waterfowl beginning Wednesday, Nov. 26, according to Thomas M. Goodwin, chief of wildlife resources, Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

Goodwin said there is a new requirement this season that duck hunters use steel shot in shotguns when hunting in certain parts of the state, and that hunters should be sure to purchase steel shot before the start of the season. It is available only for 12 and 20 gauge shotguns.

The first phase of the duck and coot season will begin Nov. 26 and end Dec. 7. The second phase will begin Dec. 13 and end Jan. 19.

The only exception to the schedule occurs in Leon County and Lake Miccosukee in Jefferson County where waterfowl hunting is permitted only on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays during the statewide duck and coot season.

In addition, duck and coot hunting will be allowed in Leon County and Lake Miccosukee in Jefferson County Nov. 27-28, Dec. 25-26, Jan. 1-2 and Jan. 19.

Shooting hours will remain from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

Besides the Merritt Island National Wildlife Refuge, steel shot must be used in all gauge shotguns in Leon County, exclusive of Lake Talquin and the Ochlockonee River. Steel shot must also be used in Lake Miccosukee in Leon and Jefferson Counties and Orange Lake and Lochloosa Lake in Alachua County.

Other counties which require steel shot for the hunting of waterfowl, according to Goodwin, are Osceola, Broward, Dade, Glades and that portion of Brevard County east of I-95.

The taking of brant or geese is prohibited at any time in Florida, Goodwin emphasized.

The daily bag limit for taking of ducks is 100 points, based on the following system: redhead, ten; mallard, black duck, Florida duck, wood duck, and hooded merganser, 70 points; and the blue-winged teal, green-winged teal, pintail, gadwall, widgeon, shoveler, scaup (bluebill), American merganser, red-breasted merganser and all sea ducks, 10 points.

The fulvous tree duck and canvas back, 100 points and the ring-necked duck, ruddy duck, bufflehead, goldeneye and drake mallard, 25 points.

The daily bag limit for coot is 15.

Don't forget that all hunters should have a current hunting license and appropriate state and Federal duck stamp when hunting waterfowl in Florida.

Playoff-hopeful Dolphins brace for Fouts aerials

BY DICK LUNDIN

THAT VICTORY over the luckless San Francisco 49ers wasn't exactly artistic last Sunday afternoon, but it was a victory the now 6-5 Miami Dolphins needed to keep alive their flickering hopes for a playoff berth at season's end.

You'd have thought that Miami, coming off a fine 35-14 win over the potent Los Angeles Rams, would have polished off the 49ers with relative ease. San Francisco bringing a seven game losing streak into the Orange Bowl, but the young 49ers were fired up and stayed in the ball game to the bitter end.

Only a fine ball control drive by Miami's reborn offense in the closing minutes of the fourth quarter sealed the hard-won 17-13 verdict.

But, as is so often the case, now it's "out of the frying pan and into the fire" for the Dolphins, as they meet the 7-4 San Diego Chargers in the Orange Bowl at 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Because it isn't a sellout, this game will be blacked out in South Florida. Unless you can pick up WIRA, A Fort Pierce radio station, you'll just have to wait until Friday to find out how the Dolphins made out against San Diego. Station WIOD out of Miami will air the game but its almost impossible to pick it up at night.

SAN DIEGO figures to have all kinds of trouble running against the Miami defense that held San Francisco to just 23 yards in 17 carries, but running isn't the name of the game to San Diego, not by a long shot.

Those Chargers and quarterback Dan Fouts will keep the Orange Bowl air filled with footballs. In wide receivers John Jefferson and Charlie Joiner, and tight end Kellen Winslow, the Chargers have three of the top pass catchers in the NFL. Jefferson is being touted as possibly the best ever as he comes up with one brilliant reception after another downfield. Joiner, the wily veteran of many an AFC season, has a way of getting open that makes him a favorite target of that passin' man, Fouts.

THE BIG QUESTION, of course, is what will Coach Don Shula come up with to keep the Chargers from lighting up that Orange Bowl scoreboard too many times.

Last Sunday, Miami went with a game plan that saw three men rush the passer, Steve DeBerg. That gave DeBerg plenty of time to complete 29 passes - 12 to his backs - but the 280 yards gained passing could put but 13 points on the scoreboard, and seven of those were the "gift" of talent-rich, fumble-prone running back Tony Nathan who fumbled away a punt at the Miami 25.

Miami shut off the long pass and gave DeBerg the short one. The strategy worked although the Frisco tosser completed 15 in a row during one stretch. As a matter of fact, he might have broken Bert Jones' AFC record of 17 if he hadn't tried to go long to wide receiver Freddie Solomon.

If the Dolphins don't put the heat on Fouts, it looks like he'll devastate them with short passes to Joiner and Winslow and an occasional bomb to the mercurial Jefferson flitting about in the deep secondary.

It was one more big step in the learning process for LSU rookie quarterback David Woodley who turned in an outstanding performance for Miami, scrambling and passing in a way that bids fair to make him a top NFLsignal caller before many more years.

He was 18 for 25 and 222 yards, with two touchdowns and one interception. His scrambling was a sight to behold as the 49ers were able to sack him but one time all afternoon. The youngster turned in several key runs that kept the chains moving, one of them instrumental in killing the clock toward the end of the game.

It seems more and more evident that Woodley is Miami's No. 1 quarterback and that Bob Griese will probably not start again when his shoulder heals. Don Strock's days with Miami may be numbered.

A BALANCED ATTACK is what every coach strives for and Sunday Miami came up with 212 net yards passing and 166 rushing, a fact that brought words of praise from Coach Shula in the dressing room after the game. He noted that running back Delvin Williams is running more and more like the Williams of 1978 when he rushed for 1258 yards for the Dolphins.

Williams gained 69 yards in 14 carries, his longest run 17 yards. He was a victim of what seemed to be poor officiating when he fumbled as he hit the ground on the goal line after an eight-yard sweep right. The ball plainly (from the pressbox) penetrated the plane of the end zone before the fumble but the official ruled it a touchback and awarded the ball to San Francisco. Those "zebras" saved a Miami victory against New Orleans with a bad offensive interference call in the end zone, however, so it seems to even itself up - and this one didn't affect the outcome of the game.

Woodley's passes were right on the money all night and three were dropped that were eminently catchable. A prime example of his passing artistry was his long toss down the south sideline that was pulled in by wide receiver Jimmy Cefalo to complete a spectacular 52-yard gain and set up a 15-yard touchdown pass to wide receiver Nat Moore on the next play.

Miami had scored in two plays covering 67 yards, counteracting a 17-play, 80-yard scoring march by Derg that had taken 8:11.

The Dolphins drew first blood on Uwe von Schamann's 21-yard field goal but the 49ers led by 7-3 at the end of the first quarter when fullback Earl Cooper scoped from one yard out to cap that long drive. Miami got that one back on the pass to Moore and led at the half, 10-7 when Ray Wersching missed a 49-yarder for Frisco.

Woodley moved Miami 80 yards in nine plays hitting Nathan with an eight yard scoring pass to take the lead at 17-13 after the 49ers had capitalized on the fumbled punt to go ahead 13-10.

THE PLAYOFF PICTURE is still rosy for Miami. There are four clubs ahead of them in the race for the two Wild Card spots, and the AFC East-leading Buffalo Bills own a two game lead over Miami.

Unless plans are projected for more municipally owned golf courses throughout the State of Florida, indications are that in two years, golf will lose its place as a major sport. "Florida is the worst example in the country where youngsters are not welcome on golf courses," according to Jack Nicklaus.

There are 697 golf courses in Florida and more than 70 per cent of those are connected to real estate projects. The future of golf in Florida relies on the next generation. Fewer young people are taking up golf mainly because of economics. It is known that the youth cannot afford the high cost of green fees at most courses plus the fact that many courses insist that players rent a mobil cart.

If communities do not tace this dilemma then we can estimate another seven per cent drop in annual golf play. Many of the private courses and those attached to glamorous real estate projmects could set aside hours of the day when the young folk can play the game. However, it would be best to see powers-to-be in Florida communities project the building of courses so that youngsters will be able to play the game at a nominal cost to themselves or their parents.

The glamorous golf facilities cater to the retired and to those who have a certain degree of financial independence. But what about the working people who are either natives of the land or those who have migrated from the north?

Where are they to find their pleasures in golf?" so many found golf a family affair from whence they came, a game where they could play with the entire family on municipally owned courses where the cost of playing was within the reach of their budgets.

Now we learn that the Florida Council of 100 which includes a group of chief executives throughout the State, works closely with the governor to promote economic development. It is apparent the group is most intent on attracting new industry to locate in the state. With new industry come people.

The signal has gone out that Florida is not anti-business, not just a sandy beach resort.

Economic development is taking place. In 1974 there were 74 new businesses which located in Florida providing 967 jobs. In 1978, 80 new firms and 12,500 new jobs, then add 1979 when 125 new businesses and 25,000 new jobs with a capital expenditure of 722 million dollars were added. During the first six months of 1980 thirty six new firms and 15,000 jobs were added.

Gov. Graham stated, "By any standard, our economic development report card is good and improving."

We believe the governor and the Council of 100 should now take a closer look at what is in store for the many new families who have come to Florida and many more that will come with our economic growth. Every community in the state should be planning now to provide recreation facilities for the families. And what could be nicer than golf courses and tennis courts?

Florida will be taking a back seat in golf and tennis should the Governor, the Council of 100 and city and county governments do not take a good hard look at the family needs.

Reports from Gainesville, Florida, have it that Lauri Rinker finished in the second medalist slot in the Lady Gator golf tournament sponsored by her school last week. Lauri posted rounds of 73-72-72 four shots back of the top medalist Lisa Young of Florida State Un. who carded rounds with a 213 total. The Seminole gals took the championship while the Lady Gators finished in fifth place nine shots off the pace.

No Sweet Talk by Gleason

Jackie Gleason famed TV and Movie star who has done so much for the State of Florida, is doing his famous glide step of "Away We Go", taking leave of the Inverrary National Tour golf tournament staged at Lauderhill, Florida, annually. The nine year marriage between Gleason and the tournament is over. He stated he will not play in the event's pro am. He will not help to attract celebrities and has applied to the PGA tour to start his own golf tournament, hopefully, a million dollar extravaganza. Gleason in taking his name off the Inverrary, said they cannot take my name off the tournament without my permission. Well, I'm letting them. Gleason who promoted the idea at Inverrary in 1972 was stung by the Committee's maneuvers. He does not want his name associated with some car company. The only reason I supported the Inverrary was to raise money for charity. Reports have it that he wants to lineup a site in the Atlantic City area. He wants to wish the Inverrary well with its new sponsor, an automobile manufacturer. He said, however, "Automobile companies have enough trouble selling cars. How in the hell do they expect to sell a golf tournament?"

THE ORIGINAL STAND was built before U.S. 1 was four laned and the business had to move back when four laning occurred. Photos of the original stand are courtesy of the Algozzinis and the photo of the present-day shop is by Judy Fern of The Journal staff in Jupiter.

THINGS HAVE REALLY changed at Algozzini's in Hobe Sound since the business opened along U.S. 1 in 1947. The photos were taken not long after the tiny little business opened, and the one with the four persons in it shows members of the Algozzini family. They are, from the left: Phil, Elvira, Elaine and Nick. The business was started by Nick Algozzini and is now run by his son, Phil. The original fruit stand was located a little west of the present-day Algozzini shop shown in the photo at right.

IRCC Itinerary

Some people feel that education has nothing new or very important to offer them. Some feel that college constitutes a misty world of high-minded, head-in-the-clouds ideas with no connection to the real world. If only these people would look into Indian River Community College, they would quickly change their minds!

IRCC offers practical courses — classes that relate to your everyday, working life. There are classes that can save you money, classes that can make you better in your work, programs to entertain you and stimulate your mind, speakers and discussions that provoke new ideas and reinforce some you may already believe. There are classes that can make you a more aware, well informed citizen, and classes that show you how to enhance the meaning and happiness in your life. In short, IRCC not only operates in the real world — it can make your own personal world a better place to be!

LEGAL ISSUES FOR NURSES

"Finding Your Way Through the Maze" is the title of an all-day seminar on the legal issues that affect and concern the nursing profession, to be held at IRCC on November 22.

Sponsored by the Florida Nurses Association and IRCC, the seminar will be taught by Virginia C. Haggerty, J.D., R.N., who is the acting director of the Florida Nursing Association and a registered lobbyist in the Florida legislature for FNA. A graduate of the University of Miami School of Law, Haggerty is a member of the Florida Bar Association. She also holds a Master of Science Degree in Nursing, and has served as the Director of Nursing Service at Coral Gables Hospital and as an Assistant Professor of Nursing at the University of Miami.

A dynamic speaker, Haggerty will lead discussion in such areas as the legal foundation for nursing practice, the rights of the nurse and the rights of the patient, the extent of liability for nursing practice, the role and responsibility of the nurse to the patient, the employer, the court, and the profession, and the maze of laws that the nurse must work through to perform effectively on the job.

To run from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., with time for lunch set aside, the seminar has been approved for six contact hours of continuing education. The cost of the seminar is $20, and advance registration is requested. The McAlpin Fine Arts Center, where the workshop will be held, is located on the southeast corner of the IRCC main campus at Fort Pierce. For more information, contact Frances Hammett at IRCC, ext. 350.

BUILD YOUR OWN SOLAR WATER HEATER

How would you like to cut your family's energy consumption drastically, yet make no sacrifices in your way of life? How would you like to save about 80 percent on your electric bill? Experts estimate that a family of four can save about $200 a year simply by installing a solar water heater. It is not difficult to design, build, and install a solar water heater, but like any other project, it is more easily and inexpensively done if certain techniques are followed.

These techniques are the focus of a class, "The Design, Construction, and Installation of Solar Water Heaters," being offered at IRCC on November 13 and 20 from 6 to 8 p.m. in Room S110 on the main campus. Additional class meetings will be held in the Auto Body Shop at IRCC from 5:30 to 10:30 p.m. on December 4, 11, and 18, for those who wish to actually construct their own solar collector panels. Learn how to beat high home energy costs through IRCC's solar water heating class: the cost is only $8, and will be more than offset by the money you'll save when you install your own system. For details, call IRCC, ext. 323.

A CLASSY PRODUCTION

"A Touch of Class" is what you'll experience at the Fall fashion show to be presented by the fashion merchandising students at IRCC on November 21. The McAlpin Fine Arts Center on the main campus will be the setting for the show. Beginning at 7 p.m., tickets, available in advance at the IRCC Home Economics Department or at the door, cost $1. FS&LA supports IRCC

In the early 1970's First Federal Savings and Loan Assoc. of Ft. Pierce began their association with the Indian River Community College Foundation by establishing a Business Administration Scholarship account. From this account, a scholarship is awarded each year to an IRCC graduate majoring in business and/or administration who plans to transfer to a four year university.

Students are selected on the basis of their academic achievements at Indian River. Their academic progress at the transfer institution of their choice is reviewed throughout their junior and senior years. The recipients have included Deborah A. Thalasitis of Stuart and Samuel K. Hazellief of Port St. Lucie.

Through its donations, First Federal has assisted the foundation in providing funds for construction of the Kibiegard Student Union on the main campus, and most recently has established a Chair for Drama as a means of furthering academic excellence at IRCC and enabling the college to recruit and secure outstanding educators to bring their expertise to the students at Indian River.

Additionally, one of the buildings on the Fort Pierce campus was dedicated "The First Federal of Fort Pierce Careers Building" in 1972 as a means of further expanding the career education opportunities available to students. Among the numerous career programs offered are home economics, fashion merchandising, child care, and cosmetology.

The Ft. Pierce FS&L has been a member of the foundation's President's Club since its inception. Membership is available to alumni and friends of the college who wish to support the foundation and its programs through tax deductible donations.

Hot dogs, pop and hardhats keynote tour of nuke plant

BY AILSA DEWING

It was the first public tour of the nuclear plant Sunday with hot dogs and pop and souvenir hardhats for the kids, sponsored by Florida Power & Light Co. for the families of those involved in building the St. Lucie II Nuclear Power Plant.

Some 3,700 friends and family members got a firsthand look at the nuclear plant site during the afternoon with technical advisors along the route to explain what things are and how they work. They included EBASCO Services personnel -- the engineers, constructors and consultants on the project -- and representatives of the various building trades working there.

The St. Lucie II project has been underway since 1977 and is scheduled for completion in May 1983 at a cost of $1.4 billion. About 2400 workers are employed both in the construction and in permanent operating positions.

Since construction began, over 6.5 million manhours of manual labor have been expended -- a figure that will reach 14 million by completion FP&L predicts.

The tour was planned, according to Kn.Flanagan, project superintendent for EBASCO, to show workers' families the skills and abilities being applied on the job.

"We feel that this tour will help them appreciate the size and complexity of this project."

Visitors climbed their way to the top of the 232-foot reactor containment building where the nuclear reactor will be housed in a central core protected by three steel and concrete walls. The first inner wall is six feet thick, the second, four feet, and the third outer wall, three feet.

En route they passed through the turbine generating building and the reactor auxiliary building with its myriad panels of complex controls, switches and indicators to record and control conditions in the reactor. Nuclear power technicians were on hand to answer questions ranging from the simple to the technical.

In the interests of safety, the as yet unfueled reactor core was covered over but visitors got a bird's eye view of the 24-foot diameter interior silo which will house the nuclear stream supply system.

St. Lucie I has been in operation since 1976 and many of the workers who were involved in building that project are now constructing the second plant which, FP&L said, will be the last nuclear plant to be built in the 1980s in South Florida.

ROD CONTROL DIAGRAM is one of the many instruments and indicators used to record and control conditions in the nuclear reactor. The rods extend the depth of the reactor vessel to form an integral part of the fuel system.

URANIUM-235 PELLETS bombarded by neutrons are the heat source of the St. Lucie II nuclear reactor. It takes some 6,394,000 of these to do the job.

ave money, eat squash

ith the exception of squash and berries, this year's Thanksgiving er will make a bigger dent in the et than last year's.

a totally unscientific shopping parison of last year's food prices this year's, based solely on ery store advertisements, the or notes that the 1980 turkey flew. cents more than the 1979 turkey 9-89 cents a pound this year, ending on size, as against 69-79 s last year.

weet potatoes climbed from 25 s a pound on the price vine to 39 s and white potatoes whipped nselves up from $1.39 for 10 pounds .19 for five pounds. And the butter both went from $1.29 to $1.39 a nd on special.

you used prepared stuffing, it cost six cents more per half-pound this r to fill the bird -- from 59 cents to ents for the same amount.

ut the prices on squash and berries went down. Last year's ash was a pound while this r's could be had for 19 cents. And a nberry special offer this year ertised three 16-oz. cans for $1 inst last year's 47 cents per 16-oz.

s for dessert: an eight-ounce pkin pie from the deli last year cost $1.19. This year, it was $1.39. But coffee that was percolating at about $2.99 a pound last year could be had for $1.99 this year if you bought by the loss-leader price instead of brand name.

So, tomorrow you can eat hearty of squash and cranberries and enjoy a second cup of bargain price coffee. But slice the turkey a little thinner and hold back somewhat on the 'taters if you want to break even with last year.

Holiday closing

Although most businesses will close Thanksgiving Day and reopen Friday, some county agencies, as well as schools, will not re-open until Monday.

Martin County offices will observe the long four-day weekend. The public library, however, will close Thursday and Friday and re-open Saturday.

Jensen Beach banking institutions will close Thanksgiving Day only as wil the Jensen Beach office of the US Postal Service.

Martin County schools will dismiss at the usual time Wednesday and remain closed until Monday morning.

Men defeat women in campaign

BY DICK CAMPBELL

"Rah, Rah.. Siss Boom Bah. The men'll beat the women, and Ha, Ha, Ha."

This was the cheer of the Bill Keele led men's team for the 1981 Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce membership drive. The cheer, and the pavement-pounding antics of the men led them to a crushing victory over the women's team last week.

When the dust settled after the noon Friday deadline, the men won the contest, with 15,875 points to the women's 10,915 points.

The men obtained 41 new sustaining memberships and 17 new contributing memberships. The renewed 71 sustaining memberships and renewed seven contributing members for a total 136 memberships.

The women's team obtained 23 new contributing and 13 new sustaining memberships. They renewed 63 sustaining and 11 contributing memberships.

This gives the Chamber a potential of a record of over 300 members when the renewal campaign is completed. At present there are over 90 sustaining memberships to be renewed, and the total 188 sustaining now could reach 270 when those are obtained. The goal of 60 contributing members is almost a reality, with 58 already signed.

Keele's winning team will receive their dinners free at the installation banquet in December.

The winning team was announced at the Chamber annual meeting held Friday at Frances Langford's Outrigger Restaurant.

At that meeting officers and directors were chosen for the new year. The new officers are Dick Campbell, president, Jayne Petersen, vice president, William Keele, secretary and Art Hansen, treasurer.

Two year directors include Art Roberts, Bob Gorman and Peg Meissner. One year directors are Marg Paris, Richard Zurich, Fred Meeker, Barbara Torow,, Ron Mitchell, Charles Otto and Gene Greenwood.

Who out to the beach one day and saw a school of fish playing in the waves. They were so thick they looked like a large shape in the water. The bodies flashed like silver as the waves crested and they rolled with the waves.

Have a nice Thanksgiving. Remember to thank Him who makes all we have and share possible.

'Light Up the Sky' is a sell-out

There's no need to review the Barn Theatre's current production of the Moss Hart comedy "Light Up the Sky." It's playing to a full house every performance and tickets are sold out for the run.

We can only tell you what you're missing if you didn't get tickets or what's ahead for those yet to attend.

The set, designed by Ray Hilton and built by Carl Schmidt rates the first round of applause.

Admirable performances are turned in by the entire cast with perhaps exceptional mention for Kathie Cohen and Bette Ann Howanitz, who seem to slip into their roles quite comfortably.

Carol Galante plays the leading lady, Irene Livingston, in this play about the play.

Hilton, the set designer doubling in brass, has the role of Carleton (I could cry) Fitzgerald. Larry Silver, last season's Pierre in "The Mad Woman of Chaillot," returns as the playwright, and Bernie Adel, playing his first role with the Barn company, portrays the producer.

Veteran Barn thespian Dick Franklin, Bud Ribble, Richard Skydam, Amy Goldman, Edward Galante, and Bud Wheeler round out the cast with Producer David Moon also taking a welk-on part.

If you're going to miss "Light Up the Sky," get your tickets now for the Barn's upcoming musical, "Oliver," which promises to be another sellout.

South Street problems

Residents seeking a quick solution to the problems of traffic on South Street in Jensen Beach found last week that there is so easy solution to the problem.

Heavy traffic on Commercial Street causes some motorists to take the short cut over South Street if they are headed for South Savanna Road, or to avoid the traffic eastbound autos will use South Street as a short cut to downtown Jensen via Skyline Drive.

When the county commission sought to offer a plan, many residents of that area signed petitions for no change. There were as many solutions offered as there were signatures. The county abandoned the effort.

What did come out of it all was increased patrol by the sheriff's department to reduce the speeding on the road. Perhaps that is the answer.

However, South Street problems are just a small part of overall problem of traffic in Jensen Beach.

There will be no lessening of the traffic problem until a solution is found to widening Commercial to four lanes, widening Indian River Drive to handle the traffic that is there, and improving the flow of traffic off the Jensen Beach Causeway.

A growing Chamber

The 1981 Jensen Beach Chamber of Commerce will be a record busting year of activities for the betterment of Jensen Beach. That was indicated by the completed membership drive that saw last year's 204 members topped in one week, and 54 new sustaining members added to the roster.

The men's and women's teams also added 40 new contributing members to the rolls.

Many present members of the Chamber either could not renew during the one week drive, or wanted to wait until January so that their dues would be included in their next year expenses. With those back on the rolls, the Jensen Chamber should reach 300 members in 1981.

Membership revenue should do much to enable the Chamber to do more for the community. More programs will add to the attractiveness of membership in the Chamber. More services will help local merchants do a better job.

We salute Barbara Torow and William Keele as chairpersons of the two drive committees for an outstanding job in the membership drive.

Get a Vial-of-Life

Having the proper information in time of emergency is very important. Ambulance drivers and emergency medical technicians must move quickly and any delay might cost a life.

This is why the "Vial-of-Life" program is so important to all communities.

A small vial is inserted in the refrigerator. In the vial is all the important information on medications, allergies, handicaps or illnesses of the residents of the home. The ambulance attendant knows right where to go to get the information needed.

A special sticker on the door of the refrigerator notifies emergency personnel that the vial is taped to the underside of the top shelf in the refrigerator.

We encourage all residents to become acquainted with, and participate in this safety program. Information can be obtained from the Port St. Lucie Kiwanis Club, 878-4220.

Forced busing reduced by law

BY CONGRESSMAN SKIP BAFALIS

At long last, we may be making progress toward doing away with disruptive forced school busing.

Legislation to prohibit Justice Department attorneys from seeking court-ordered busing in school desegregation cases is expected to clear the Congress before it adjourns next month.

Now, this legislation won't stop the courts from ordering busing on their own, but it will mean the Justice Department cannot suggest the idea and cannot push for it.

So, it's a step in the right direction.

The anti-forced busing language was tacked on to an appropriations bill providing funds for the operation of the Justice Department. It cleared the Senate by a 51-35 vote last week and was approved by the House earlier.

And, although the overall appropriations bills are different and will have to be resolved by a conference committee, the two versions of the anti-forced busing amendment are similar there is little chance of any substantial change.

And, once the conference committee finishes its work, the final version will go back to the House and Senate for what is expected to be routine approval.

Of course, it still could be vetoed by President Carter, but there are indications now he will sign it — reluctantly perhaps, but he will sign it.

There will, of course, be an effort to kill the anti-forced busing language in the courts. Already, some pro-busing officials are calling it a legislative invasion of judicial and executive responsibilities.

But, if the wishes of the people are heeded, the language will be allowed to stand — and our nation's tradition of support of the neighborhood school system will be upheld.

This isn't the first time the Congress has tried to limit forced school busing merely to achieve some arbitrary racial balance. The Congress has said, on several occasions, that busing shouldn't be considered as a means of integrating schools. The language of the 1964 Civil Rights Act clearly contains that prohibition.

But attorneys for the Justice Department have often seen fit to ignore that prohibition, a situation this legislation seeks to overcome.

The next step, of course, will be an attempt to curb the authority of the courts in this regard.

It's been shown time after time that busing isn't working. And every public opinion poll taken in recent years shows the people are against busing, whether they be black or white, they want their children to attend schools in their own neighborhood.

Even the architect of forced busing, Dr. James Coleman of the University of Chicago, now calls the idea a failure. It's a failure, he says, because it promoted "integration" it's promoted white flight, it's destroyed the tax base of many inner cities by forcing the middle class to flee to the suburbs.

But the social planners refuse to acknowledge that. Convinced they know better, they are still looking toward busing as the solution to all the social ills.

Hopefully, this legislation will be the first step in convincing them — and the courts — that they are wrong that busing isn't the answer.

Let us hope so. We've followed this divisive path far too long.

Tradition

BY ALLEN F. BREWER

Tradition is a way of life, preserved through generations,
Down through the ages Tribal Man's ideals were hopes of nations.
And so it goes with out THANKSGIVING, inspired by the Pilgrims
On that Plymouth bleak and rocky shore, - the life they faced was grim.
That first year, - sixteen twenty-one,
when those who had survived Gave thanks to God for crops which thrived, - their new life had begun.
Through "Compact" and their faith and trust, each faced the common cause, -
For blessings we've inherited, we add out thanks and pause, -
Today THANKSGIVING DAY prevails, -
May this tradition never fail.

Intolerence indicated

If ever there was an indication that intolerence exists in people, it was manifested in my curls. Both consciously and subconsciously, people showed their intolerence.

They did it with a look, a stare, a frown, and words.

According to Webster, intolerant is "unable to endure. Unwilling to endure. Unwilling to grant equal freedom of expression, in social...

I must admit that I have fought intolerance for many years, using humor to the greatest extent. I have done it in life and in writing.

My latest effort was in getting the permanent, which changed my head to a mass of curls. I thought it looked a lot better, but couldn't imagine the number of people who took both exception and pleasure at it.

Some became angry and furious. Others whispered behing my back. Some smiled and laughed.

Now I know what it is like to be a young man with long hair. People of my age and older look down on young men with long hair. They call them "Long-haired hippies" and tell them they look like girls. The comments are rapier thrusts to inflict injury.

The intolerance came out with comments of "You look like a queer," or, "What have you done to your hair?" or, as one matronly lady said, "Your wife must be so embarassed."

The comments were intended to injure.

Of course, there were many who laughed and said, "That crazyt Campbell will do anything for attention," or, "you must need another column."

Few realized that it was a test of social intolerance, my own effort to make people realize that there are many things that are taboo today that have no reason for being rejected by society, or by our peers.

The rules of society are straight-jacketed into conformance. Refuse to conform and earn the condemnation of society.

Some remember my now-famous nude centerspread in the Mirror a few years back. We tpased the public for four weeks,announcing that because of the success of Cosmopolitan's nude Burt Reynolds we were going to do the same thing.

Intolerance jumped to the forefront. We had telephone calls, cancelled subscriptions, and great social concern for both The Mirror and the subject, Dr. Richard Penick.

When the nude centerfold turned out to be a baby picture of the doctor, the intolerance turned to embarassment on the part of those who were so quick to point a finger in shame (including the Martin County Medical Society.)

I dislike ties, and wear them only when I have to. I war a gold chain around my neck, and it is surprising how many people look at that chain the way they look at the curls.

"a man doesn't wear a chain," said one, emphasizing the word "man."

On the tennis court, the wife of a buddy said, "How could you have done that to your hair. It looks..."

"Queer?" I said.

"Well...it's just..."

"Do I look queer?" I asked, rising to my full six-foot-three.

"Oh, no," she said, blushing, seeking a way to get away.

It was just one of those exchanges where I felt great. I had punctured one balloon of intolerance.

There should be some consideration for individuality, and encouragement for those who refuse to fit the mold of a moldy society.

Last week I was sitting in the office doing some record-keeping when I decided that the cuts was too long, and I wanted to do something different. I called Sandy, my hairdresser (did the reader feel a twinge when I mentioned that I had a 'hairdresser?') and went out there for my appointment.

"I want it straightened back the way it was," I said.

"Really?" Sandy said. "I think it looks great."

Marg Paris was in there and said, "Salli will kill you when she gets home. That's terrible. You'll look like an old man again."

I ignored it all and Sandy did the job of putting it back. Now I am my old self again. When Salli got home she said, "You lok ten years older."

Everywhere I went there were comments. Unfortunately, now I had both sides of intolerance. People were either absolutely for the change back, or were absolutely against it. No one seemed not to care that much.

I think that most of the people now know that I was testing them, offering a showcase on which they could vent their intolerance, and be embarassed by same.

So, it is on to new things, better things.

Maybe, if I dyed my hair.....

I don't talk art

I am crazy for art shows. Outdoor ones, anyway. I like to walk around and look at pictures. Any kind of pictures. My problem is, I don't quite know how to behave.

I don't mean I'm so brash as to gaze on someone's creation and shout "Would you get a load of that turkey!" as I smack myself in the forehead. I can playit pretty suave looking at the pictures -- showing no more reaction to a pink inclined pussycat sporting sequins than I would a "Restrooms" sign. It's the artists I don't know how to react to.

Painting pictures and exhibiting them is the most bare-naked form of the arts I know of. Musicians, for instance can count on competency alone to carry them through. If they don't lose their place, hit a sour note or fall off their chair, they're bound to get a round of applause just for having gotten to the end without a flub. A virtuoso performance will get them a standing ovation.

I only once saw a solo musician come unglued. That was a harpsichordist whose concert earned her applause on applause and bravo after bravo. Down front a small girl entered enthusiastically into the clapping and shouting. Then followed that respectful hush as the performer reseated herself to play the encore the audience was begging for. The hush was broken by the little girl's wail of "Oh, no!" She thought everyone was clapping because it was over. And the performer wished she'd quit while she was ahead, I suppose. Anyway, she had to regain her composure before she could play again.

But the artist who exhibits in front of God and everybody and remains on the premises deserves some kine of on-on-one response, short of "Yukkh," or "Keep up the good work." But what?

As a writer I've tried to put myself in the role of the outdoor show artist, I had to stand beside the newspaper every Wednesday morning while people stopped to read it. Would I be grateful for the smile that says, "Nice try but no cigar"? Would I appreciate the constructive criticism or would I develop an alligator hide to repel the slings and arrows of indifference, boredom, or the head-shaking "SHEESH."

Well, after wandering around umpty-nine outdoor art exhibits over the years, I'm arriving at the conclusion that the artists themselves don't quite know how to react either. Or else they are canny enough to know my opinion on art I should stick in my ear, for all it's worth.

But invariably at the end of a row of canvasses I come upon the artist and the moment of truth, whether it gets spoken or not and I've gotten such mixed reactions, I'm ready to opt for one phrase to cover all situations.

So far, I've met the artist who responds not at all. A bright smile and cheerful, "I like your work" doesn't get so much as a "Who cares!" Just a vacant stare.

I've run into the one who takes me by the arm and welks me back through the exhibit, demanding a play-by-play opinion. That's usually the pink pussycat painter or the builder of starchsted whatnots made of shells.

An there's the non-artist. The one who responds to my appreciative comments with, "I didn't do them. Those are my brother's," and goes back to his book.

It's not impossible that the sidewalk artist is primarily interested in selling some work to finance more of the same and that's why opinions only aren't acceptable. Just checks and credit cards.

An art critic I'm not and a critic of artists I should be either because I don't know enough about techniques or composition to have a valid opinion. I don't even know what kind of frame to put around a picture.

I just know I like to walk around art shows and I like to be enthusiastic even if I don't know what I'm talking about.

I'm open to any suggestions on the proper etiquette for viewing art exhibits. I'm willing to learn all the correct responses. But until I'm trained, I think I'll just lean on, "Huinm. Very interesting," until hel arrives.

Can't let Thanksgiving Day go by without telling my favorite story-of-the-day.

When my son was a little boy he always wanted roast beef for T-day and he was actively opposed to turkey even though he allowed as how he liked it.

Now a grown man, he admitted a few years ago what his childhood opposition to turkey was.

"Every Thanksgiving Day, you'd ask me to say the blessing, remember? And I'd dutifully recite, 'Thank you for the food we eat; Thank you for the world so sweet; Thank you for the birds that sing; Thank you, God, for everything.'

"And then," he said, "We'd eat the bird. And that bothered me."

Social Security

BY BRUCE FERGUSON
SSA Field Representative

Whenever a family member dies, one of the survivors should inquire to see if social security benefits may be payable on that person's record.

It is important to apply promptly, because in some cases benefits cannot be paid for months before the month of application. Such is the case for widows and widowers who wish to start benefits before they reach 65.

If the worker had credit for enough work covered by social security, benefits can be paid to:

—Unmarried children under 18; 18-22 if full time students; over 18 if disabled before 22.

—A mother or father caring for a child under 18 or disabled.

—A widow or widower 60 or older.

—A disabled widow or widower 50 or older.

—A nonremarried parent 62 or older.

A survivor's divorced wife can receive the same benefits as a widow if the marriage lasted 10 years or more.

MARINE INDUSTRIES Association of Martin County will be represented by three gals, judged the ragging beauties in competition this month at Florida Institute of Technology. Representing the association during the seventh annual boat show in January and the Christmas boat parade Dec. 20 will be Kathy Lee Manichino of Port St. Lucie, and Laurie Cromwell and Yvonne Cormier, both of Stuart.

NEW NEIGHBOR at the Environmental Studies Center is a "medium size" octopus donated by an FIT student. The brown and tan creature from the deep is as curious about visitors as they are about it. A whelk shell provides a hiding place and the pipe into the tank provides a playground for exercising wrap around muscles. In frisker moments, the octopus succeeds in tossing the pipe overboard.

MAKE AN OFFER!

QUESTION: A few weeks ago I was looking at a potential real estate investment and asked the agent how much less than the "asking price" the seller would take. The agent didn't even quote me a lower figure — he indicated that he was not authorized to offer it for one penny less than the owner's asking price. Isn't this kind of silly? Isn't it true that owners ask more than they expect to get? Shouldn't the agent have given me an idea of how much less the owner would take?

ANSWER: You must recognize that the agent represents the seller in submitting an investment property to you. Because of this relationship, the agent is not allowed to indicate a variation in the asking price unless authorized by the seller.

It is important to remember, however, that any offer you make in writing must be submitted by the agent to the owner. This is an important distinction and an understanding of this relationship can stand you in good stead in successful investment property negotiations. The buyer who fails to recognize this may go for years without making any type of formal offer — much to his financial detriment.

The best way to handle a situation like this is to put your offer in writing and submit it to the agent. The agent is then bound to submit the offer to the seller, even if the agent thinks that it is not an acceptable offer. It is up to the seller to decide whether to accept or reject the offer.

Don't be shy about making offers. That's the way real estate transactions are put together.

Let's discuss your investment program. Call me at 334-0747, or stop by:

Trinity celebrates Advent on Sunday

This Sunday evening, NOVEMBER 30, Trinity United Methodist Church will continue the celebration of Advent which will begin during the Morning Worship services at 8:30 and 11 a.m. by the lighting of the First Advent Candle.

At 7 p.m., there will be The Hanging of the Greens, a worship service that had become a tradition for Trinity, in which the Sanctuary will be decorated for Christmas by children, youth and other groups.

The service is for the spiritual preparation of the Birth of the Christ Child, and will be coordinated by Rev. D. Clark Thompson, Pastor of Trinity, Mrs. Bobbi Gibson, Director of Childrens Ministries, Mrs. Alice Simes, President of the United Methodist Women, and Mrs. Mary Ramey, President of Ruth Circle.

A Family Christmas tree will be decorated in the Fellowship Hall by the families of Trinity, with each family bringing ornaments of special meaning to hang on the tree.

This year a Christmas Tree will be an added dimension to the celebration. The Christmas Abbreviation for Christ Monograms) have been made by members of several groups during the past year under the direction of Mrs. Ramey, and members of the United Methodist Women will explain the meaning of some of these Christmas, which will then be placed on the tree in the Sanctuary by members of the United Methodist Youth.

Following the worship service, those attending will participate in the Christmas Tasting Party, another tradition of Trinity. Samples of favorite goodies, cut to bite size, are brought in for everyone to share.

The public is invited to come and enjoy this celebration and fellowship with Trinity.

JBFD answers three calls

Jensen Beach Volunteer Fire Department answered three calls during the past eek.

Firemen were called out at 7 p.m. Monday night to wash down Savanna Road in front of St. Martin de Porres Church after a two-car accident scattered glass and gasoline on the highway.

Firemen were summoned Sunday night to Route US 1 south of the 707A intersection when a Beacon moving van caught fire. The blaze was confined to the engine and had been extinguished when firemen arrived.

An early morning jogger called firemen out Thursday when she saw flames and smoke in the Pine LAKE Village area. "She did the right thing," says Chief Joe Luciano, "BUT IT WAS A FALSE ALARM. It was a controlled burn."

EMPHASIS
A REPORT TO OUR CUSTOMERS BY FLORIDA POWER & LIGHT COMPANY

A LETTER TO NUCLEAR PROTESTERS:

By Mrs. Barbara Keating, one of the founders and President of Consumer Alert, Inc., a nonprofit national consumer membership organization.

ACTIONS ASSURE CHRONIC CRISIS. I respect your "right" to protest peaceably, but I won't let you turn out my lights.

I am offended by your planning my future. I protest your actions which assure me of a chronic energy crisis.

You told me what you want. Now I'll tell you what I want. I want a future for my children that isn't sapped and barren and second-place, and unemployed and defenseless.

The need for electricity will continue to grow no matter how much you wish it wouldn't.

WHERE ELECTRICITY COMES FROM. Electricity can be created by spinning turbines powered by oil. It can be created by natural gas tapped from below the earth's surface for as long as it lasts. It can be created by water falling where circumstances permit and when environmentalists permit. It can be created by burning coal, dug from dangerous mines. All of these methods cause death and damage to the environment. Or, we can use technology and bombard uranium atoms to create heat – environmentally the cleanest method.

THE CRISIS IS REAL. Is nuclear power here to stay? I don't know. Progress and technology do not stand still. There'll be fusion and solar and other methods up ahead. But today, the choices are limited. The crisis is real.

Since when are we afraid of progress? What kind of legacy are we leaving our youngsters? We are a proud, industrious and innovative society. We marvel at the development of technology.

We didn't shut down the airline industry when the first plane crashed. We took it apart to see what went wrong, so it wouldn't happen again.

I speak as one American who isn't willing to throw in the towel.

Honest, knowledgeable and caring people – your neighbors – work in the nuclear energy field. I trust them. They do not hold second-rate citizenship. Their beliefs are entitled to equal weight.

NATION'S FUTURE AT STAKE. The future of our nation is at stake. It's high time you realized our predicament and grew up to face the responsibilities we all must face – united.

That "new mobilization" you're beginning to sense is peopled by your neighbors and countrymen who are concerned about your constitutional rights, but who are even more concerned about the survival of the free world.

Haynes takes office, lists his priorities

RETIREMENT is still to come for District One County Commissioner Alex Haynes who retired from Ford Motor Co. in 1971 only to become a consulting engineer and then enter politics for the first time.

BY AILSA DEWING

After 18 years Jensen Beach and Sewall's Point have a new District 1 representative on the Martin County Board of Commissioners. He is Alex Haynes, a retired automotive and aeronautical engineer, who won his first political race on Nov. 6 by defeating veteran campaigner and politico Frank Wachs.

In an election campaign that was rife with innuendoes and charges of malfeasance in office and which culminated in legal proceedings instituted by Wachs against a district, Alex Haynes maintained a soft-sell approach, ignoring the brickbats flying past him to focus almost entirely on a single issue: the need for long-range planning for the orderly growth and development of Martin County.

With the election ended, the problems immediately affecting Haynes' constituents are demanding equal time — often with phone calls up to as late as 11 o'clock at night, says Haynes with a wry smile, but Haynes is still keeping the county's comprehensive plan as his number one priority.

This was evident at the first Commission session Haynes attended after being sworn into office last week when he called for a workshop session of commissioners to begin dealing with the comprehensive plan. His motion passed 4-1 with Commissioner Tom Higgins casting the dissenting vote because, he said, he felt the Board of Zoning Adjustments should properly call the session.

"I was not trying to usurp their responsibility," said Haynes, who says he quite agrees with Higgins. "But with two new members on the Commission I thought we should sit down together with the BZA and become more knowledgeable about the comprehensive plan."

It is fitting that Haynes entered politics over the issue of planning and zoning and it's in keeping with his engineering experience that it is long-range planning that merits his attention. His only previous governmental post was as a member of the York Township P&Z Board during four of the years the Haynesses lived in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Employed as a research and development engineer, Haynes was an early designer of automobile safety devices which eventually became mandated, such as the deep-dish collapsible steering wheel, safety belts, and door locks that didn't spring open during collision.

His early engineering years were spent with Curtiss-Wright and General Motors during its wartime aeronautical program and he is credited with designing the landing gear adopted by the World War Two P40 fighter planes and later, for the P75 pursuit planes.

In 1953 he was chairman of the Society of Automotive Engineers committee that coordinated with other agencies in the Yucca Flats atomic test to determine the effects of nuclear explosives on civilian communities.

As an observer at the Yucca Flats experiment, Haynes professes a cautious attitude toward nuclear fission.

"It's not the nuclear power I fear; it's the human element," Haynes explains. "The technology is far ahead of the human capability to grapple with it."

In 1971 Alex and Eve Haynes moved into their Hutchinson Island condominium at Anglers Cove following his retirement from Ford Motor Co. after 26 years.

"I was going to fish and play golf," Haynes recalls, but he found it wasn't enough to occupy his time. He became involved in the Martin County Taxpayers Association and its fight to reduce a planned population unit density of 20,000 to 5,000 on the south end of the island between the two causeways.

Meanwhile, he was approached by the South Korean Hyundai industries and the Ford Company to serve as a consulting engineer in developing a Korean motor car. For five years the Haynesses "commuted" between Korea and Florida.

While Haynes lists the county comprehensive plan at the top of his priorities, his number two task, he says, will be to familiarize himself with the county organization.

"I want to know if we have a county organization that can react fast enough to the problems of a semi-rural area which is suddenly becoming an urban area." He acknowledges that the agencies and staffs may be "the way they ought to be but I want to study and know it," he said.

Haynes also lists among his top tasks the need to become acquainted with the problems of District 1 and to see that projects already begun are carried through.

"I haven't had time yet to sit down with Frank Wachs but he has a world of experience I think will be helpful," says Haynes who has, however, met with the district fire chiefs and representatives of the Jensens Area Samaritans, on issues that involve them.

Looking back, Haynes admits that if anyone had told him last January he'd be a political candidate he would have said, "You're out of your mind."

But Alex Haynes survived the campaign better than Eve Haynes did as his campaign manager. "Never again," she says. It was interesting and she met a lot of very fine people but the next time she intends to keep the home fires burning so "Alex" can come home to a clean house and a meal and not just a McChicken on the way.

Nor does Eve Haynes plan to stay in the political limelight. "I don't think Commissioner needs a first lady," she jokes. She's ready again for quiet evenings and to take up her hobby of knitting and making casual clothes — she calls "fun sewing."

And up in Kennesaw, Md., young grandsons will be looking to other interests after closely following the political campaign of their grandfather. Eleven-year-old Alex Haynes and his brother, Josh, 8, were also followers of their grandfather's campaign, collecting newspaper clippings and keeping classmates up-to-date on developments.

ensen Beach welcomes WHLG-FM

LEY NEELD has been named program director of the Jensen Beach FM radio station WHLG. Neeld has been news director of WSTU since WHLG listeners will still get to hear Charley by tuning in weekdays from m-2 p.m.

WHLG, a 24-hour FM radio station with Jensen Beach as its target area, is due to go on the air the first week in December.

Operating out of the Alice Avenue quarters of its sister station WSTU, serving Stuart, WHLG is franchised to Jensen Beach and its programming will be aimed at the over-30 listener, according to Genevieve Glascock, owner and general manager of the two stations.

Program director for WHLG is Charley Neeld, WSTU news director since 1978.

Located at 102.4 on the FM dial, WHLG will offer 24 hours of music interspersed with news and community programming, Neeld said.

With the opening of WHLG, SWTU will also become a 24-hour operation the two stations broadcasting simultaneously from midnight to 6 a.m.

In preparation for the early December opening both the facilities and staff are being expanded. Offices and studios of the FM station are located in a recently-built annex to the WSTU building and on Monday the former 220-foot antenna was topped off at 300 feet.

The station's call letters are the initials of the late Harvey Leonard Glascock, who purchased SWTU in 1969 and was the co-owner with his wife, Genevieve, until his death in 1977. Application for the Jensen Beach FM station was filed by Glascock and has been seven years in receiving the grant.

Programming will be formatted around "Bright and Beautiful Music," according to Neeld, and will be a blend of "lush country, smooth jazz, light disco, semi-classical and warm Latin" featuring both vocal and instrumental arrangements in 15-minute uninterrupted segments. Bob Hurley has been named music director.

Capsule news to include two minutes of world, national and state happenings will be broadcast on the news-with-music broadcasts scheduled at 6:30, 7:30, 8:30 and 9:30 a.m., 12:30, 4:30 and 5:30 p.m. Dave Stelli becomes news director for both WSTU and WHLG.

Wire news will be supplied by United Press International with two fulltime newsmen covering local events. Five fulltime announcers will man the broadcasting around the clock, Neeld said.

The line-up calls for Don Neville to beat the 6 to 10 a.m. hours followed by Neeld from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. A new staff member, Pam Crosby, formerly associated with WIRA Ft. Pierce, will carry the 6 p.m. to midnight block. The midnight to 6 a.m. announcer has not yet been named, according to Neeld.

WHLG-FM will be a 3,000-watt station with a signal extending into St. Lucie and Palm Beach counties. WSTU-AM will continue to operate on 1,000 watts daytime and 250 at night but with a stronger signal. Bob Statham is the engineer for both facilities.

The FCC license was issued to provide radio programming for Jensen Beach and as such will emphasize JB news events and local news without excluding other areas says Neeld. Under Larry Baronoff, general sales manager, Jensen Beach advertising will be solicited.

Photos by Ailsa Dewing

VETERAN NEWSCASTER Lee Bowman will add his talents to the WHLG news team.

AKE-UP MAN for WHLG will be Don Neville making the morning cheerful for 10 a.m. listeners.

NEWCOMER TO WHLG is Pam Crosby, familiar to Ft. Pierce listeners, who will take over the 6 p.m. to midnight slot on the Jensen Beach station.

DAVE STILLI will have charge of news broadcasts on both WHLG and WSTU, replacing Charley Neeld as the Stuart station's news director.

KEEPING TRACK of what goes on the air at what time will be the task of Eileen Beam, traffic director for WHLG.

COMMERCIAL SPOTS on WHLG will be in the hands of Larry Baronoff, general sales manager, who'll head the station's sales staff as well as WSTU's.

The holiday mindlessness to have it's full lessons in a happy mood. Is it's about pleasant? Irrelevant things that however did bring out some interesting points (for fictitious consideration) this to say

Phil who keeps records of everything, joined the cheerioms at the back of the hall back this observations "We'll have to admit that Governor Reagan has some damn tough problems to work out, but there's no reason why we can't do it. Just look what's happened in our time."

The park seems to be at mid season compos: all activities have started and as one strolls around, the 'shut up' homes are hard to find, and at night it is quite a night to see the brightly lighted homes on both sides of the street. And, no wonder the park is filling up fast, as according to restarees's accounts, nasty winter weather is showing up all over the northland ahead of schedule. Hence, over 42 snow birds flew in last week to make the season total over 350. They were.

Mary Collins, Ken Herror, George and Wilma Diedrick, Dorothy Beck, Mary Randall; G C. and Jessie Robertson, Sarah Scott, Marguerite Kuerstend; Bruce and Mildred Price; John and Evelyn Faust; Cyril and Jessie Mathy; Don and Dolores Carlson. Elmer and Dorothy Rams.

Peter and Pauline Schaeffer; Arthur and Blanche Guarino, William and Beth Ealer; Sam and Helen Bono/ Charles and Iva Watson; Russell and Dorothy Black; Sophia Thompson Jim and Lesley Wenniergren, Mary Mulligan; Vera Thomas; Jim and Grace Blow; Tony and Marie Urewicz, Dot Kitchin; Lona Merrill.

No free Flu Shots for awhile. Doctor McCallister, Director of the Martin County Health Dept. sent word, "Sorry, but we ran out of vaccine after giving 800 shots to the elderly, and there isn't any more even in the State of Florida." As soon as more is avail able he'll let us know.

Also of interest to the elderly, Damon Smith, was at the Town Hall, Tues Nov 25, to hear what we have to say about national problems. Sorry, this announcement wasn't made in time, but highlights of his visit will be reported next week

The Number Calling Games are going great guns to a darn near full house every Mon. and Wed. nights, 7 p.m. in the Clubhouse (If you want to know what's going on around the park, come early and you will surely hear the latest.)

SQUARE DANCING has started, but not as vigorously as in yesteryear. Some of the oll timers remember when OBF was the square dance center of the area. Two dances a week with up to 12 squares on the floor and with classes three times a week for both beginners and intermediates (A, B & C classes).

So let's try to get that great spirit going again and make the dances and classes at the Clubhouse a fun time for all. Remember, these dances and classes are free to all OBFers, one doesn't have to burn up $1.25 gas to get there, and it takes only a jiffy to get home after the dance. Every square dancer and prospective dancer should give it a try: Dance Tues. night at 8 p.m. and class Fri. afternoon. 1 p.m. beginners and 2 p.m. intermediates.

CAMERA CLUB finally got started, Thur Nov 20, when more than 60 members saw the "4 Seasons of Vermont." Photos by Earl Fisher and commentation by Janet Morse. It brought back fond memories to the New Englanders and those who'd tour the area.

The meeting was in the groove with Freda Peterkin, Secretary at the door counting noses as usual; Fred Kalb the projectionist and electronic technician handling lights and P.A. system and President Fram Gum introducing the speaker and announcing coming events. No meeting, Thur. Nov. 27 (Thanksgiving), but Lelia Tobin and Fran Gum will show New England and SE States Dec. 4th, and Charlie Olsen, Yellowstone, on the 12th.

SHUFFLERS had a busy week as usual. First OBFers started winning District events (in Stuart) as follows Elston Lehning and Ida Wesser took 3rd. in the main event and Ted Walzer and Pete Muller (ExOBFer) took 1st. in consolation.

The league standings are as follows Indian River, Ft. Pierce 14; Stuart 12; OBF and Vero 11, Spanish Lakes 10; Whispering Creek 8, and Plantation 7. There, for the Central league: Spine Like Vil 7, OBF and Holiday Out 6, Spanish Lakes Stuart 1 and Golf Vil. 0

The 'Gals will have pot luck, Tues. Nov. 25 at 9 a.m. Buckaroos, 5 game winners Elston Lehning, Bus Miller; Bob Wilson and Charles Faur, 4 game winners, Ken Smith, Cyril Steven; Ben Fingar; George LeBon.

There are fun games all the time, and as Jim Ellithorpe has taken George Levangie's place as best game talker upper', spectators enjoy it too.

"We've come from the 10 mph horse and buggy days to 1000 mph supersonic Concord, jetting around.

How well I can remember, cranking up my ol' 'T Model', and now there are computerized, electronically controlled cars that will practically take care of themselves. Looks like we can solve problems.

Mable with her big 'gas-guzzler' problems, quickly butts in, "Yep, I well remember gas wars with gas at 12 gallons for $1.00, but now that we have $1.25 gas, we developed cars that get 40 miles per gallon, we've learned to cope. Also, here is another thing, remember when it was the doctor with the best bedside manner who was the most successful, at a very moderate fee. Now we have 'cat scans', transplants, deep radiation, etc, keeping us alive much longer. Pretty tough problems can be worked out.

"Say now, that's something to think about," piped up Ralph who can't forget the Great Depression, "I well remember when it paid to wait on buying something, as it might be cheaper next week, but now it's best to 'buy right now even on expensive credit, as it sure will cost plenty more next week.

"That's our number one problem, I believe; zero inflation in our 'hay day' to double digit, right now. Bet we can fix this too, we've gone from gun powder to 'H' Bomb; from 10 inch slide rule to pocket computer. It seems that up to now, give us a problem and we'll find a solution, Americans can't be beat. Let's give Mr. Reagan a darn good chance and help, not hinder, and I bet we'll get all these perplexing problems solved."

Grump Pete, with a cane thumping, had to get his word in edgewise and said, "Don't go so damn fast. Let's catch up and take a good look at some of these great new improvements. I don't like those packages with the mysterious lines." Thump, thump to emphasize his anger, Pete continues, "They say it's going to save us money. When?"

"Try to find out what unmarked goods cost. Some of us old folks can't get up or down the way we did 50 years ago to see the tiny printing that the bifocals blur to meaningless gibberish, and clerks are never around when needed, so we take the item hoping for the best.

"Then, when we get to 'check-out' the gal zipps through so fast to show her skill or somethin', that it's impossible to get the prices as it goes by. If items are held back, to see if certain items are within our budget, gal gives us a darn dirty look and if we try to check the slip before paying, all those in line give us even dirtier looks.

"Lets continue individual package marking, until something better is devised, make the shelf marking BIG, BIG and both top and bottom tipped so they can be read from normal eye height, and slow down at check out so the price of each item can be observed and if out of budget, it can be omitted," and with a final thump, thump, "does anybody agree?"

CHAPTER EVENTS

Regular AARP meeting, Thur. Nov 13 was very well attended, just enough chairs. Routine business zipped along under the guidance of president John Vance, then prog. chairman Ruth Woodruff introduced the guest speaker, Dr Henry Pippa, in charge of the Emergency Room at Martin Memorial Hospital.

Doctor Pippa said that he had a staff of 6 doctors, with 2 always on duty, during the bad night hours. They are the ones who handle the Para-Medics when en route to the hospital with a patient.

Then he went on to explain the new Para-Medic Ambulance service that is to start January 1981 in the Tropical Farm. It has been found that only three percent of heart stoppage cases survive when regular ambulance transportation is used, but 68 percent survive under Para-Medic service, so Martin County has approved their trail arrangement of a 2 squad unit serving this one area.

It is quite expensive, costing 30 percent more than the regular ambulance, and that figures out to be $100 per year on a $100,000 home in taxes. There was a long question and answer period that brought out many points when 911 is used, an EMT evaluates the situation and sends what is needed, then if the Para-Medics are not required the regular group takes over as usual, as the area is large and county roads inadequate for fast driving, it may take up to 8 minutes to reach furtherest spot. There was a lot of interest, as it could be a life saver for elderly.

Al Camjasa, Chairman of Insurance Committee, talked about the change over to Prudential for AARP plan health insurance. Pointing out that the members didn't have to make a decision at this time, and when they did, there were a number of options. First, Colonial Penn will be on an individual basis continued the auto, home owners and life insurances. Also, they can, again on individual basis, continue with the same health coverage.

Next April, Prudential will present health policies and the members will have until July 1, 1981 to make up their minds.

One other note, the Colonial Penn policies will all go up for $1.00 starting January 1981, to keep up with changing times (and possible help pay for that law suit of $4,500,000.00 that they recently lost out in California).

Striped bass tournament at Lake Talquin Nov. 22-23

By Dick Lundin

SOMETHING NEW in the way of bass tournaments will be taking place on Lake Talquin near Tallahassee on Nov. 22-23 when Striper Magazine will stage a family-oriented striped bass tournament out of Josh Ingram's Marina at Quincy, Fla.

The tournament, with $1,000 for the largest striper caught, and nearly $3,000 worth of additional prizes, is aimed at fun and family togetherness. It is open to husbands, wives and children for a modest fee of $15 per person. Also, everybody starts off even as each participant will reportedly be presented in advance with a 275-yard spool of Premium Trilene line.

Tourney hours will be from 6 a.m. on Saturday through 3 p.m. on Sunday. Pre-registration forms may be obtained by contacting Ingram's Marina at 904- 627-2341 or from Striper, P.O. Box 15853, Nashville, Tenn. 37215 (615 - 383-1377).

On Friday evening, Nov. 21, there will be a free seminar and clinic on striped bass fishing at the National Guard Armory in Quincy. Stu Tuney, generally recognized as the No. 1 authority on striped bass, according to Striper Magazine, will conduct it.

This is the time of the year when stripers commence feeding in chilly waters below 70 degrees. Fishermen should look for birds such as gulls, who spot the schooling shad and minnows from the air. The birds spot the food sources along the water surface and the anglers move in with their flashy or silvery spoons, or jig, or just any kind of bait that looks like a minnow.

They throw it to the far side of the school of shad or minnows and drag the lure through the area, hoping for a strike from a feeding lunker striper in the 10-15 lb. class.

The big stripers are powerful fish and most fishermen use 15 lb. test, or heavier line. The heavier, the better, insofar as tackle is concerned. They are definitely strong fish.

WHILE ON THE SUBJECT of fishing tournaments, time's running out for those who plan to fish in the 27th Annual Stuart Sailfish Club Light Tackle Tournament, to be fished out of the Sailfish Marina, Dec. 10-14, by anglers on boats 26-feet and longer.

Entry in the tournament costs individual anglers $200. In the team division, it's $300 for the first angler and $100 for the next three - only four to a team.

For tournament details, write or call the Stuart Sailfish Club, P.O. Box 2005, Stuart, Fla. 33495 (287-8566).

Wildlife Alert paying off but needs citizen $$

By Dick Lundin

THE WILDLIFE ALERT PROGRAM, a citizen-supported, has become so successful in Florida that the treasury from which the rewards are paid is in need of additional cash.

That's the word from David O. Charland, chairman of the Wildlife Alert Reward Association, a citizen group that oversees the program.

Wildlife Alert is a means by which concerned citizens may report violations of wildlife and fisheries laws to the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission. Persons reporting violators may maintain their anonymity if their assistance leads to an arrest, they will not be required to testify in any court proceeding and will receive a reward from the fund.

In this area, the toll free number to be called whenever you spot a violation of the state's wildlife or fishery laws, is West Palm Beach 1-800-432-2046. Put it in your billfold where it'll always be handy!

Charland points out that since the reward program was established in November of 1979, more than $13,000 has been paid and more than 300 persons have been arrested statewide over that time period. The reward fund balance is now down to $7,117, with at least $15,000 needed to get through the hunting season, he explained.

Persons or groups wishing to donate to the reward fund may either send their contribution to the Wildlife Alert Reward Association, 3620 North Andrew Ave., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. 33309, or drop it by The Mirror offices and we'll see that it gets to the Association.

Lt. Col. Brantley Goodson, director of Law Enforcement for the Commission, notes that Florida's 35 million acres of land and fresh waters are patrolled by less than 300 wildlife officers. "With only one wildlife officer for every 300 square miles of Florida territory, citizens are needed to help relay word of those who violate fisheries and wildlife laws," he said.

Some 88 per cent of the callers under the Wildlife Alert program preferred not to accept a reward, according to Goodson, who explained that there has been nearly a 100 per cent conviction rate from arrests resulting from calls through the program.

"It is a worthwhile program and we are proud to have the citizen committee overseeing it," Goodson added.

Committee members serving on the Association, besides Charland, are from Weirsdale, Jacksonville, East Palatka, Gibsonton, Cottondale, Miami, gainsville, Tallahassee, Tampa, Pensacola, Maitland and Indian Rocks Beach.

This is a bandwagon everyone wants to get on. Let's let the Association and the Commission know that Jensen Beach and Port St. Lucie are solidly behind Wildlife Alert.

Bring your contribution to The Mirror and we'll see that you're counted. Your Outdoor Editor has started the ball rolling with a $5 contribution. Who's next?

Sandtrap

BY MIKE SANDY

Bill Dvorak, in whose memory and honor the Invitational Junior Tournament of Champions is being staged at Sandpiper Bay Dec. 27-30, had time before his death in Sept. of this year to put his thoughts and findings into words. As you will note by reading his assessment of junior golf, he was truly a dedicated father not only to his talented son Chris but also to the many youngsters with desires to play the game of golf.

Meanwhile the destinies of nine-year old Chris Dvorak, a resident of Port St. Lucie and a true Junior Champion rests with his mother and pro Cliff Settergren, a 70 year old veteran teacher who has taken as much pride in young Chris as did his late father.

Chris and Cliff make a formidable pair and can be seen on the practice tees and also touring an 18-hole round. A very close relationship continues to exist between the pair who have great admiration for each other. Cliff believes that Chris Dvorak will someday be included among the truly greats of the game.

They crawled out of their sandboxes and into the sandtraps of the best and most afmous golf courses on the southern part of America, but I don't want to get ahead of myself. I really want to start at the start, and the start is a baseball field in the lawnwood stadium in Fort Pierce, Florida.

I was watching a golf clinic with my lettle boy Chris Dvorak a 2 1-2 year old. The coach was a likeable fellow named Myers. He kinda marveled at the close attention my little guy payed the older students. We got to discussing junior golf and he told us of a tourney in Orlando (the Pee Wee International.) Thats where I met my first batch of golf future pro's, because all of a sudden I realized that the future of one of the oldest games of the world depended on a bunch of little people out there on a field trying to hack away at the little ball.

The coach stood there trying to help them achieve that goal, anyway that is where it began for my little golfer whose name is Chris Dvorak and is now 9 years old.

He's played a lot of golf all over the U.S. and has won quite a few national titles, but this story is not of Chris but of the day in Orlando Florida at Cypress Creek Country Club, where we ventured out onto the course with our young lion.

There was a fellow shose name I later found out was Rodney Williams, he had a son by the name of Christian and to this day I'll always remember how well he played golf and at that time he was only 9 of 10, he also was a gentleman. His dad had invited us to play in a tourney at Fix Fire Country Club in Pinehurst, N.C. thats where I first met Peggy Kirk Bell. She came up and introduced herself and said she likes the way our little 3 year old sat up to the ball. Since then it's been a tour for us every year and we have met and played with some of the nicest kids from coast to coast. We have played Jack Nicklaus' boy Gary and Doug Ford's grand child. We have been fortunate enough to become close friends with the Baker's and their children, Noah and Jonathon. Jonathan in my estimation will become one of the starts of tommorrow.

There's also this boy Sucunda a boy who I first met at Disney World playing in the International Pee Wee. He'll be a great one if he can keep that temper in hand and his dad is one of the nicest guys I've ever put my right hand to. Jim Baker, the director of junior golf for the national and southern Jr. Golf Association, he's a big rugged individual who works harder than a guy should and on top of that he has a job that can't possible please everyong.

It seems like I've seen a million kids come out and give it a whirl, they stay a while then fade away. The ones that have stayed are starting to grow up now and I find myself saying to my wife, remember this one or that one, I wonder what happened to their dream?

Lutheran bazaar is Dec. 5-6

Two hole-in-ones shot at IRP course

Local golfers continued to fair well on the tough Indian River Plantation Resort golf course last weekend. The par-61 course has its share of sand traps and treacherous lakes, but was kind to both Evelyn Mazzanovich and RAY Unsell on at least one hole each. Braving the uneven weather, Mazzanovich aced the par-3 second hole on Friday, while Unsell shot his hole-in-one on the par-3 seventh on Saturday.

Both golfers were awarded plaques for their achievements.

Summer's gone and the fishing ain't easy any more

BY DICK LUNDIN

Wonderful days of summer are long gone and now area fishermen have to plan their fishing around increasing spells of bad weather, high winds, angry surf and high seas. The fishing just "ain't" easy any more. You have to work for what you get.

Sailfishing begins to heat up this time of the year, and reports indicate that the spindlebeaks are moving in off the Treasure Coast. Quite a few have been raised and some caught this week, mostly off the St. Lucie Inlet and the Hutchinson Island condos. With them are dolphin and some wahoo. This is a good time to try to get that first sail. A good program is to get a party of four anglers to engage one of the local charter boat captains. They are almost certain to put you on a sail or two and the rest's up to you. Release that sail, though, if you don't positively plan to make it a mount!

King mackerel haven't been too abundant the past year or two, but reports indicate that anglers fishing the Kingfish Hole just below the St. Lucie Inlet (mnt.) with live bait are coming up with quite a few "smoker" kings in the 30 lb. class. Spanish mackerel are around and some of them are real "horses" up to 8 lbs. They are getting them on Clarkspoons just off the beaches near the St. Lucie Inlet.

The Indian River is dirty and hard to fish right now. The surf is even tougher to fish. There are blues in the surf and some whiting, but it's the hardest kind of fishing, with a strong current and high waves to contend with.

FRESHWATER FISHING for speckled perch (specks or black crappies) should be getting into high gear but the strong winds have slowed it down at most of the area lakes, like Marian west of Kenansville and the big one, Okeechobee.

We (Dr. Rod Rodkinsin and Neal Shaffer) fished Marian last week but had a hard time coming up with 18 specks and a catfish in six hours of drifting jigs tipped with live Missouri minnows.

HAROLD RUSSELL of Okeechobee Fish Camp at the Kissimmee River Bridge on the north shore of Lake Okeechobee gave this report: "Fishing's lousy over here, Dick. That damned water's too low at 13 ft 8 inches. They have the locks open. Those Flood Control People let the water down for the hurricanes that never came and it hasn't come back up again. I look for river fishing for specks to be the best this year because the water's so low. The specks being caught around King's Bar on jigs and on live minnows in the river are scarce but big this year so far."

FROM THE SNOOK NOOK in Jensen, Johnny Crawford: "It hasn't been too great this week. There are some blues in the surf and a few whiting. There are a few trout in the river, scattered up and down along the east side of the channel, on the grass flats near the dropoffs. They're getting a few snapper and sheepshead around the bridges. The cooler weather should bring in the blues again."

The Nook's log: Don Walters, 4 trout to 5-8 (5 lbs.) and 3 croakers to 3-0, live shrimp, river; Ron Ellis and Scott Gallivan 4 blues, live shrimp, near the power plant in the surf; Jack Prell and Roy Greenwald, 6 grout, mirrolures, Big Mud Creek; Tony Battaglia, 11 blues in 3 days, cut mackerel, surf; Jon Deschamps, 10 trout, live shrimp, river; George and Marilyn Lindman, 8 trout and a sheepshead, live shrimp, river; Bob Duncan and Charlie Kessler, 6 mangrove snappers and 6 sheepshead, live shrimp, river; Irv Fisher, 10 trout, trout touts, river; Bill Ditzel, 8 trout, live shrimp, river; Jr. Dahman, 4 snook to 24-0 Evans Crary (18 cent) Bridge; live shrimp.

FROM MANATEE BAIT AND TACKLE, J. D. Sachs: "It's getting a little better. They're getting some sails out there. They're pretty well all over now. There are dolphin and some wahoo with them too. Dennis Steele and Dick Craft have been doing well on big kings with live bait down at the Kingfish Hole. We should be catching a bunch of sails soon. George Terry, trolling off the House of Refuge, caught 25 blues on Clarkspoons, believe it or not, Dick. There are some blues in the surf, some small snook in the St. Lucie Inlet and some really big Spanish mackerel off the inlet in about 30 ft. of water."

MURIEL WEIDEMAN from D & M Bait and Tackle at the south end of the Roosevelt Bridge on U.S. 1 just above downtown Stuart: "Fishing's been lousy. It was a bad week all told. Dick George Dohman got a 38-lb wahoo Sunday on our ballyhoo out in 110 ft. of water. On Monday night, he got 3 snook to 18-0 on live shrimp at the Roosevelt. The water's just too muddy now. We're hoping it clears up and that we have a happy holiday."

FROM JENSEN BAIT AND TACKLE, Dave Lamb: "Bob James had 12 whiting, fishing the Jensen surf with sand fleas. Ron Baker, 8 blues to 4-0, cut mackerel and mullet, bluefleks (just south of the Ocean a candy); Frank Larkin, 13 blues, an 8-0 gafftopsail catfish (sailcat); cut mackerel, Evans Crary; Bill Steele, 7 blues, cut bait, surf south of the Holiday Jerry Lankton, 18 blues, cut bait, surf; Joe Tanner, 14 blues and 2 whiting, cut bait and shrimp, surf north of power plant. How about that 12 lb 8 oz flounder those FTT folks caught?"

CHUCK SHEPHERD, Bait Box, Jensen: "It's been awful slow, Dick. The surf is still all stirred up and nobody can get their lines out. There are no trout in the river. Two FTT anglers showed me a 12-8 flounder the other night and wanted me to buy it, but we didn't. Frank Fitzpatrick caught a 3-0 flounder and 24 whiting, clams and shrimp, Normandy Beach just south of the power plant; Van Burnett, 43 weakfish, live shrimp, Weakfish Hole, just below the Ernest Lyons (18 cent) Bridge; Faye Haller, 3 drum at the Monquito Bridge on the Jensen Causeway and 2 channel bass (redfish) at Herman's Bay, live shrimp."

A KEEPER. Harold Cloutier of Port St. Lucie holds up the little 4-lb. snook he had just caught on live shrimp while fishing on the northwest side of the little Mosquito Bridge just east of the Frank Wacha Bridge on the Jensen Causeway. (Dick Lundin photo)

MINISCULE CATCH. Dr. Rod Rodkinsin of Sandpiper Bay wasn't too anxious to be photographed with this tiny speckled perch (black crappie?, but finally agreed to let folks see what a little five-inch speck looks like, before returning it to the waters of Lake Marian just west of Kenansvile and U.S. 441. Steel shot restrictions relaxed

By Dick Lundin

Because of a reported steel shot shortage for 16-gauge and 20-gauge shotguns, duck hunters using either gauge will not be required to use steel shot in Florida for the 1980-81 waterfowl season that began on Wednesday of this week. (Nov. 26).

Only hunters using 12-gauge weapons will be required to use steel shot this hunting season, according to Col. Robert M. Brantly, executive director of the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

"We have received reports from all areas across the state that 20-gauge shells are not generally available for waterfowl hunters. This scarcity is apparently due to the reluctance or inability of some ammunition manufacturers to produce the needed shells and possible also because of the uncertainty or lack of knowledge among retailers on quantities of steel shot to stock.

"Rather than penalize our hunters because of a problem with the ammunition manufacturers and retail outlets, we have elected to relax the restrictions," Brantly said.

Thus, this year, steel shot will be required and the law enforced, only for 12-gauge in all steel shot areas of the state. Next year, however, Brantly emphasized, the requirement for steel shot in all gauges will most likely be enforced.

Areas of the state in which steel shot will be required in 12-gauge weapons include that portion of Brevard County east of I-95; Osceola, Broward, Dade and Glades Counties; Leon County (exclusive of Lake Talquin and the Ochlockonee River); Lake Miccosukee in Leon and Jefferson Counties, and Orange Lake and Lochloosa Lake in Alachua County.

The first phase of the duck and coot season ends Dec. 7. The second phase begins Dec. 13 and ends Jan. 19. Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

Spoiler role left for Dolphins

BY DICK LUNDIN

A FIELD GOAL in overtime sounded the death knell to the 1980 playoff hopes of the Miami Dolphins. Now, all but mathematically eliminated from both the AFC East championship and the race for the two AFC Wild Card spots, the Dolphins can gain a measured satisfaction as spoilers by upsetting Pittsburgh or New England (or both) in their next two games.

They travel up to Three Rivers next Sunday for a 1 p.m. kickoff against the Pittsburgh Steelers reeling from a disappointing 38-13 loss to the AFC East Division leading Buffalo Bills. Injuries and age have brought this Pittsburgh team back to the pack, but the Steelers are still defending Super Bowl champions and will be hard to beat in Three Rivers Sunday.

The next game for Miami is against the Patriots in the Orange Bowl. It will be a Monday night affair starting at 9 p.m. New England hasn't won in the Bowl in its last 10 visits but the Patriots will be going all out to close the one game gap that separates them from the division leading Bills. It's hard to predict a Miami win against this talented bunch from up East, but there's no use crying over spilt milk. If young David Woodley just hadn't thrown that catastrophic interception in overtime Miami had carried the fight to a better team all night long and the Dolphin ship went down gallantly with all guns firing and the scoreboard at the east end of the Orange Bowl stadium nonstop, San Diego 27, Miami - 24.

Miami was a knocked to make the playoffs anyway. The San Diego loss just cleared the air a little sooner, that's all. Still, as the Judge sadly reminisced in Maud Muller: "For of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.' Miami just might have made those coveted playoffs if Woodley hadn't thrown the interception, George Roberts had punted, and Don Fouts had to face Miami's determined defense again deep in his own territory.

There was another disappointment for the Miami coaching staff in the loss of fullback Terry Robiskie for the rest of the season. Terry had done a yeoman job at fullback and it remains to be seen if Woodie Bennett, a New York Jet castoff, can fill the bill for what remains of the 1980 season -- four more games.

THE DOLPHINS NEED a none-crushing runback who can get them that final yard in goal line situations, and the Robiskie's, Bennett's and Steve Howell's don't seem to be quite the answer. It looks like Miami will have to use its No. 1 or 2 draft choices next April to select a 225 to 235-lb fullback capable of getting the job done most of the time in short yardage situations.

With the de-activation of quarterback Bob Griese for 1980, Coach Don Shula is obviously going with Woodley as his quarterback. By the time 1981 rolls around, young David should be just about ready to lead the Dolphins back to the promised land. Forgetting about that disastrous interception, he's done far more than could ever have been expected from a player who wasn't even the No. 1 quarterback at LSU in 1979.

Sunday's game with Pittsburgh will be on channels 5-7, so tune in to watch two ball clubs rebounding from losses that were bitter to both. Thursday, you can watch Chicago at Detroit on Channel 34 and Seattle at Dallas on 5 and 7. Sunday, also, you'll get to watch Tampa Bay at Green Bay at 2 p.m. on 34. Those Bucs, forlorn playoff contenders now, are in the spoiler role too, so watch out, Bart Starr!

Davidson, Rombach win event

Playing one of his finest in [illegible] rounds of the season, Homer Davidson recorded a 78 tally to pace his playing partner Ed Rombach for a [illegible] victory in the Partner's Both Ri[illegible] Stableford event staged by the Sandpiper linen golfers Thursday. That combo posted 82 points to [illegible] off with the top award of the day.

Only two shots off the winner's pace was the team of Dr. Fred Carter and Bob Downing with a tally of 80 while the Jack Early-John Bowroom team finished at 79 with Early the pacemaker posting a 79.

Three teams finished deadlocked at the 76 point figure and included Wa LaCour with Charley Schwarz, Jo Denton and Ed Spooner, Harry Hendron and Roy Hannum. The latter marked Hendron's return to action following a seige of illness.

Defending club champion Dick Whiting and Col. Don McConnell led a parage of swingers who managed into the "Break Eighty" circle as each carded like scores of 76 followed by Tom Chapman, Sam Dewhirst, and Bill Jarrard at 78 with Early and George Garabeaun under the line with 79's.

There will be no activity for association members Thursday because of the Thanksgiving holiday and play will resume Thursday Dec 4 in an individual Low Net and Low Gross affair with players competing in their own handicap flights.

Meanwhile slates are being studied for the annual meeting Dec 11 when election of officers to serve during the ensuing year will be presented following the annual Shot Gun Scramble to be played on the same date starting at 8:30 and the annual dinner in the Big Hall following play.

Jai-Alai to start Jan. 2

Officials at Fort Pierce Jai-Alai announce the 1981 Jai Alai season will begin January 2. The opening, scheduled for the night after New Year's Day, is early for the fronton which, in the last few years, has begun its seasons in February or March.

As in the past, the fronton will divide its season into winter and summer sessions. The winter meet will run from Jan. 2 through March 28. The summer session will begin May 29 and continue through Labor Day, Sept. 7.

For the first time, Monday matinees are being added to the fronton's schedule during the winter period. Afternoon performances will be held each Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. The summer meet will feature Saturday matinees only. The evening schedule for the entire season will feature, as in the past, performances every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

Gerald Coakley, vice president and general manager of Fort Pierce Jai Alai explained that while the number of performances remain the same as before, since they are governed by state law, date changes were made to give jai-alai customers added convenience.

Fronton officials report they were urged by winter residents to move the playing schedule to January. Visitors claimed that because they returned north shortly after the jai alai season began, their appetite for the world's fastest sport would be whetted and they would leave the area wishing they could see more games.

"This year with the earlier start and the additional Monday matinees," said Coakley, "winter visitors can enjoy more of what we feel is the area's number one tourist attraction."

Starting in 1981, senior citizens will be given free admission to all Fort Pierce Jai-Alai matinees and not just on Wednesdays as in the past. Persons 60 years and older will be given this special privilege.

While the fronton has been closed, improvements are being made to the lounge on the south side of the building. Physical improvements are constantly being made to the fronton to maintain its reputation as one of the most comfortable and convenient jai-alai frontons.

Harrison wins pro-am with a 72 at Sandpiper

Making his starting time right on deadline Bruce Harrison Sandpiper Bay assistant pro, fashioned a round of two-under par 70 to waltz off with first place and $150 among the 30 pros who participated in the Bay's Pro Am event staged on the 18 hole Saints course Friday.

Four man teams headed by pros Jerry Knebels of Mariner Sands and Jim Buchanan of Rochester, N.Y. divided the pro-am spoils as each team carded lug best ball scores of 19 under par of 125. Included on the top combos were Lou Mariano, Moose Bergonzi, Frank Volgistadt, Ken Snow, Harry Mingins and Bill Hanna.

The win marked Harrison's sixth of the season and as he puts it, "The purse money help put bread on the table for my five infants." Sharing second place with one under 71's were last weeks winner Terry Beardsley and Stuart's Sandy Scharlau. Bob Below and Jim Tuller of Eastpointe shared the next slot with par 70's while Jay Pyle of Crane Creek and Lou Thelk of Vero Beach were in-the-money with 73's.

Taking third place in pro-am segment was the team of Pro Dan Gower and amateurs Gary Wirth, Al Galanti and Prof Lunceford of IRCC.

Five teams were deadlocked for the next money slot at 17 under par 127 with pros Jay Pyle, Laine Rinker, Beardsley, Jim Tuller and Todd Ramish. Amateurs included Alan Becker, Heary Schippers, Mike Douglas, Mike Ebitono, "Kook" Hurley, Tom Magno, Lou Papadero, Ken Bowers, Gordon Pusteeter, Jay Moore, Bernie Madyda, Howard Chase, Dutch King, Scotchy Scotchell and Bob Hobson.

Entries are now being accepted for the next Pro Am at Sandpiper Dec. 5.

Dave Lambert is athlete of week

Dave Lambert, senior defensive end for Martin County High School, led the Tiger team in nine unassisted tackles last week to win honor as Ft. Pierce Jai Alai's athlete of the week.

Lambert's effort helped the Tigers win their last game of the season against Twin Lakes, 17-8.

The competition honors an athlete each week in four counties. Each month one athlete is selected as athlete of the month. At the end of the school year an athlete of the year is named and will receive a trophy and a $500 scholarship from Ft. Pierce Jai Alai.

LET'S GO—It's tee-off time for the Sixth Annual PSL Community Center Golf Tournament, played last Thursday on the Saints and Sinners Courses at Sandpiper Bay. Tennis

BY TOM FALKENBURG
Director of Tennis — Indian River Plantation

Last Saturday morning the weather was perfect for tennis, and 34 men in two groups started the round robin. On the first four courts, were Butler & Garramone, Jacbego & Rowe,Isam & Haynes, Campbell & Robison. Mears & McCaskill Sr., Thurlow & Jordon, Johnson & McIver, and St. Onge & Gibson. Don St. Onge and Ed Gibson won with 22 games, with Tom Thurlow and Bud Jordon a close second with 19 games.

In the other group were P. Smith & Mandle, Harper & Lassauer, McCarthy & Bovie, Saz & Davies, Stanslaw & Tarolina, Burns & Hawkins, Duvall & Schad, Trimper & McCaskill Jr., and Henderson & McBride. Brian Harper and Geoffry Lassauer came in first with 23 games and right on there tail with 22 games was Mike McBride and Scott Henderson.

A couple of months ago I attended the seventh straight Tennis Industry Magazine annual racket testing. The array of new rackets is almost mind boggling. If that's not enough, they string two identical rackets, one with nylon and one with gut. The 30 odd pros hit for about five minutes with one, then switch to the other string. After both rackets have been tested for grip size, balance, torque, vibration, off center hits, volley, serve and comment on the sweet spot. All this information is taken down on tape recorders and later transcribed for publication in the November Tennis Industry magazine. This goes on for about three hours and some 25 rackets later you break for lunch.

After lunch, there is a musical chair type of movement around 12 tables, each table has a different racket, with the factory representative for that racket ready and willing to answer any and all questions about their product. Maybe after I attend seven more racket seminars I may understand why so many companies make so many unnecessary similar bats. When we see something new looking, we are anxious to try them out under field conditions. But then its sometimes very boring when it plays like several other brands and has no real reason for anyone wanting to change rackets.

A pro shop could carry a small selection of all the new rackets that have hit the market in the last seven years, and tie up over $100,000.00. The lead page of the magazine says it all, The Great Racket Decision 1980. Rackets are made of many kinds of wood, many kinds of fiberglass, graphite, boronite and other space age products. Then you have the composites, a mixture of several or many components.

Here is a list of the ones I tested, and some comments. AMF Graphite Edge, nice racket, but plays like several others already on the market. Dunlop Black Max, same as above. Fila Composite, gaudy looking, over priced, and in my opinion unnecessary, but will probably sell well because of the name. Fischer Stan Smith Superform,, novelty. Le Coq Sportif TXF Concept 2, name is too long, three prongs make it very different looking, I saw a wood racket 35 years ago that looked the same, actually plays very well. Prince Woodie, this is an oversized wood and graphite racket and can be strung several ways to make it play many different ways. Voltl Servo Pro, very nice racket, but again, not that different. Spalding Centurion, same. Snauwaert John Newcombe Borcuite 11, good racket but too many like it. Rossignol F300, same. WilsonProto-type, different looking and a little different playing. Yamaha YPG 50, head is too small, with everyone else going for big or bigger.

In tennis, unlike many other sports, the size, weight and shape of a tennis racket is not regulated. The type of string, nylon, or gut, and there are hundreds of variays, can and will make a big difference in any racket you select. The tension also makes a marked difference.

My advice is to get several demonstrators, even six or seven, and hit on a ball machine for thirty minutes trying them all. If there is not a lot of difference between yours and the new one, keep your old one, restring and regrip it and you will probably feel like you have a new racket.

And remember this, many pros are playing with a racket they really don't like, but are being paid many thousands to play with it. Borg receives one million dollars a year to play with the Donnay and then all his rackets are especially made with extra laminations to withstand the 80 pound tension. Try it, you might like it.

IRCC Itinerary

The holiday season has begun, and Indian River Community College has a gift for you: a calendar full of events that will make your holidays even busier, cheerier, and more spirited. A free production of "Hello, Dolly," a Santa, We're Ready workshop, a fashion show, athletic events, and IRCC Spirit Week are all coming up in the next few weeks, not to mention the fact that Spring Term at IRCC starts as soon as the holidays end. A whole new series of college credit and continuing education classes begin January 7, and some of those classes are already filling up. Why not give yourself a great Christmas present, and enroll for some classes at IRCC now? It will surely be a gift enjoyed and used long after the holidays end.

SANTA, WE'RE READY!

The Home Economics Department at IRCC is sponsoring an intensive two-day workshop focusing on home decoration and food ideas for the holidays ... plus a Santa's sackful of quick and easy gift ideas that you can make yourself. To be held in Room E-207 on December 5 from 1 to 5 p.m. and on December 6 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., the workshop will be packed full of informative demonstrations, guest speakers, ideas, and free bonuses, such as original patterns that can be copied in class. Following a microwave cooking demonstration Saturday, a light lunch will be available to the workshop participants at a minimal fee intended just to cover the cost of the food served. The registration fee for this workshop is only $5, and students may choose to attend all of the activities planned or only ones of particular interest to them. For more information, call the IRCC Home Ec. Dept., ext. 286.

DIGITAL ELECTRONICS OFFERED

A basic course in digital electronics is being offered for the first time at IRCC this Spring. Although it is a part of the general electronics program at the college, Digital Circuits is also the initial class offered in a new digital electronics option of the program. Digital Circuits will cover Gates, integrated circuits used in logic devices, flip-flops and latches, clocks and Gate interfacing, number system and codes, counters, shift registers, and computer arithmetic.

This course will serve as a prerequisite to another class now being planned that will cover microprocessors and minicomputers. Those interested in enrolling in Digital Circuits should have already completed courses in basic DC and AC Circuits and Electronic Devices.

For more details or to register for the course, call Guidance at the main campus or any of the branch campuses. The first class will meet Wednesday, Jan. 7, at 5:30 p.m. in Room E-118 on the main campus.

FASHIONS ON FANTASY ISLAND

The IRCC Cultural Exchange Club will hold a fashion show with the theme, "Fashions on Fantasy Island," on December 6 at 8 p.m. in the St. Lucie Room of the Koblegard Student Union. Models of many different shapes and sizes will show the latest in fashions against a backdrop of tropical scenery.

Tickets cost only $1, and will be available at the door on the evening of the show. Come to IRCC to see a fantasy fulfilled.

BASKETBALL AT HOME

Three exciting nights of basketball are coming up this week in the IRCC area as the Pioneer women's team competes in the IRCC tournament on November 28 and 29 at 6 and 8 p.m. And then on December 2, the men's team takes on Seminole Community College at 7:30 p.m. Show your support for the Pioneers!

DON'T FORGET

There are still a few tickets left for the IRCC Music Department's production of "Hello, Dolly." Although there is no charge for the tickets, no one will be admitted to see the play without one. Show-time is 8 p.m. on December 1, 2, and 3 at the McAlpin Fine Arts Center on the main campus. For ticket information, call the IRCC box office, 465-5533. Since the tickets are almost gone, those interested are advised to call the box office before coming to the college to pick up tickets.

Spoiler role left for Dolphins

BY DICK LUNDIN

A FIELD GOAL in overtime sounded the death knell to the 1980 playoff hopes of the Miami Dolphins Now, all but mathematically eliminated from both the AFC East championship and the race for the two AFC Wild Card spots the Dolphins can gain a measure of satisfaction as spoilers by upsetting Pittsburgh or New England (or both) in their next two games

They travel up to Three Rivers next Sunday for a 1 p m kickoff against the Pittsburgh Steelers reeling from a disappointing 38-13 loss to the AFC East Division leading Buffalo Bills Injuries and age have brought the Pittsburgh team back to the pack, but the Steelers are still defending Super Bowl champions and will be hard to beat in Three Rivers Sunday

The next game for Miami is against the Patriots in the Orange Bowl It will be a Monday night affair starting at 8 p m New England hasn't won in the Bowl in its last 10 visits but the Patriots will be going all out to close the one game gap that separates them from the division-leading Bills It's hard to predict a Miami win against this talented bunch from up East, but some way, some how the Dolphins always manage to rise to the occasion whenever New England comes to town.

I'd have to guess that Miami will lose a close one to the Steelers (unless Bradshaw can't play), and will manage to eke out a soul-satisfying victory over New England Dec 8

there's no use "crying over spilt milk" If young David Woodley just hadn't thrown that catastrophic interception in overtime Miami had carried the fight to a better team all night long and the Dolphin ship went down gallantly with all guns firing and the scoreboard at the east end of the Orange Bowl blinked somberly, San Diego 27, Miami 24

Miami was a longshot to make the playoffs anyway The San Diego loss just cheated the air a little sooner, that's all, Still, as the Judge sadly reminisced in Maud Muller: "For of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.' Miami just might have made those coveted playoffs if Woodley hadn't thrown the interception, George Roberts had passed, and Don Fouts had to face Miami's determined defense again deep in his own territory

There was another consternation for the Miami coaching staff in the loss of fullback Terry Robiskie for the rest of the season Terry had done a yeoman job at fullback and it remains to be seen if Woodie Bennett, a New York Jet castoff, can fill the bill for what remains of the 1980 season—four more games

THE DOLPHINS NEED a bone-crushing ruffian who can get them that final yard in goal line situations, and the Robiskie's, Bennett's and Steve Howell's don't seem to be quite the answer It looks like Miami will have to use its No 1 or 2 draft choices next April to select a 225 to 235-lb fullback capable of getting the job done most of the time in short yardage situations

With the de-activation of quarterback Bob Griese for 1980, Coach Don Shula is obviously going with Woodley as his quarterback By the time 1981 rolls around, young Dave should be just about ready to lead the Dolphins back to the promised land Forgetting about that disastrous interception, he's done far more than could ever have hope expected from a player who wasn't even the No 1 quarterback at LSU in 1978

Sunday's game with Pittsburgh will be on channels 5-7, so tune in to watch two ball clubs renouncing from losses that were bitter to both Thursday, you can watch Chicago at Detroit on Channel 34 and Seattle at Dallas on 5 and 7 Sunday, also, you'll get to watch Tampa Bay at Green Bay at 2 p.m. on 34 Those Bucs, forlorn playoff contenders now, are in the spoiler role too, so watch out, Bart Starr!

GETTING READY—It was the gathering of the golfing clan last Thursday morning near the first tee of the Sinners Course at Sandpiper Bay where 160 men golfers were enjoying coffee and danish (courtesy of host Bill Pullen) preparatory to teeing off in a shotgun tournament. That golfer sauntering toward his cart is Port St. Lucie's Neal Shaffer. The occasion was the Sixth Annual Port St. Lucie Community Center Golf Tournament. (Dick Lundin photo)

Jai-Alai to start Jan. 2

Officials at Fort Pierce Jai Alai announce the 1981 Jai-Alai season will begin January 2. The opening, scheduled for the night after New Year's Day, is early for the fronton which, in the last few years, has begun its season in February or March.

As in the past, the fronton will divide its season into winter and summer sessions. The winter meet will run from Jan. 2 through March 28. The summer session will begin May 29 and continue through Labor Day, Sept. 7.

For the first time, Monday matinees are being added to the fronton's schedule during the winter period. Afternoon performances will be held each Monday, Wednesday and Saturday. The summer meet will feature Saturday matinees only. The evening schedule for the entire season will feature, as in the past, performances every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday.

Gerald Coakley, vice president and general manager of Fort Pierce Jai Alai explained that while the number of performances remain the same as before since they are governed by state law, date changes were made to give jai-alai customers added convenience.

Fronton officials report they were urged by winter residents to move the playing schedule to January. Visitors claimed that because they returned north shortly after the jai alai season began, their appetite for the world's fastest sport would be whetted and they would leave the area wishing they could see more games.

"This year with the earlier start and the additional Monday matinees," said Coakley, "winter visitors can enjoy more of what we feel is the area's number one tourist attraction."

Starting in 1981, senior citizens will be given free admission to all Fort Pierce Jai Alai matinees and not just on Wednesdays as in the past. Persons 60 years and older will be given this special privilege.

While the fronton has been closed, improvements are being made to the lounge on the south side of the building. Physical improvements are constantly being made to the fronton to maintain its reputation as one of the most comfortable and convenient jai-alai frontons.

Davidson, Rombach win event

Playing one of the lowest rounds of the season, Homer Davidson recorded a 78 tally to pace his partner Ed Rombach for a 2-stroke victory in the Partner's Best Ball Stableford event staged by the handicapper men golfers Tuesday That combo posted 82 points to ward off with the top award of the day.

Only two shots off the winner's pace was the team of Dr. Fred Carter and Bob Downing with a tally of 80 while the Jack Early-John Bowersox team finished at 79 with Early the pacesmaker posting a 79.

Three teams finished deadlocked at the 78 point figure and included the LaCour with Charley Schwarz, Bud Denton, and Ed Spooner, Harry Hendrixel and Roy Hanson. The other marked Hendrixel's return to action following a siege of illness.

Defending club champion Dick Whiting and Col. Don McConnell led a parage of swingers who managed with the "Break Eighty" circle as each carded 88s scores of 78 followed by Tom Chapman, Sam Deodatus, and Bill Jarrard, at 78 with Early and George Garabedian under the line with 79's.

There will be no activity for association members Thursday because of the Thanksgiving holiday but play will resume Thursday Dec. 4 in an Individual Low Net and Low Gross affair with players competing in their own handicap flights.

Meanwhile slates are being studied for the annual meeting Dec. 11 when election of officers to serve during the ensuing year will be presented following the annual Shot Gun Scramble to be played on the same date starting at 8:30 and the annual dinner in the Big Hall following play.

Harrison wins pro-am with a 72 at Sandpiper

Making his starting time right on deadline, Bruce Harrison, Sandpaper Bay assistant pro, fashioned a round of two-under par 70 to waltz off with first place and $150 among the 30 pros who participated in the Bay's Pro Am event staged on the 18 hole Saints course Friday.

Four man teams headed by pros Jerry Knebels of Mariner Sands and Jim Buchanan of Rochester, N.Y. divided the pro-am spoils as each team carded two best ball scores of 19 under par of 125. Included on the top combos were Lou Mariano, Moose Bergonzi, Frank Volgstadt, Ken Snow, Harry Minjino and Bill Hanna.

The win marked Harrison's sixth of the season and as he puts it, "The purse money help put bread on the table for my five indians." Sharing second place with one under 71's were last weeks winner Terry Beardsley and Stuart's Sandy Schariau. Bob Below and Jim Tuller of Eastpointe shared the next slot with par 70 a while Jay Pyle of Crane Creek and Lou Theik of Vero Beach were in the money with 73's.

Taking third place in pro-am segment was the team of Pro Dan Gower and amateurs Gary Wirth, Al Galanti and Prof Lanceford of IRCC.

Five teams were deadlocked for the next money slot at 17 under par 127 with pros Jay Pyle, Laine Rinker, Beardsley, Jim Tuller and Todd Kanish. Amateurs included Alan Becker, Henry Schippers, Mike Douglas, Mike Ebitone, "Kook" Hurley, Tom Magno, Lou Papaidero, Reg Bowers, Gordon Postweiler, Jay Moore, Bernie Maycock, Howard Chase, Dutch King, Scotchy Scotchell and Bob Hobson.

Entries are now being accepted for the next Pro Am at Sandpiper Dec. 5.

Dave Lambert is athlete of week

Dave Lambert, senior defensive end for Martin County High School, led the Tiger team in nine unassisted tackles last week to win honor as Ft Pierce Jai Alai's athlete of the week.

Lambert's effort helped the Tigers win their last game of the season against Twin Lakes, 12-8.

The competition honors an athlete each week in four counties. Each month one athlete is selected as athlete of the month. At the end of the school year an athlete of the year is named and will receive a trophy and a $500 scholarship from Ft. Pierce Jai Alai.

LET'S GO—It's tee-off time for the Sixth Annual PSL Community Center Golf Tournament, played last Thursday on the Saints and Sinners Courses at Sandpiper Bay. This scene is at the ninth hole of the Sinners where two foursomes are waiting for the third to tee off in the shotgun event.

Tennis

BY TOM FALKENBURG
Director of Tennis, Indian River Plantation

Last Saturday morning the weather was perfect for tennis, and 34 men in two groups started the round robin On the first four courts, were Butler & Garramone, Jachgan & Rowe,ham & Haynes, Campbell & Robson, Mears & McCaskill Sr., Thurlow & Jordon, Johnson & McIver, and St Onge & Gibson Don St Onge and Ed Gibson won with 22 games, with Tom Thurlow and Bud Jordon a close second with 18 games.

In the other group were P Smith & Abadie, Harper & Lussauer, McCarthy & Bovie, Sax & Davies, Stanslaw & Taroline, Burns & Hawkins, Duvall & Schad, Tempter & McCaskill Jr., and Henderson & McBride. Brian Harper and Geoffry Lussauer came in first with 23 games and right on there tail with 22 games was Mike McBride and Scott Henderson.

A couple of months ago I attended the seventh straight Tennis Industry Magazine annual racket testing. The array of new rackets is almost mind boggling. If thats not enough, they string two identical rackets, one with nylon and one with gut. The 30 odd pros bit for about five minutes with one, then switch to the other string. After both rackets have been tested for grip size, balance, torque, vibration, off center hits, volley, serve and comment on the sweet spot. All this information is taken down on tape recorders and later transcribed for publication in the November Tennis Industry magazine. This goes on for about three hours and some 25 rackets later, you break for lunch.

After lunch, there is a musical chair type of movement around 12 tables, each table has a different racket, with the factory representative for that racket ready and willing to answer any and all questions about their product. Maybe after I attend seven more racket seminars I may understand why so many companies make so many unnecessary similar bats. When we see something new looking, we are anxious to try them out under field conditions. But then its sometimes very boring when it plays like several other brands and has no real reason for anyone wanting to change rackets.

A pro shop could carry a small selection of all the new rackets that have hit the market in the last seven years, and tie up over $100,000.00. The lead page of the magazine says it all, The Great Racket Desires 1980. Rackets are made of many kinds of wood, many kinds of fiberglass, graphite, boronite and other space age products. Then you have the composites, a mixture of several or many components.

Here is a list of the ones I tested, and some comments. AMF Graphite Edge, nice racket, but plays like several others already on the market. Dunlop Black Max, same as above. Fila Composite, gaudy looking, over priced, and in my opinion unnecessary, but will probably sell well because of the name. Fischer Blue Smith Superform, novelty. La Coq Sportif TXF Concept 3, name is too long, three prongs make it very different looking, I saw a wood racket 35 years ago that looked the same, actually plays very well. Prince Woodie, this is an oversized wood and graphite racket and can be strung several ways to make it play many different ways. Voilk Serve Pro, very nice racket, but again, not that different. Spalding Centurion, same. Snauwaert John Newcombe Boronite 11, good racket but too many like it. Rossignol F200, same. Wilson Proto-type, different looking and a little different playing. Yamaha YPG 50, head is too small, with everyone else going for big or bigger.

In tennis, unlike many other sports, the size, weight and shape of a tennis racket is not regulated. The type of string, nylon, or gut, and there are hundreds of varieties, can and will make a big difference in any racket you select. The tension also makes a marked difference.

My advice is to get several demonstrators, even six or seven, and hit on a ball machine for thirty minutes trying them all. If there is not a lot of difference between yours and the new one, keep your old one, restring and regrip it and you will probably feel like you have a new racket.

And remember this, many pros are playing with a racket they really don't like, but are being paid many thousands to play with it. Borg receives one million dollars a year to play with the Donnay and then all his rackets are especially made with extra laminations to withstand the 80 pound tension. Try it, you might like it.

IRCC Itinerary

The holiday season has begun, and Indian River Community College has a gift for you — a calendar full of events that will make your holidays even busier, chewier, and more spirited. A free production of "Hello, Dolly," a Santa, We're Ready workshop, a fashion show, athletic events, and IRCC Spirit Week are all coming up in the next few weeks, not to mention the fact that Spring Term at IRCC starts as soon as the holidays end. A whole new series of college credit and continuing education classes begin January 7, and some of those classes are already filling up. Why not give yourself a great Christmas present, and enroll for some classes at IRCC now? It will surely be a gift enjoyed and used long after the holidays end.

SANTA, WE'RE READY!

The Home Economics Department at IRCC is sponsoring an intensive two-day workshop focusing on home decoration and food ideas for the holidays ... plus a Santa's sackful of quick and easy gift ideas that you can make yourself. To be held in Room E-207 on December 5 from 1 to 5 p.m. and on December 6 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., the workshop will be packed full of informative demonstrations, guest speakers, ideas, and free bonuses, such as original patterns that can be copied in class. Following a microwave cooking demonstration Saturday, a light lunch will be available to the workshop participants at a minimal fee intended just to cover the cost of the food served. The registration fee for this workshop is only $5, and students may choose to attend all of the activities planned or only ones of particular interest to them. For more information, call the IRCC Home Ec. Dept., ext. 288.

DIGITAL ELECTRONICS OFFERED

A basic course in digital electronics is being offered for the first time at IRCC this Spring. Although it is a part of the general electronics program at the college, Digital Circuits is also the initial class offered in a new digital electronics option of the program. Digital Circuits will cover Gates, integrated circuits used in logic devices, flip flops and latches, clocks and Gate interfacing, number system and codes, counters, shift registers, and computer arithmetic.

This course will serve as a prerequisite to another class now being planned that will cover microprocessors and minicomputers. Those interested in enrolling in Digital Circuits should have already completed courses in basic DC and AC Circuits and Electronic Devices.

For more details or to register for the course, call Guidance at the main campus or any of the branch campuses. The first class will meet Wednesday, Jan. 7, at 5:30 p.m. in Room E-118 on the main campus.

FASHIONS ON FANTASY ISLAND

The IRCC Cultural Exchange Club will hold a fashion show with the theme, "Fashions on Fantasy Island," on December 6 at 8 p.m. in the Ila Lucas Room of the Kalbfleisch Student Union. Models of many different shapes and sizes will show the latest in fashions against a backdrop of tropical scenery.

Tickets cost only $1, and will be available at the door on the evening of the show. Come to IRCC to see a fantasy fashion!

BASKETBALL AT HOME

Three exciting nights of basketball are heating up this week in the IRCC gym, as the Pioneer women's team competes in the IRCC tournament on November 28 and 29 at 6 and 8 p.m. And then on December 2, the men's team takes on Seminole Community College at 7:30 p.m. Show your support for the Pioneers!

DON'T FORGET

There are still a few tickets left for the IRCC Music Department's production of "Hello, Dolly." Although there is no charge for the tickets, no one will be admitted to see the play without one. Show time is 8 p.m. on December 1, 2, and 3 at the McAlpin Fine Arts Center on the main campus. For ticket information, call the IRCC box office, 465-5533. Since the tickets are almost gone, those interested are advised to call the box office before coming to the college to pick up tickets.

B-1 ZONING
Located close to one of Stuart's major intersections. This nearly one and one-third acre parcel of land has many possibilities. And presently has a commercial building with over 3000 sq. ft. of floor space — plus a beautifully decorated 2 bedroom, 2 bath home and a 1 bedroom, 1 bath home. Ideal for an owner who wants an elegant home to live in and have his business in a portion, or in all, of the commercial building — or the homes could be remodeled and a strip store or other commercial operation established. All buildings are in excellent condition with the whole area being beautifully landscaped. One of Stuart's fastest growing areas which will surely continue to be most desirable. $550,000. List No. 110. Please call Joseph J. Sarzano, Broker-Salesman, for an appointment to receive further details. Aft. Hrs 283-0888

DOT funds are budgeted now through 1988 and unless there is additional revenue before then, Hall says he is limited to agreeing that certain improvements may be needed but that they can't be undertaken for lack of money.

The causeway traffic count was instigated in early November by a phone call from The Mirror to the DOT traffic operations center. Records there showed that the last count was taken in October 1979 and another count was now warranted.

No previous traffic counts had included weekends, however, and DOT agreed to extend the usual weekday machine count to include a weekend, at the Mirror's suggestion.

According to Hall, the amount of weekend traffic was not that much greater than weekday traffic, during the recent count.

Earlier a DOT engineer had said that while previous counts showed heavy traffic occurred for short periods in the mornings and afternoons, it was not sufficiently heavy over an eight-hour period to require signal lights.

If the county or any other group or individual is willing to pay for the traffic lights, DOT approval would still be needed, Hall said, and another count would be taken.

Haynes to ask for county aid

Commissioner Alex Haynes says he will investigate the county's ability to install signal lights at the A1A and Indian River Drive junctions with the Jensen Beach Causeway.

Notified of the Department of Transportation findings that the lights are justified by the amount of traffic but that DOT has no funds available, Haynes said, "I'm certainly going to bring this up to the commission."

Haynes said he is not certain, however, that the county can intervene. "We know we've got a problem but we're looking at a combination of factors. Both highways are state roads but we'd be spending county money."

He added, "I am going to bring this up, though. If the traffic was heavy then it will be even more so next month."

NOT AGAIN THIS YEAR say most Jensen Beach service station managers about last winter's gasoline shortages that had motorists lined up for blocks and dealers curtailing sales to a few hours a day. (Mirror file photo)

Gas shortage unlikely?

BY AILSA DEWING

While not all Jensen Beach service station operators agree, some predict that last winter's gasoline shortages, which had motorists lined up for blocks for fill-ups and stations pumping only during limited hours, will not be repeated this year.

One reason could be that more gas will be available in Martin County this winter because the federal Department of Energy has raised the dealers' allocations by 8.5 percent in response to a request from William F. O'Brien, director of the county's Disaster Preparedness Department.

The increased gas to dealers, however, is only a significant amount, one station operator pointed out, if it is based on an allocation of at least 100,000 gallons a month. And because the allocation base figure is determined by a station's sales in 1977-78, the increase might still not meet 1980-81 demands.

But at least two dealers say they see no gas shortage ahead this winter because sales are already below normal.

George Cole, owner of Riverview Gulf Station on Indian River Drive, attributes the fall-off in gas sales to the increasing number of compact cars, higher gas prices and fewer tourists arriving this season.

"Nobody sold their allocation this year," Cole says. Unless there's a shortage because of what's happening in the oil producing countries, Cole says he doesn't think a shortage will develop.

"The main thing is to keep the panic out of it," he said. Cole reports that he had to limit gas-pumping to 3½ hours a day during the worst of last winter's shortage and it "wiped him out."

There wasn't time to check under the hood, and service bays weren't operating because motorists filled their tanks and pulled out, he recalls. At the present time, Cole says there aren't enough customers to make it worth his staying open nights or Sundays.

Cole's opinion is echoed by Dale Engle of J&B Texaco on Indian River Drive. "I see no shortage at all this year," he says. Engle said he doesn't have any allotment — "I get all I want."

In examining O'Brien's application for additional gas for the county, DOE observed that "during the months of May through November, there is generally no shortage of supplies of motor gasoline in the county." However, DOE noted that tourist population during the winter increased by almost 17 percent between 1978 and 1979.

Consequently DOE increased Martin's allocation to dealers by 8.5 percent to be effective this month through next April.

The event will be co-sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce and FIT. This will be the 15th year that the art festival has been held.

The week will begin on March 1, with local churches being asked to have choirs and organists offer special music on the day to highlight the musical and vocal culture. On Monday, it is hoped that there could be a concert of barbershop quartets and Sweet Adelines. There would be a ballet recital on Tuesday night, an organ recital on Wednesday night, a variety show on Thursday night, a classical concert on Friday, a Bluegrass Festival on Saturday, and Saturday and Sunday, an expanded art show.

The weekend art show is being expanded to include paintings, crafts, and photography. The exhibits will be judged and prizes awarded for the first time.

The structured format will offer room for many events to be held throughout the area, according to Penick.

The Martin County Commission will be asked to proclaim the week "Festival of the Arts in Martin County."

The Martin County School Administration will be asked to encourage each elementary, middle and high school to hold arts and crafts shows that week, with the winning entries in each show being displayed at the weekend art show at FIT.

Local theatre groups will be asked to perform in their own settings that week to increase the opportunity of cultural exposure to all possible.

Penick plans to contact the newly-formed arts foundation of Martin County to colaborate in the planning, hoping that the festival will eventually become county-wide.

"I don't feel that we can try to do too much the first year. If we can organize this, and use it as the base for a future county-wide cooperative effort next year, I feel it would be better."

Christmas starts Friday

Christmas carolers will gather Friday afternoon at First Federal Savings to officially proclaim the start of the Yuletide season.

Among the carolers will be the Cherub and Youth choirs of Jensen Beach Community Church, according to Dan Krauer who is in charge of Friday night's program on behalf of the Chamber of Commerce. Other local choirs are also being invited to participate, he said.

The Christmas music will begin at 5 p.m. outside the building and will be moved into the Harry Hoke Room in case of bad weather.

The program is being organized by the CofC in conjunction with the Shop Jensen Beach First campaign. Cooperating merchants will extend their business hours Friday to 9 p.m. to accommodate shoppers.

Many stores will also extend their hours until 9 p.m. on Friday, Dec. 12, Thursday and Friday, Dec. 18 and 19, Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 22 and 23. Some merchants have indicated they will also be open Sunday, Dec. 21, from noon until 4 p.m. Most stores will close at 5 p.m. Christmas Eve.

Savannas need our help now

Residents of Martin and St. Lucie counties are being urged by conservationists and others desperately attempting to save the Savannas to contact Gov. Robert Graham, cabinet members and their aides before Dec. 10 in the hope of preserving the remaining 1,150 acres from urban development and destruction by vandalism.

With strong lobbying efforts underway in Dade and Broward counties in support of projects there, Martin County Commission Chairman Maggie Hurchalla said Tuesday, "We need all the letters we can get from residents here."

The urgency is dictated by a meeting scheduled Dec. 16, at which the governor and cabinet members will distribute some $30 million in conservation funds. Purchase of the remaining 1,150 acres of Savannas is ranked eleventh among the priorities for funding by the Conservation and Recreation Lands Selection Committee.

It is estimated that the remaining Savannas properties can be bought for about $3.3 million.

"There is a principle at stake here," affirms Commissioner Hurchalla, "Does the state finish what it starts?"

Hurchalla was referring to the fact that in 1977, the state allocated $9.6 million to purchase the Savannas wilderness. It spent $5 million on land purchases, assuring owners that the land would be used as a wilderness preserve, but the remaining $46 million was transferred by the Department of Natural Resources.

Because the lands purchased were not contiguous, they cannot be patrolled or maintained.

"If logic had anything to do with it, the Savannas would be in the top five," Hurchalla said, "But it's become a political football, too."

Should the state officials, meeting as trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, fail to provide funds for completing the purchase, it is not known what the outcome will be.

In a statement to the Martin County Conservation Alliance in October, Dr. Walter Stokes, chairman of its Savannas Committee, said, "Real estate development adjacent to the Savannas is progressing at a furious rate." He said that within the next ten years, the population will reach 150,000 within a ten-mile radius of the Savannas.

Also actively supporting efforts to save the Savannas is State Senator Charles Nergard of Ft. Pierce and the Treasure Coast Regional Planning Council.

On Dec. 10, cabinet member aides will meet to prepare the priority list for the Dec. 16 meeting. Letters or calls supporting the Savannas project should reach the governor before Dec. 10.

The Mirror urges its readers to add their support to saving the Savannas by writing or contacting the governor or by signing the coupon below and sending it to Gov. Graham before Dec. 10.

SANDPEBBLE CONDOMINIUM will occupy a 36-acre Point and include 242 luxury apartments within three main to river tract on Hutchinson Island south of Joe's four story buildings on the ocean and seven on the river.

Condo planned for 37-acre island tract

One of the largest and last tracts available for residential development on Hutchinson Island in Martin County has been purchased as the site for a 242 unit luxury condominium.

The property, located south of Joe's Point spans A1A, reaching from the Indian River to the ocean, and contains 37 acres. On it developers plan to construct a seven building four story complex to be called The Sandpebble.

The tract was acquired from Grossinger Properties by Zaremba Communities, Inc., and Outlook Development Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of First Federal of Broward.

Construction is expected to begin next March with pre-construction sales to start in January on the two bedroom units containing 1,030 feet to 1,475 square feet of floorspace.

The development will also include three 22 slip boat docks, five pools, a community center, three tennis courts, covered parking, security gate and a storage parking area for boat trailers and campers.

"The architecture will emphasize the plantation-style island atmosphere," said Lanny Kalik, Zaremba Communities of Florida president. Apartments will have an unobstructed view of either the ocean or the river.

David Richardson, senior vice president of Outlook Development, said he believes the tract is the largest undeveloped parcel left on the island.

The Sandpebble will be the eighth joint venture undertaken in the past two years by subsidiaries of First Federal of Broward, the second largest savings and loan association in the state and 18th largest in the country. This is the fifth joint venture with Zaremba.

Other Zaremba developments in Florida include Walden in northern Dade County, Hampton Beach Club in Pompano Beach, Plantation Place and Royal Palm in Plantation.
